Hope Is Lost For 7 Aboard Airship Down In Utah Wilds

Foreman of CCC Camp Finds Trees Broken; Storm Halts Hunt.

Earth Is Dug Up As If by Wheels

Occupants Dead From Crash or Exposure, Officials Believe.

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Dec. 16.—Two women and five men lost in a giant skyliner were given up for dead tonight just as one searcher came upon what might be tracks of the airship and a new storm broke over the snow encrusted mountains where the hunt was centered.

The blizzard covered much of a rugged region 25 miles from here in which the missing Western Air Express plane was believed to have been heard when it disappeared early yesterday.

There, amid precipitious crags and treacherous canyons, John I. Hess, CCC camp foreman, came upon what he thought was a clew to the airship. On a ridge near Alpine, Utah, Ness said he found "a place where a tree had been split" and further on "another tree was broken off."

"Seven hundred yards up the slope earth and shale had been dug up as if the wheels of a plane had struck," related Hess.

Forced Back for Help.

The spot was so isolated and so difficult to reach Hess was forced to retrace his steps and attempt to get to the scene from the other side of the ridge. Then the full force of the new storm developed.

Searchers said at Alpine, where rain and fog persisted, they could not follow up Hess' discovery before morning.

"You may say it is the general opinion of officials concerned that the plane occupants have perished," said A. E. Cahlan, Las Vegas, Nev., spokesman for the Western Air Express.

"If they have not died from the crash they have died from exposure," added Jimmy James, veteran pilot and a leader in the search.

The last radio message from the lost liner was received Tuesday at 3:27 a. m., mountain time. Pilot S. J. Samson then said the Los Angeles-to-Salt Lake City plane was over Milford, in southwestern Utah.

The search is centered around Alpine, over which villagers reported hearing a plane, apparently in trouble, in the rainy gloom before Tuesday's dawn. The hunt extended from Alpine to Alta, a mountain camp, and beyond north and east to Brighton, 8,000-foot high resort colony.

The missing seven included Gladys Witt, blonde stewardess and divorcee who recently figured in a cross-country romance in which she quit her job, left one man waiting at the altar, flew to meet another and returned to work without marrying either.

The two men between whom the stewardess, blonde and 26, sought spectacularly to decide commented soberly today on her plight.

Calls Her Dear Friend.

They were Erich K. Balzer, West Coast steamship executive, and Pilot James A. Roe, of the Transcontinental & Western Air at Kansas City.

Pilot Roe, on a flight eastward, said "she is a very dear friend, but there are no definite plans as to the future."

Balzer declared: "If we had been married she would be safe at home now. We had agreed that she should give up that kind of work."

He added:

"I don't love her any more—though I do hope the ship is found and she's all right."

Others in the missing plane besides Miss Witt were:

Pilot Samson, Co-pilot William Bogen and Mr. and Mrs. John Wolfe, of Chicago; H. W. Edwards, of Minneapolis, and C. Christopher, of Dwight, Ill., passengers.

Simplicity Will Form Keynote Of Inaugural Ceremony Jan. 20

Midshipmen, West Point Cadet Corps to Be in Line of March; Traditional Ball Abolished in Deference to Wishes of Roosevelt, Says Grayson.

Plans for the inaugural parade, January 20, that will be simpler and shorter, than in former years and, as an innovation, present the full midshipmen and cadet corps of Annapolis and West Point were announced yesterday by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson.

Following a White House conference with the President and Vice President and a talk later in the day with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Admiral Grayson, chairman of the inaugural committee, made the following developments public:

Commissioners George E. Allen, Dan I. Sultan and Hazen will be vice chairman of the committee, along with Malcolm S McConihe, Democratic national committeeman for the District, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Democratic national committeewoman for the District.

Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, will be grand marshal of the parade.

Participation in the parade from the Capitol up the historic Pennsylvania avenue route to the White House will be restricted to marching units of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps and governors of the states. There will be no political marching clubs or civic groups.

The procession will consume no more than two hours.

There will be no inaugural ball.

Follows Roosevelt Wishes.

After his hour and a half conference with President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner, Admiral Grayson told newspapermen the President was anxious that plans for the inaugural celebration as a whole be reduced to the simplest form, a greater parade, it was pointed out, would increase health hazards of spectators in the event of inclement weather.

Governors will be limited to three cars each, one for themselves and the other two for members of their parties, said the American Red Cross chairman, who, as he did in 1933, will have charge of arrangement for the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

A total of 37,000 seats will be erected between the Capitol and the White House. Twelve thousand of this number will be in the hands of concessionaires and the remainder including 14,000 grand stand seats at the Capitol will be disposed of by the Federal Government.

Admiral Grayson announced the appointment of Norman Baxter, formerly aide to the RFC chairman, Jesse Jones, as assistant chairman of the inaugural committee.

"In order to carry out President Roosevelt's wishes for a simple but colorful inauguration celebration," said Admiral Grayson, "I am going to ask many of the Washingtonians who served with me in 1933 to cooperate once more.

Co-operation Asked.

"I am going to ask this favor of them, not only because of the experience they gained at the time of President Roosevelt's first inauguration, but because there is such a limited time within which to complete plans. I am sure that the united effort of these men and women and the co-operation of the citizens of the District of Columbia will enable Washington to offer a celebration in which the country can join and which will be a credit to all concerned."

Offices of the committee, he declared, will be set up "within the next day or two." By then he expects to announce the membership of sub-committees.

Elimination of the traditional Inaugural Ball was effected not only in the interest of simplicity, but also, it is believed, because of the proximity of the President's birthday—January 30—when birthday balls will be held throughout the country to raise funds for children suffering from infantile paralysis.

Leaders Dash Hope Budget Near Balance

McReynolds Expects New Neutrality Legislation Covering Spain.

By Robert C. Albright.

The mirage of a balanced budget virtually vanished yesterday on Capitol Hill as returning leaders, awaiting a summons to confer at the White House on general legislation, abandoned all prospect of matching Federal outlay with income in the next fiscal year.

Preparing for the arduous work of the session, Speaker William B. Bankhead returned to Washington yesterday, took an impartial stand on the Democratic leadership fight, spoke hopefully of Government reorganization prospects, and said he hoped to have an early conference with the President.

But on the fiscal outlook, he said only:

"We hope to be able to reduce the appropriation bills and get within sight of a balanced budget within the next two years."

Representative James P. Buchanan, of Texas, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, would make no forecasts other than that he saw no chance of balancing the budget at the coming session, and only a fighting chance of balancing the Government's "ordinary" expenditures with revenues.

Hearings Under Way.

The first of the big appropriation bills — independent offices and Treasury-Postoffice — already have started through Buchanan's subcommittee mill, but the Texan was pessimistic over the possibility of substantially slashing budget estimates.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., appeared before the House Appropriations sub-committee yesterday in support of estimates said to reflect expanded departmental activity.

"Did you ask for more money?" Morgenthau was asked on leaving.

"Well, we're only human," he replied.

Speaker Bankhead said he was confident Buchanan will do everything possible to scale down expenditures, and Buchanan later told newsmen he would overlook no opportunity for "intelligent" cutting. But he added:

"I don't feel any too good about the outlook."

Relief Funds Nearly Gone.

Although the Texan declined to discuss details of estimates, it has been previously pointed out relief funds will be exhausted by the last of next month, and about $500,000,000 in deficiency will be needed; that social security act requirements have multiplied, and that growing needs of the regular departments and continued emergency agencies may swell appropriation estimates to near this year's level.

Legislative activity was apparent yesterday on a half-dozen fronts, but the specific lines of the Administration program remain to be shaped, and no bills designed for White House approval have been finally drawn.

Besides Speaker Bankhead, Democratic leaders who yesterday expressed a desire to confer with the President before positive moves on major legislation were Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Representative Sam D. McReynolds, of Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Doughton, who will return to North Carolina for a brief visit tonight, said he wants to discuss the tax outlook with both President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau when he gets back.

"There probably will be some revision of taxes, and I am hopeful there will be no need of new taxes," Doughton said. "My plan is to dispose of the whole matter very early in the session. Our experts have been studying the situation, of course, but nothing has crystallized yet."

Doughton declined to commit himself on proposals to modify the

Judge Delays Maxwell Case Jury Charge

Lengthy Closing Pleas Cause Continuance Until Today.

By Edward T. Folliard.

A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 16.—After a day of ringing oratory, the case of Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old mountain school teacher, charged with killing her father, was ready for the jury tonight.

The prosecution and defense lawyers took up so much time with their arguments today, however, that Judge Ezra T. Carter decided not to give the case to the jury until tomorrow morning.

These mountain folk love "speaking," particularly by criminal lawyers, and they packed the courtroom today to a point of suffocation. Twice Judge Carter had to halt the trial to order mothers to take crying babies out of the room.

Lunches Brought In.

"Shorty" Gilliam, proprietor of "Shorty's Cafe," discovered he was losing business because people were so afraid of losing their seats that they wouldn't leave during the luncheon recess. So today he came into the courtroom with a basket of sandwiches and a case of soft drinks.

The high light of the arguments came while Commonwealth's Attorney Fred B. Greear was addressing the jury late this afternoon.

He recalled how Edith, when she got to her home in The Pound late on the night of July 21, 1935, was told by her little sister, Mary Kathryn, that Trigg, their father, had threatened to chase their mother away the next day.

Threat Charged.

"Now what did Edith do?" asked Greear. "Did she act like a little shrinking violet? No. The inference is that she picked up something and said, I'll go in there and kill that ——."

Defense Counsel M. J. Fulton jumped to his feet to object.

"There is nothing in the record," he shouted, "to show that Edith ever said any such thing.

"I move that the jury be discharged because of the misconduct of the Commonwealth's attorney."

Judge Carter pondered a minute and then said:

"Overruled."

Mrs. Anne Maxwell, who has been indicted along with Edith for Trigg's death but never tried, cried today as she listened to the recital of the events that made her a widow.

Courtroom Packed.

The courtroom was stifling while the opposing lawyers argued the case today. Spectators, including children who had played "hooky" from school, packed every inch of the room.

They were even draped over Judge Ezra Carter, breathing on his neck. A reporter couldn't leave his seat for fear of finding two mountaineers in it when he got back.

Edith was alternately described by prosecution and defense lawyers as a wilful, hard-hearted girl and as a home-loving young school mistress.

Defense Attorney Charles Henry Smith, at the beginning of his argument, asked the jurors not to regard him as a "foreigner."

He reminded them of Judge Carter's instructions that Edith was "presumed to be innocent until she is proved guilty." He insisted that the Commonwealth had not proved it.

Medical Evidence Cited.

"Gentlemen," he thundered, "medical testimony is the very basis of this trial.

"We are chided for bring in high-powered medical experts. But we weren't the first to bring in medical testimony. The Commonwealth was.

"Lee Skeen, or somebody hired Dr. Tudor and Dr. Foust to perform the autopsy.

"In testifying here, they admitted that their findings were based 50 per cent on what they had been told about Trigg being in a fight and 50 per cent on what they observed in his brain."

After telling how four defense physicians had testified that Maxwell could not have died of a blow on the head, Smith said:

"In the name of God, how can the prosecution ask you for a conviction.

"The court has told you that if there is a reasonable doubt in your minds, then you must not convict.

"The prosecution says Trigg Maxwell was dealt a terrific blow over

Nanking Starts Drive To Free Gen. Chiang From Rebel Captors

Talking Mongoose, Canterbury Share Commons Debate Today

Issue of Famed Gef to Be Introduced as 'Smoke-Screen' to Save Archbishop From Critics of Talk on Edward, Mrs. Simpson, His Foes Say.

By the United Press.

London (Thursday) Dec. 17.—Gef, the talking mongoose of the Isle of Man, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the Church of England, were expected to share honors in Parliament today when the House of Commons begins debate on the affairs of the British Broadcasting Co.

Primary purpose of the debate is to consider a new royal charter for the B. B. C., which the Commons approved in principle before Gef became a national issue and caused one of the liveliest libel suits in British history.

The mongoose, it will be recalled, is alleged to live with a family on the Isle of Man, and to be able to talk distinctly in a number of languages. He has been a British newspaper character for months.

And now, it appears, he may serve as a smoke screen to distract attention from the case of the Archbishop of Canterbury, under fire from thousands of Britons because of his radio attack last Sunday on former King Edward, whom he accused of associating too much with an "exotic circle," including fashionable American residents of England and Europe.

Many members of Commons want to debate the Archbishop today, but supporters of the government plan to sidetrack them by bringing up the case of Gef, who is back in the newspapers because of publication by the government's board of inquiry of a ponderous report on charges of persecution by high officials of the B. B. C.

The story is complicated.

It began when R. S. Lambert, editor of the B. B. C. journal—The Listener—recently was awarded 7,500 pounds sterling ($37,500) damages in a slander action against Sir Cecil Levita.

Lambert alleged Sir Cecil said he was "mad" because he believed the tale of the talking mongoose, and he testified during the suit that high officials of the B. B. C. had threatened him with dismissal unless he dropped the slander action.

The matter was raised in Commons and a board appointed to investigate. Its report yesterday was described as "nearly as elusive as the talking mongoose himself."

Much too pompous to mention Gef by name the report asserted that

Insurgents Seize American Aviator

Government Declares Chinese Dictator Is "Still Alive."

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Dec. 17.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, whether dead or alive, was the prize for which two Chinese armies contended today.

The Nanking government announced the rebel leader, Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, would be given a "final chance" to release unharmed the generalissimo, his prisoner since Friday.

But the government, nevertheless, ordered the start of a punitive expedition against the rebel marshal, throwing some of China's finest fighting units into the disturbed northwestern areas.

Eight or ten government divisions, estimated to total 75,000 men, already were operating on the Shensi front, and an indecisive clash between loyal and rebel troops west of Sianfu was reported.

"If the mutineers resist the advance of the Nanking troops or if Marshal Chang refuses to abandon his stubborn position, our divisions will not hesitate to employ the utmost striking power at their command," said a Nanking spokesman.

U. S. Flier Detained.

The spokesman said loyal divisions had surrounded Sianfu, the Shensi capital, where Marshal Chang is believed to be holding the Nanking leader and several of his generals.

[Pro-Japanese Mongol and Manchukuoan irregular armies invading Suiyuan Province have resumed the offensive against central government forces, Marshal Yen Hsi-shan, pacification commissioner for Shensi and Suiyuan, telegraphed the government at Nanking today, according to the United Press. The pro-Japanese forces are taking advantage of the crisis caused by the kidnaping of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to regain territory they lost in the government's offensive earlier this month, Yen said.—Editor's note.]

Nanking officialdom persisted in its contentions that Gen. Chiang still was alive and well at Sianfu.

"The government understands the generalissimo is safe and in good spirits," said T. T. Li, spokesman for the foreign office at Nanking.

Also imprisoned at Sianfu was Royal Leonard, Glendale, Calif., aviator, "detained" by Marshal Chang's troops.

Julius Barr, of Pittsburgh, director of the Hankow aviation station, to which Leonard had been attached, reported the detention.

He announced also that government troops had seized the Hankow airport, which belonged to Marshal Chang, and arrested 28 Chinese mechanics and students as hostages.

Many of the officers were students in the military academy at Canton commanded by the generalissimo before he led the nationalist revolutionary forces northward to the 1926-28 conquest of China.

Whether the crisis can be settled without disastrous civil war may be revealed within a few days when Nanking forces begin to close in on Sianfu.

Fighting Not Decisive.

Officials at Nanking expressed the hope that at least some of the mutineers "will realize the folly of opposing the central government," but the belief was almost unanimous in the government that further delay would be unfruitful and dangerous.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, Wellesley-educated wife of the captive leader, remained today at Nanking, apparently having heeded friends' entreaties that she abandon plans to return to the interior to aid in efforts to free her husband.

Thus far Nanking had heard nothing of any plans of Marshal Chang to establish an autonomous regime in Shensi. This led to the belief that he had not yet made any arrangements with the Chinese Communists in the northwest or any other element, although it was thought he had been counting on ultimate Communist support.

Nanking was anxiously awaiting

Strikes Tie Up Glass Industry Over Country

By the Associated Press.

Strikes brought America's flat glass production to a virtual standstill yesterday.

Some 7,000 workers laid down their tools at Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. plants at Toledo, Ohio; Charleston, W. Va., and Shreveport, La. Approximately 6,000 others have been idle since October in a strike for a closed shop and higher wages at five units of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. A sympathy demonstration has kept 1,200 employes away from the Libbey-Owens-Ford branch at Ottawa, Ill., for two weeks.

Together, the two big firms manufacture about 85 per cent of the safety glass for motor car manufacturers and most of the window and plate glass, but officials envisaged no immediate shortage in automotive supplies.

Meanwhile, President Glenn McCabe, of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, disclosed he would confer at Washington today with Homer Martin, head of the United Automobile Workers Union, and John L. Lewis, chief of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Both unions are affiliated with the Lewis group. Detroit spokesmen for the auto workers said a discussion of conditions in the automobile industry was the purpose of the parley.

The United Automobile Workers Union called a "sit down," strike at the Fisher body plant at Kansas City, Mo., following refusal of the Chevrolet Motor Co. to reinstate a dismissed employe. The dispute tied up operations at both plants.

Discharge of five union members caused 140 workers to start a "sit down," demonstration at the Kelsey Wheel Co. in Windsor, Ont. Another "sit down" movement had already thrown 5,000 men out of work at two of the same firm's plants in Detroit. The company manufactures auto wheels.

At Flint, Mich., operators began hiring bus drivers to replace 106 strikers.

Government agencies considered abandonment of plans to send an emergency supply ship to Hawaii—indicating the end of the 48-day maritime strike on the West Coast was sighted. Ship owners reported fresh progress in peace negotiations with union representatives.

Citizens' Attack On 1-Man Car Taken to Court

Federation, Central Labor Union Charge Falsity on Jobs to C. T. C.

A charge that the Capital Transit Company had made "false representations that no trainmen would be discharged or forced to quit the service" and a prediction that its revenue will increase with the abolition of the $1 pass are contained in an appeal filed yesterday from the one-man car order of the Public Utilities Commission in the District Court.

The brief was filed by the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Central Labor Union through former People's Counsel William A. Roberts, William McK. Clayton, and Charlton Ogburn.

Previous Commitment Claimed.

It carries on the fight of the federation and organized labor against the commission's approval of a transit company petition, now operative for authority to buy and recondition 30 secondhand Providence (R. I.) one-man street cars and to adapt 20 of the President's conference street cars for one-man operation.

The appellants charge the commission with approving previous purchases of secondhand cars without "notice or public hearing."

As a consequence, the brief avers, the commission "had in fact committed itself to approval of operation of the additional one-man cars of the rebuilt Providence type prior to the hearing in question.

Fourteen specific charges against the order are set forth in the document, among them the usual "unjust and unreasonable," "capricious" and "unlawful.""

Charge Falsehood.

The appellants allege that the order ignores much of the evidence and the findings of fact are erroneous in several particulars, notably in regard to the financial condition of the Capital Transit Co., which was the key to the whole decision.

The order was based, the brief charged, upon a "distorted presentation of operating statistics" of the transit company and "of the inclusion in operating expenses of large non-recurring sums expended in the rehabilitation of the property in connection with the merging of the operations."

It should be reconsidered, the appellants declared, in the light of the "true facts."

Naval Transport With 1,450 Aboard Grounds on Shoal

The United States naval transport Chaumont, with approximately 1,450 persons aboard, was aground last night in Chinwangtao Harbor off the northeast coast of China, according to advices received here by the Navy Department.

Early reports indicated the vessel had suffered no material damage, but efforts were being made to refloat her by removal of portions of the cargo.

The Chaumont was en route to Shanghai carrying 1,200 naval officers and enlisted men who were being transferred to new posts in conjunction with a regular shift in personnel assigned to the Asiatic fleet. In addition to its passengers, the 10,500-ton craft carried a crew of 250.

An initial attempt to refloat the vessel during high tide failed, advices said, and another attempt was to be made at the next high water with the assistance available in the vicinity of a tug and two dredges.

The Chaumont is in command of Capt. Robert Arnold White, U. S. N. The transport usually is employed in carrying naval personnel and supplies between ports in the United States and the Far West.

By the United Press.

Madrid, Dec. 16.—A fleet of 39 rebel bombers, the largest sent against Madrid thus far, blasted whole blocks of working men's homes today and buried women and children in flaming wreckage.

In one block alone—in the suburb of Tetuan—50 women and children were entombed in the ruins of what had been their homes.

So widespread and thorough was the damage that the International Red Cross was unable to reckon the dead. More than 200 persons were treated for serious injuries at emergency stations.

The air raiders, who spread their destruction over a wide area, were driven off by loyalist planes which went into the fog over the city and engaged the enemy ships in a furious "dog fight."

Fourteen swift pursuit planes, which accompanied five rebel bombers in the first raid, circled the government planes in an attempt to permit the bombers to escape.

Rescue Squad in Action.

Two square blocks of houses and two apartment buildings were destroyed in Tetuan, where 40 bombs of 40-kilogram size fell.

Six rescue squads worked tonight under the glare of arc lights attempting to reach the buried, mostly women and children, before they die from their injuries or suffocation.

Underground stations were jammed with women and children, many of whom were wounded.

Great damage also was done to the University City, Pozuelo and Casa Campo district, north and west of Madrid.

The greatest damage was in the northwestern part of Madrid, three-fourths of which is in ruins, as result of the month of aerial bombardments.

Another squadron of four Fascist bombers raided the international railroad town of Port Bou, near the French frontier on the Mediterranean, and demolished the en-

Cyclist Speeds Mrs. Simpson Edward's Note

Prince Does Not Trust Mails; Is Happy as He Plays Golf.

By the United Press.

Cannes, France, Dec. 16.—A special courier, who rushed half way across Europe on a motorcycle because former King Edward no longer trusts the mails, awoke Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson from her sleep today to deliver a love letter.

The former monarch, it was said, is suspicious lest the British intelligence service find out what plans are being made by him and the American woman he intends to marry.

Lord Brownlow, former lord-in-waiting to Edward, carried Mrs. Simpson's message of love from the Herman L. Rogers villa here to Edward in his retreat near Vienna over the week-end.

Prince Edward's reply was sealed and given to motorcycle courier, who sped across the borders of central Europe and down to the Riviera. He arrived while Mrs. Simpson slept, but members of the household, acting on her orders, awakened her immediately.

Mrs. Simpson was revealed to be upset, as Edward is, over the Archbishop of Canterbury's attack on their contemplated "un-Christian" marriage and his reference to Edward's friends as an "exotic circle."

The Baltimore-born woman was described as waiting impatiently for repercussions in the British House of Commons, where, it has been re-

Pope Pius Heeds Doctor's Warning; Keeps to His Bed

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Dec. 16.—Pope Pius yielded to the warnings of his doctors today and kept to his bed.

His slightly increased activity of the day before was blamed by Dr. Amanti Milani, his physician, for the relapse the pontiff had suffered in his current illness.

Today, while newlywed couples were urged by Mgr. Aborio Mella, papal majordomo, to offer new and "more fervent prayers for the precious health of His Holiness," the Pope received only Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, the papal secretary of state.

The pontiff spent an uncomfortable night, for his setback of yesterday made his breathing difficult. Both the Holy Father's legs were slightly paralyzed when he first was stricken 11 days ago, and there has been some congestion of his circulatory system.

Prelates said the ceremony in which cardinals are to present their Christmas greetings still was on the program for December 24, but that it would, in any event, be conducted on a minor scale.

Besides seeing Cardinal Pacelli, the pontiff dispatched his final blessing for Archbishop Joseph Palica, vice regent of the Rome Archdiocese, who died today. The archbishop had ordained scores of American priests who studied in the American college here.

Doctor Prescribes Anti-Sleep Pills So Donald Will See Santa

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Seven-year-old Donald Felden, of nearby Latham, fearful lest he fall asleep and miss seeing Santa Claus on Christmas Eve, consulted his family physician and said today he was sure he'd solved the problem.

Donald, who usually goes to sleep early, wrote to Dr. Nathan Flater, asking if he had "some pills that I can take so I won't fall asleep Christmas Eve."

"I want to stay awake just one night, Christmas Eve," Donald wrote. "I want to get a good look at Santa Claus to prove to myself there is one. I'll pay you for the pills after Christmas."

Today Donald pulled a little vial from his pocket and explained: "I got 11 pills. The doctor told me how to take them."

He's uncertain, though, whether to let his sister Joan, 3, and his brother Earl, 12, use any of them.

Donald has left his imagination clear about old St. Nick. He has no idea how the jolly saint may look, although he has seen store Santa Clauses and others on the street.

"They're not the real McCoy," he explained.

And Donald has no idea about how Santa will arrive. He said he was going to take one of the pills every half hour and was pretty certain he would see Santa come, "maybe in an airplane, maybe a car."

River Veteran Dies as He Lived, Anacostia's Murmur in His Ears

Fine rain sifted over the dying campfire. On a packing box in the cold night sat an old man, staring into the embers. Overhead loomed the geometric blacks and grays of the Benning Road Bridge.

The Anacostia River ebbed slowly seaward, the reeds along the river stood still, at attention as Death walked toward the old man. Hulks of beached boats, mud, scrap wood, a sewer, completed the scene. Death and the old man were alone, beside the river.

"Capt." Harry D. Bailey, who probably loved the river more than any man, was dying, dying the way he wanted to die, close by the side of the Anacostia.

Man's allotted three score and ten were his, and all of them had been spent around that river. His father before him had done the same.

The Anacostia is no noble stream. To the casual eye it is a muddy flats, dull, gray, sluggish. But to Harry D. Bailey at 70 it was strangely compelling, a mistress of which he never tired, a mate which he hurried to in rain and sleet, in fair weather or foul.

Yesterday he hurried from his son's white-painted, respectable, warm home in Capitol Heights, to get back to the place he had lived for 30 years, a boathouse on the river front. Unhappily the boat-

Americas Join Pact to Repel Any Invasion

21 Nations Unanimous in Support of Plan Urged by Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 16.—President Roosevelt's hope that the 21 American republics would stand "shoulder to shoulder" against outside aggression won unanimous approval today by representatives of the 21 American republics.

Enthusiastic delegates to the Inter-American Peace Conference, mindful of the United States executive's exhortation for co-operation for peace in his address at the opening of the parley which he sponsored, adopted a United States plan for joint consultation if American peace is threatened from abroad or from within.

The quick, final sanction by the conference came at a plenary session which also passed eight other committee-approved projects.

United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull's resolution for ratification of five existing American peace treaties by nations which have not made them effective gained quick adoption.

Unanimous Action.

Both proposals had joint sponsorship of all the 21 republics. The plan for consultation in the event of a threat to American peace will require passage by the various legislatures before it is effective. In the United States the Senate would have to approve the measure.

A large crowd, with women in the majority, filled the galleries of the silver and rose-draped Argentine Chamber of Deputies in the marble-domed Congressional Palace as the conference leaders pushed the nine projects through to final acceptance.

The sombre-clad assemblage of male delegates was brightened by five women representatives, wearing summer ensembles in the hot December weather.

Three of the women were members of the United States group—Mrs. Burton Musser, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins and Marjorie Whiteman. The others were Rosalina Coelho Lisbao and Maria Luisa Bittencourt, both of Brazil.

The last-minute addition to the peace consultation convention provided that the pact would be effective for an indefinite time but stated signatories could denounce it by giving one year's notice.

The other projects which won full conference approval were:

1. A protocol to the convention adopted by the 1933 Pan-American Conference at Montevideo, stating intervention by one state in another's affairs is "inadmissable."

2. A resolution to postpone sideration of creation of an Inter-American Court of Justice until the regular Pan-American parley at Lima, Peru, in 1938. The Pan-American Union, which has headquarters in Washington, would study the various plans in the meantime.

3. A recommendation that treaties and conventions adopted at inter-American conferences be open to other American states—thus enabling Canada to adhere to Pan-American pacts; and a proposal that if specific provision is made, treaties be open to any other nation in the world.

4. A resolution to improve codification of international law in the Western hemisphere, under direction of the Pan-American Union.

5. A recommendation that each government publish its stand on points of international law, with the Pan-American Union compiling a summary of these facts.

Oratory Flood Loosed.

6. A proposal for creation of an inter-American academy of international law like that at the Hague, the Netherlands.

7. A plan to establish commissions to push a program of inter-American intellectual co-operation.

With the completion of voting on the nine proposals, delegates burst into a flood of oratory, hailing the consultative system to be created under the peace and security convention and the general "good neighbor" attitude of the conferees.

Humberto Albornoz, Ecuadorean banker, businessman and economist, declared:

"Mutual consultation shall be the fountain-head of good understanding among American nations. * * *

"The Old World is skeptical and the New World is optimistic. * * *

"To the Old World, Wilson (President Woodrow Wilson) was a visionary; in America, he was an apostle.

"That is why President Roosevelt's message inaugurating this conference moved us deeply. That is why Secretary Hull's peace program is doubly impressive. That is why the good neighbor policy is a fact."

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman.

NOT only did Woodrow Wilson in 1913, as shown in this place yesterday, believe there was no good reason, which could not be overcome in another manner for limiting Presidential tenure to one six-year term, but he contended that the present system, with what admits of a second term, possessed substantial advantages which should be preserved.

WALTMAN.

Wilson's contention, in a nutshell, was that striking down the right of the President to seek re-election would deprive him of his most effective weapon in dealing with a recalcitrant Congress—the right to seek vindication at the hands of the electorate for the course he pursued.

If anything, Wilson indicated, the President should be required to answer to public opinion more often than once in four years, in some manner or other. He did not propose a two-year Presidential term, but he felt that some constitutional change might be devised whereby the President would be made answerable to the people through Congress. His letter to Mitchell Palmer was not specific on this point, but he may have had in mind some scheme of preventing the deadlocks which occur between the White House and Capitol Hill when the Administration's party loses control of Congress midway in its term, as happened to Wilson in 1918 and to Herbert Hoover in 1930.

In the letter in which Wilson opposed a constitutional amendment limiting presidential tenure to a single six-year term, he pointed out that the President is expected to be the leader of his party as well as the Chief Executive and that "the country will take no excuses from him."

"The present fact is," Wilson asserted, "that the President is held responsible for what happens in Washington in every large matter, and so long as he is commanded to lead, he is surely entitled to a certain amount of power—all the power he can get from the support and convictions and opinions of his fellow countrymen; that he ought to be suffered to use that power against his opponents until his work his done.

"It will be very difficult for him to abuse it. He holds it upon sufrance, at the pleasure of public opinion. Everyone else, his opponents included, have access to opinion, as he has. He must keep the confidence of the country by earning it, for he can keep it no other way. Put the present customary limitation of two terms into the Constitution, if you do not trust the people to take care of themselves, but make it two terms (not one, because four years is often too long) and give the President a chance to win the full service by proving himself fit for it.

"If you wish to learn the result of constitutional ineligibility to re-election, ask any former Governor of New Jersey, for example, what the effect is in actual experience. He will tell you how cynically and with what complacence the politicians banded against him and waited for the inevitable end of his term to take their chances with his successor. Constitutions place and can place no limitations upon their power.

"They may control what Governors they can as long as they please, as long as they can keep their outside power and influence together. They smile at the coming and going of Governors, as some men in Washington have smiled at the coming and going of Presidents, as upon things ephemeral, which passed and were soon enough got rid of, if you but sat tight and waited.

"As things stand now the people might more likely be cheated than served by further limitations of the President's eligibility. His fighting power in their behalf would be immensely weakened. No one will fear a President except those whom he can make fear the elections.

"We singularly belie our own principles by seeking to determine by fixed constitutional provision what the people shall determine for themselves. We cast a doubt upon the whole theory of popular government. I believe that we should fatally embarrass ourselves if we made the constitutional change proposed.

"If we want our Presidents to fight our battles for us, we should give them the means, the legitimate means, the means their opponents always have. Strip them of everything else but the right to appeal to the people but leave them that; suffer them to be leaders; absolutely prevent them from being bosses. We would otherwise appear to be going in two opposite directions. We are seeking in every way to extend the power of the people, but in the matter of the Presidency we fear and distrust the people and seek to bind them hand and foot by rigid constitutional provision. My own mind is not agile enough to go both ways."

Whether Woodrow Wilson's views on this subject should control is beside the question. Certainly the arguments he made almost 14 years ago against a constitutional amendment limiting Presidential tenure to one six-year term, as will be proposed in the next Congress, should be given serious consideration.

Governor's Future Seen in President's Hands After Parley.

In President Roosevelt's hands lies the political future of Paul V. McNutt, retiring Governor of Indiana, and often mentioned as the 1940 Democratic nominee for President, observers agreed last night.

McNutt, who appeared at the White House yesterday morning for the day's first appointment with the President, has been mentioned for three posts—Secretary of War, High Commissioner to the Philippines, and Senator from Indiana if Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of that State, is appointed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Definite unofficial word has been heard that the appointment of Minton to the bench is "in the bag," but no one can be found to confirm this rumor. McNutt is believed eager for the senatorial appointment, which would keep him in the public eye in a more or less unrestrained position. Second to this he would like the Secretaryship, it is believed, although this would subordinate him more completely in the Roosevelt official family.

Philippines a "Shelf."

It is generally held that if the President appoints the Indiana Governor to the Philippine post, he will be definitely shelving the tall, handsome former American Legion commander.

McNutt, at the White House, told reporters he had been to the War Department on a small matter. One asked:

"Looking over your new office, Governor?"

He smiled, paused, then said: "No comment."

Term Expires January 11.

His 4-year term as Governor of Indiana expires January 11, he told reporters. Under the constitution of that State the Governor may not succeed himself.

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, was believed to be spending considerable time puzzling over the appointments to the large number of vacant posts.

He conferred with Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson and Vice President John Nance Garner over inaugural plans; saw Postmaster General James A. Farley briefly, and lunched with Acting Secretary of State R. Walton Moore.

In the afternoon, free of appointments, the President was believed to be working on his budget message and the annual message to Congress on the state of the Union.

Throat Infection Of President's Son Cured, Doctor Says

Boston, Dec. 16 (AP).—Dr. George Loring Tobey, who has been treating Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., revealed today that the son of the President had been cured of a streptococcus infection of the throat during his confinement in Massachusetts General Hospital here for a sinus infection.

Not only had the serious throat infection been conquered, Dr. Tobey said, but the sinus trouble afflicting the young Harvard senior had been brought to a point where the Chief Executive's son should be home for Christmas.

A chemotherapeutic agent comparatively new in use in this country—prontylin—was employed in combating the throat infection, Dr. Tobey said.

Such secrecy has surrounded the care of young Franklin, who recently became engaged to Miss Ethel duPont, that it was not known from his physician until today that he was confined for other than a sinus infection.

Anti-Trust Law Use Studied To Aid Pay, Labor Conditions

Representative Dies to Push Broadly-Worded Resolution to Permit Far-Reaching Investigation of American Industry.

By the Associated Press.

A plan for a Congressional investigation of the advisability of using anti-trust laws to attack vital economic problems, including low wages and poor working conditions, was formulated yesterday by Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas.

Dies is a member of the powerful House Rules Committee. He said he would press for immediate adoption of a resolution so broadly worded it would start one of the most far-reaching inquiries into operations of American business ever undertaken.

It would go so far as to determine whether there was a need for limiting the size of individual corporations and for restricting businesses to the principal activities in which they engage.

Seven-Man Committee Proposed.

The resolution would set up a seven-man committee of House members directed to study first the extent of monopolies, trusts and "cut-throat competition" and the possibility of curbing them.

In addition, the committee would look into the advisiability of:

1. Declaring monopolistic the employing of people for "inadequate wages and under unwholesome conditions."

2. Compelling corporations engaged in interstate commerce to "secure charters from the Federal Government upon such conditions and terms as Congress may designate."

3. Permanently separating production, transportation, refining, processing and distribution of manufactured products by requiring that each be confined to distinct corporations with dissimilar stockholders and management.

Expects Strong Backing.

4. Remedying by legislation any waste or uneconomic use of natural resources that tend to produce monopolies.

On the basis of conversations with Congressmen, Dies said the resolution would command strong support. Since it would be referred to the rules committee, he said he would be in a position to press for its prompt consideration.

"This is a possible means," Dies said, "of finding a satisfactory solution to some of the most urgent problems confronting the Nation."

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, is pushing for a law to compel Federal incorporation of interstate business.

Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, is considering a measure to divorce retail outlets from the control of manufacturers.

Leaders Dash Hopes of 1937 Budget Balance

undivided profits tax, to provide more relief for debt-ridden companies, and to encourage plant improvement and expansion. He suggested a new sub-committee may be named to carry on studies of the old one, headed by former Representative Samuel B. Hilll, of Washington. The social security act will be studied for possible changes, he said:

McReynolds predicted neutrality legislation expiring May 1 will be extended and strengthened. He will suggest that it be amended to apply in the President's discretion to such conflicts as the Spanish civil war, as well as to wars between nations. He thinks the time is propitious for another amendment, restricting shipment of war contraband.

Discussing reorganization prospects, Speaker Bankhead said he hoped foundations being laid by three special committees may result in some curbing of Government costs, but pointed to past obstacles to reorganization and the difficulties in the path of an agreement.

He indicated action will be expedited on any recommendations the President may make on such probable extensions as the neutrality act, lending functions of the RFC, continuation of the CCC, and supplementary relief appropriations.

Refuse to Take Sides.

It is significant that Bankhead and many other Democratic leaders, such as Doughton and McReynolds, are taking no sides in the sharp contest for the House floor leadership between Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, and John J. O'Connor, of New York.

But a blow was struck for O'Connor yesterday by Representative Arthur H. Greenwood, of Indiana, a former House whip and now second ranking member of O'Connor's Rules Committee.

Greenwood raised the sectional issue. He said a group of Democratic party leaders in 1930 had "determined that the Speakership and the majority leadership should be divided between the North and South in order to maintain a proper national party balance." He said Vice President Garner, who recently declared for Rayburn, was a member of the group.

"To go South for a majority leader will tend to destroy the balance of party leadership and control between the North and the South, which has done so much to re-establish the Democratic Party in the North," Greenwood said. He said outside interference in the leadership race "by so-called political leaders and others" is a "sinister encroachment" House members will resent.

Ossietzky, Nobel Winner, Reported Missing in Berlin

By the Associated Press.

Berlin (Thursday), Dec. 17.—The whereabouts of Carl von Ossietzky, German pacifist and winner of the 1935 Nobel Peace Prize, was a mystery early this morning.

Reports he was no longer in Berlin's huge West End Hospital were current late last night, but both hospital authorities and the propaganda ministry said they were not willing to give out any information.

Friends of Von Ossietzky said there was a possibility he might have been taken to some sanitarium in the mountains.

(Von Ossietzky was taken to the Berlin West End Hospital after his release from a concentration camp. He was reported then to have been suffering from tuberculosis or heart disease.

(He was awarded the 1935 Nobel Peace Prize this year. On December 4 attending physicians announced his health would not permit him to receive the award in person December 10 in Stockholm.)

Dayton Rites Mark First Flight Today

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 16 (AP).—Thoughts of the air-minded turned tonight to this "cradle of aviation," on the eve of the annual homage paid to the Wright Brothers, first to realize man's conquest of the skies.

On the morrow, nationally known figures of civil and military aviation—and the President of the United States—will send greetings or appear personally to shake the hand of Orville Wright, who with Wilbur made history just 33 years ago on the dunes of Kitty Hawk, N. C.

The ceremonies are expected to draw such national figures as Eugene Vidal, air commerce director; Capt. Eddie Rickenbacher, World War ace and now an airline executive; Brig. Gen. A. W. Robins, chief of the materials division at Wright Feld; S. A. Cisler, superintendent of air mail at Washington, and others.

Franc Speculators Curb Is Dropped

Paris, Dec. 16 (AP).—In an effort to get hoarded gold back into the Bank of France, the finance ministry today announced it would abandon attempts to confiscate franc devaluation profits if holders of the metal would loan it to the government for three years.

Simultaneously, it was announced all restrictions on the movement of capital, including purchase of foreign exchange, had been revoked. Henceforth, Finance Minister Vincent Auriol said, hte French monetary policy will be of "complete liberty."

Berlin, Dec. 16 (AP).—Violators of Germany's drastic foreign exchange law were given six weeks today to settle up their holdings or face a penalty of death. Gen Hermann Goering issued an "exchange amnesty" permitting Germans who voluntarily confess their dealings in foreign exchage before January 1, 1937, to escape the sabotage punishment.

Marine Band to Aid Mission Yule Party

The Marine Band will play as an added attraction at the Central Union Mission's Christmas party in the Capitol Theater the morning of December 24.

This was announced yesterday by Mrs. John S. Bennett, director of the mission's Children's Emergency Home, who is in charge of arrangements for the party. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will attend.

Seventeen hundred Christmas bags, containing both practical gifts and toys, will be presented needy children at the party. The bags are filled by Washington citizens. All except 25 of the bags already have been taken by persons who volunteered to fill them. The few remaining empty bags are at the mission, 613 C street. Mrs. Bennett hopes they will be called for by persons who will fill them in time for the party.

Secret Parley To Map New Aid For Rebel Army

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, Dec. 16.—A secret meeting in Paris between an envoy of Gen. Francisco Franco, Spanish rebel leader, and representatives of two European powers to arrange the sending of foreign specialists to aid the insurgents has been scheduled for the near future, the United Press learned tonight.

The conference was planned after breakdown of Anglo-French mediation efforts, designed to get Spanish troops out of the trenches by Christmas, because of the refusal of the "Fascist bloc" to co-operate.

While the powers which will aid Franco were not publicly named, Italy and Germany have been accused of helping the insurgents

Snag Admitted.

The Quai d'Orsay and the British foreign office, prime movers in the mediation efforts, consulted and decided that the mediation proposal could not proceed unless Moscow, Berlin, Lisbon and Rome reaffirm their intention to remain aloof from the Spanish struggle.

The specialists to be sent to Franco are designed to counterbalance the previous arrival of Russian and French aviators and mechanics in Barcelona and Alicante.

It is reported that Mussolini has ordered the open recruiting of Italian volunteers stopped. This action, it is understood, was due to a British demand that such a move precede negotiation of a British-Italian rapprochement as to their interests in the Mediterranean.

Franco has turned to Hitler for further aid, and it is understood that 20,000 volunteers will be asked to aid the Nationalist army.

Plan to Shift Moors.

The rebel general has been asked to withdraw his Moors from the Madrid front and move them south, out of the snow, into the warmer climate of Malaga. Their places on the Madrid front will be taken as rapidly as possible by German volunteers. Afterward, Franco may undertake simultaneous offensives against Madrid and Malaga.

From Franco's representatives in Paris, the United Press learned tonight that there are now, at most, 6,000 Italians with Franco's army, chiefly aviators, tank drivers and mechanics. There were fewer than 6,000 Germans a few weeks ago, but recent arrivals have increased their number to nearly 10,000.

Important arms shipments from Holland and Belgium also have entered Spain, after crossing France, it was learned.

Four Here Anxiously Await News of Gen. Chiang's Safety

Harris & Ewing.
ETHEL PORTER.

With troops of the Nanking (Central) government poised for a war to the finish against rebel Marshal Chang, abductor of China's Bismarck, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, at least four Washingtonians read the news from China with a personal interest.

"Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang are such wonderful people it would be disastrous for China and Chinese unity if the rebel war lord carries out his threat of vengeance," commented Miss Louise Porter, a typist at the National Geographic Society annex, Third street and Randolph place northeast, whose sister, Ethel, was, until late October, private nurse to Mme. Chiang.

"Ethel wrote me many letters about the Chiangs and her work there," Louise said yesterday.

"She was very sorry that her religious scruples made it necessary to come to the parting of ways. You see, my sister is a Seventh-Day Adventist and she found it impossible to arrange Saturdays off since the generalissimo and his wife were always rushed with engagements."

From Humble Parents.

The Chiangs lived sumptuously; they owned three palatial homes, and private airplanes were always being turned up to rush them here and there. One of the favorite haunts of China's "strong man" was at Chicko, in the province of Chakiang, where, in 1888, he was born, the son of an humble storekeeper.

The generalissimo was "self made" in that he rose by personal effort from an obscure stratum of China's teeming millions, Louise quoted her sister as having said. "He was not western trained like his wife, who is a Wellesley College graduate, and it was through the benevolent sponsorship of Sun Yat-Sen that he was skyrocketed to the top," she stated. Sun Yat-Sen, affectionately known as the "father of the Chinese republic," led the successful revolt against the crumbling Manchu Dynasty in 1911.

Mme. Chiang played an important part in the making of the new China, Louise said. As active head of China's military air bureau she has flown from one end of the country to the other transacting political business for her reserved dictator-husband. She was mainly responsible for Chiang's conversion to Christianity in October, 1930, when he was baptized into the Methodist faith at the home of his mother-in-law, the typist stated.

Stationed at Lanchow.

Ethel Porter, who is now stationed at the Lanchow Sanitarium in the province of Kansu, was born in Bradford, Pa., and came here for her training as nurse at the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md. Dr. W. H. Miller was then superintendent in charge. Later he left to head up Seventh Day Adventist activities at Shanhai, China, and when Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, who was a patient at the Adventist Hospital there, requested a competent nurse, Dr. Miller got in touch with Washington headquarters and picked Ethel from a list of three.

She left for China in August, 1935—her first appointment to foreign missionary service—and her employment with the Chiangs covered a period of eight months. Only one other American, a Miss Seeck, was on the private staff of the warlord; she was personal secretary to the wife of the generalissimo.

Louise Porter makes her home with her mother, sister and the latter's husband, Paul Hottel, at 517 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md. All awaited the latest developments from China yesterday with the keenest of interest. Hottel, who is director of the Y. M. C. A. Solarium here, expressed the opinion yesterday that Marshal Chang is a "dope fiend."

"He was treated once as an addict at the Adventist's Sanitarium in Shanghai. Recently he returned to the "pipe of forgetfulness," he stated.

news of the outcome of the clash west of Sianfu, where an advance guard of loyal forces encountered some of Marshal Chang's rebels.

The government troops were trying to cut the Lunghai railway extension beyond Sianfu, the main artery of communication between Sianfu and areas in the hinterland controlled by Marshal Chang.

Thus far the action had not been decisive, but the government expected success as soon as its reinforcements arrived.

The outcome of the clash was expected to indicate how firmly the rebels were determined to resist.

Military authorities at Nanking disarmed an artillery brigade stationed there which formerly was commanded by Marshal Chang. This was in precaution against possible mutiny, said Chinese sources.

A Chinese dispatch from Chengchow, vital railway junction in Honan Province, said that when the uprising broke out at Sianfu, Marshal Chang ordered several units of artillery stationed along the western section of the Lungchai Railway to join his cause and impede movement of Nanking forces to the west.

The artillery units refused and handed their arms to government troops. The Lunghai is China's main east-west trunk line which penetrates Shensi Province.

Yu Yu-jen, veteran Nationalist Party leader and chairman of the control Yuan of the Nanking regime, was appointed pacification commissioner for Shensi Wednesday. He was expected to go to the center of trouble immediately.

Nanking hoped his appointment would influence some of Marshal Chang's wavering followers to desert his cause, since Yu is held in high esteem by some of the rebel commanders who have been his political disciples and also by some of the Chinese Communist chieftains in the northwest.

W. H. Donald, the Australian adviser to the Nanking government, who reported yesterday he had seen Gen. Chiang alive and well at Sianfu as late as Tuesday, still was at Loyang today, apparntly having decided not to return to Nanking as expected.

Officials said he probably would return soon to Sianfu to make a final appeal to Marshal Chang to release the Nanking generalissimo.

The air raids, which started at 1:30 p. m., caught citizens and the city's antiaircraft defenders unawares. Because of the dense fog they were confident that the capital would be temporarily safe from an attack by air.

A government communique reported intense fighting on the Catalan front around Huesca. Loyalists claimed to have repulsed a rebel attack on their positions. The insurgents were said to have been forced to retreat to their old positions outside the town after suffering heavy casualties.

The air raid on Madrid came after government troops repulsed a rebel attack in which many new German and Italian Fascist recruits reportedly participated.

Governor Paroles Best Convicts as Holiday Gift

Dr. Louis Carman Dead in New York

Dr. Louis Dale Carman, 76, medical examiner in the Pension Bureau for many years before his retirement, in 1929, died Tuesday in New York, his friends here were informed yesterday.

A resident of Washington until about four years ago, Dr. Carman belonged to the Masonic Order, the Loyal Legion, Sons of the American Revolution and the Order of Washington. He was a past master of Harmony Lodge, F. A. A. M.; a member of Almas Temple, the Scottish Rite, the Tall Cedars of Lebanon and the Masonic Veterans Association.

Surviving him are a daughter, Mrs. Louise Mann, New York City; a sister, Miss Ada Carman, and two brothers, John S. Carman, of Los Angeles, and Frank J. Carman, New York.

W. S. Yeatman Dies After Brief Illness

Funeral services for Warren Simpson Yeatman, 70, retired chief photographer of the Hydrographic Office, Navy Department, will be held at Lee's undertaking establishment tomorrow at 11 a. m., followed by burial in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Yeatman died Tuesday at his home, 2755 Macomb street, after a brief illness. A lifelong resident of Washington, he was retired last August 31, after nearly 36 years of service with the department. He did much toward improving methods and work of the Hydrographic Office as a cartographic engineer.

Surviving Yeatman are his widow, Mrs. Annie E. Yeatman; a son, Robert Yeatman, of Washington; a daughter, Mrs. Elva Y. Gifford, of Davenport, Ia.; two brothers, Dr. Henry L. Yeatman, retired dentist, and Dr. D. Ammen Yeatman, retired pharmacist, employed at the National Library for the Blind, and two sisters, Mrs. Walter Rogers Beach and Miss Nellie L. Yeatman.

Slaying Suspect Held.

San Francisco, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—A man identified by police as Frank G. Williams, 38, alias Frank Murphy, was arrested here late today in connection with the kidnaping and slaying of Harry Miller, retired captain of the Cincinnati fire department. Police said the man they booked as Williams admitted a part in the crime.

Navy Group to Meet.

A special meeting of the Navy Yard retirement committee will be held at the Southeast Branch Library at 7:30 p. m. today to complete plans for the annual entertainment and dance to be given at the Hotel Mayflower January 29.

Fire Damage $500,000.

Galion, Ohio, Dec. 16 (AP).—An early morning blaze today leveled the Perfection Burial Vault Co. here with a loss estimated by President Harry Cohen at $500,000.

Traffic Crusader Seized on Warrant For Ignoring 'Tag'

Tuenis F. Collier, of 3008 Dent place northwest, thorn in the side of traffic policemen, was arrested for a traffic violation yesterday and booked at the Third Precinct station.

Several days ago Motorcycle Policeman C. L. Smith gave Collier a ticket on E street northwest for making an improper turn. Collier failed to appear to post collateral and Smith applied for the warrant.

Yesterday the policeman went to Collier's place of business and informed him he was under arrest. He was taken to the station house and posted $5 to appear in Police Court Friday.

Collier gained a reputation for himself by becoming self-appointed guardian of Georgetown's traffic morals several months ago. At that time he began telling police of violations committed by his neighbors.

Reward Is Offered For Boy's Return

Corinth, Miss., Dec. 16 (AP).—The Weaver Pants Corporation posted a $500 reward today for the safe return of Lary Glass, 26, of New York, nephew of the wealthy president of the concern.

Superintendent H. S. Gruber said Glass has been missing since Sunday.

Gruber said a kidnaping plot was feared.

Mr. Zzyzo, 4 Other Guys.

New York, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Mr. Zzyzo, whose name appears last in the new Manhattan telephone directory, turned out today to be not one man but four young advertising executives sharing an apartment. They selected the name Zzyzo so that it would save their friends time in looking up their number.

Roosevelt Island To Open in Spring

Theodore Roosevelt Island in the Potomac River between Arlington and Key bridges will be open to the public next spring for limited use as a recreation area, Parks Superintendent C. Marshall Finnan said yesterday.

Ground clearing operations by CCC labor have advanced to the point where the island, formerly known as Analostan and now under development as a memorial to the former President, is almost ready for picnickers and outdoor lovers, Finnan asserted.

He hopes, eventually, to have a ferry boat operating between Columbia and Theodore Roosevelt islands. Meantime, the public will get across by a causeway now existing but in need of extensive repairs and alterations, provided Congress grants the necessary funds. The weir connects the north end of the memorial island with the Virginia mainland.

Studebaker to Speak On Community Forum

Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, will speak tonight on "The Community Forum in Adult Education," at a meeting of the Thursday Evening Forum of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, at Chevy Chase Circle. The meeting, to begin at 7:45 p. m., will be held in the church assembly room.

Jurors to Hear Judge's Charge At Wise Today

the head with a mysterious weapon. It says it was a blow of such force as to cause death.

"And yet Chant Kelly, a neighbor, tells you that when he saw Maxwell, he was gasping for breath. Kelly says he gave him artificial respiration.

"That is one of the most significant facts in this case. He was gasping for breath. Does that sound like concussion of the brain? You know it doesn't.

"Then Dr. Sykes, Maxwell's friend, thought it was a heart attack. After pronouncing him dead, he went on home."

Smith commented on Assistant Prosecutor Louis McCormick's sarcastic remarks about Coroner MacDonald being sent here by The Washington Post.

"I'd hate to think," Smith said, "that a man of such eminence as Dr. MacDonald would make a pawn and chattel of himself and sell himself to the highest bidder

"I know he wouldn't, and I think the prosecution knows it, too."

His Testimony Recalled.

Smith reminded the jurors that Coroner Hix, of Wise, had joined with Dr. MacDonald and two other physicians in saying that Maxwell could not have died from a blow on the head.

"If," said Smith, "Coroner Hix had performed the autopsy on Trigg Maxwell, we wouldn't all be here now. She never would have been indicted."

Smith said he had no doubt that Trigg Maxwell was a fine character when he was sober, but on the night of his death, he said, Maxwell was drinking and was disagreeable.

Regarding testimony that Edith made many threats to "kill" her father, Smith said his attention had been called to a recent article by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"She wrote about some newspaper reporter," Smith said, "and she said, 'I could have slain him.'

"Now, if that reporter should die mysteriously, I suppose Mrs. Roosevelt will be indicted for murder."

Plea Concluded.

Winding up his argument, Smith said:

"Little Mary Kathryn has come here and told you how her daddy died, but the prosecution asks you to forget her testimony.

"They ask you to believe fantastic story about Edith killing her father with a mysterious ax."

"May the God you worship help you do the right thing."

Special Prosecutor Oscar M. Vicars accused Edith and her mother of telling falsehoods. He reminded the jurors that, just after Trigg's death they told neighbors he had fallen against a meat block in the kitchen and cut his head.

Then, he said, they realized that this story sounded implausible and Edith said she hit him with a slipper.

He reminded the jurors of the testimony that Edith said the happiest day of her life would be, when she saw her father in his grave.

"They bring doctors in here to say he died of heart failure." Vicars shouted, "to say Maxwell died of heart failure, why it's ridiculous.

Defense Assailed.

"Why, gentlemen, the defense has no defense. That's why they bring in that nonsense about heart failure. It's not only unreasonable, it's absurd.

"This defendant who killed her father is manufacturing evidence.

"Gentlemen, I don't know what was used to kill Trigg Maxwell. It may have been an ax or it may have been something else. But this poor man was beaten to death.

"I haven't any time to waste on these experts who talk about heart failure.

"It's your duty to convict this girl of first-degree murder."

Trigg's Character Stressed.

Defense Attorney M. J. Fulton, of Richmond, followed Vicars.

He recalled testimony of persons who had lived with the Maxwells, and who described Trigg as a quarrelsome man when he was drinking.

"He was drinking that day," Fulton shouted, "and nobody can deny that.

"Now they describe this little girl as a murderess. The trustees of Wise County didn't think so, when she was graduated from normal college. They appointed her as a school teacher. They appointed her to teach your children."

Fulton reminded the jurors that Maxwell, after visiting a series of beer joints, one suspected of selling "corn licker," didn't get home until after midnight.

"He asked where Edith was," Fulton said. "He was told that she had gone to Wise with his own nephew. Was there anything wrong about that?"

"Maxwell, according to Mary Kathryn, yelled 'a man ought to break her damn neck.'

"Now the prosecution asks you to believe that Edith killed her father with an ax when she got home.

"Where is the ax? They insinuate that it is at the bottom of the Pound River.

"They tell you that he was killed in bed, and they carried him to the kitchen.

"If Edith killed him, would she run out to get the doctor? He was dying then. No, she would have waited until the breath had left him before she ran for the doctor.

"Gentlemen, if I had been beating my daughter as Trigg Maxwell was beating Edith, I would expect her to hit me over the head with a slipper. So would you."

Funds for the defense of the former school teacher, being conducted by The Washington Post, reached $607.02 as new contributors yesterday sent checks totaling $10.

Christmas Tree Trade Booms in Washington; Demand Exceeds Supply as Carloads Roll In Spruce, Balsom Advised for Capital Dwellers in Apartments.

If the trade in Christmas trees is a barometer of prosperity, Washington can forget there ever was a depression. Local dealers in Yuletide greenery report business is better this year than it has been in a decade, and that the chief problem now is how to get enough trees to supply the demand.

Carloads of Canadian spruce and balsam are coming into the Capital every day and more "are rolling in this direction," according to reports from car record clerks at freight depots. Pines and firs are also being shipped in from Maine and Vermont, while trucks piled high with Virginia and Maryland short-leaf pines and cedars, and long-leaf pines and hemlock from the Carolinas will be rumbling into the city from now until December 23.

"And yet we're not going to have enough to supply all our customers," said one dealer, whose wholesale and retail stands disposed of approximately 15,000 trees last year. "We'll handle at least 18,000 before this season is over," he said yesterday, "and if orders continue to come in as thick and fast as they have the last two or three days, we'll have at least 500 we can't fill."

Whether customers prefer spruce, fir or cedar depends largely on their living quarters and the section of the city in which they reside, according to G. W. Bayliss, who runs the largest wholesale Christmas-tree stand in Washington. "We've been taking orders here since December 10," he avered, "and we have noticed this year, as in previous years, residents of certain sections prefers certain types of trees."

Spruce, Balsam Popular.

If you live in an apartment in the northwest part of Washington, chances are you will want either a spruce of balsam Christmas tree, according to Bayliss. "These trees take up the smallest space and stand heat better than some of the others," he said. White spruce, so-called because its light green leaves have a silver tint, is very popular this season. So is red spruce. "But of course you can't beat the balsam fir for fragrance," he continued, "or the pines that grow around here in Maryland and Virginia."

The pines are favorites with residents in the Northeast and Southeast section, where there are more houses than apartments. "These stand heat and keep from shedding longer than any other Christmas trees," Bayliss said. "They'll last a couple of months."

About 25 per cent of his customers prefer cedars for Christmas trees, and a much smaller number order hemlocks. "The latter last the shortest time of any, and are generally used not as Christmas trees, but as other decoration," he continued. "Most of the hemlocks sold here come from the Carolinas."

The average customer bent on buying a small Yuletide tree selects it by appearance rather than by name, but those who want the bigger ones usually order either a cedar or a pine. The average height of a tree for a church, a hotel or the lobby of an apartment house is from 12 to 14 feet; for a home, from 6 to 8 feet, and for an apartment from 3 to 5 feet.

White Paint Spray.

The newest fashion in Christmas trees is achieved by having a short needle pine sprayed with a white paint that glistens at night and keeps the leaves for at least a month. A "snowy" pine costs about twice as much as a green one.

For the past two or three years the Forest Service has been conducting a campaign urging farmers to grow holly and Christmas trees as a cash crop. The type to be cultivated depends largely on which kind is suited to the locality where it is to be grown. The spruces vie with the firs in popularity as Christmas trees, but as a rule in the South and West they grow at high altitudes which make them difficult to get, and are therefore supplanted by less suitable but more accessible conifers. Black and red spruce are commonly seen in New England cities, in New York and in Philadelphia. Pines are in great demand for Christmas trees when fir and spruce are not available at reasonable prices.

In the South custom has established the popularity of cedars for Christmas trees; the "pine with a plume" is favored in the Carolinas; the spruce and fir in New England; the redwood in certain parts of California; the spruce, fir and native scrub pine in Maryland and Virginia.

Some authorities say that the Druids first popularized the trimmed tree as a symbol of seasonal merry-making. Others credit King Solomon with being the first to sanction the use of evergreens for religious festivals; while still others believe that what corresponds to our Christmas tree made its initial appearance in Germany in the middle ages. Before the mariage of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, the Yuletide tree was unknown in England. But from the time when the Pilgrims gathered for their first Christmas celebration in America, the tree—whether it is spruce, cedar, fir or hemlock—has been this country's chief symbol of Christmas festivities. The United States consumes annually from 6 to 10 million Christmas trees, according to estimates on file with the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture.

France Must Arm, Daladier Declares

Paris, Dec. 16 (AP).—Edouard Daladier, vice premier and minister of national defense, tonight declared it France's duty to make all necessary sacrifices for national defense as long as France's "appeal to reason of men and the wisdom of their governments is not heard."

Ho told the executive committee of the Radical Socialist Party that all parties of the people's front, including the Communists, had agreed to give all necessary credits for national defense.

Meanwhile, the total 1937 government expenses, as set up prior to the opening of formal debate on the new budget, were 64,076,207,671 francs ($2,947,505,552), compared with this year's total of 46,537,000,000 francs ($2,140,702,000).

Extraordinary expenses for arms, men and munitions accounted for the largest single item in the budget, on which the Chamber of Deputies completed action on all estimates except that for the ministry of finance.

'Water Over Dam' Makes Real Thing Of Greenbelt Lake

Announcement of the step was made by Frank Schmitt, director of the construction division, Resettlement Administration.

He pointed out that as soon as the work of building a beach and bathing and boating facilities is completed, Washingtonians and residents of nearby Maryland and Virginia will have their first large lake within easy reach.

The lake was built as part of the recreation plan for the Resettlement Administration's low-rent community for 1,000 families, now nearing completion at Berwyn, Md. The artificial body of water covers a 25-acre area. It will be used for skating in the winter, as well as fishing, boating and swimming in the summer. The Bureau of Fisheries stocked it with 20,000 bass, crappie, blue gills, perch and catfish at the time of President Roosevelt's visit November 13.

Nazis Print Articles Repudiated by Ford

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—The nonsectarian anti-Nazi League tonight dispatched a telegram to Henry Ford, urging the Detroit manufacturer to prevent further publication and sale of a book called "The International Jew."

Samuel Untermyer, president of the league, said the book was printed in Germany and was offered for sale here. He telegraphed Ford that the auto magnate's name was carried as author of the book because it was largely a reproduction of articles once carried in Ford's Dearborn Independent. The Dearborn Independent articles were halted on the settlement of a libel suit, after Ford repudiated those articles.

Comedy Livens Court Hearing On 'Iron Claws'

Alarm Clock Prize Breaks Quiet as Experts Testify.

Comedy enlivened District Court yesterday in the second day's trial of the "iron claw" machine question —"Is it a gaming device or is it a game of skill?"

The sudden ringing of an alarm clock that had been taken from the playing board of a machine being used in demonstration before Justice Jesse C. Adkins and a jury suddenly injected a noisy interlude in the hearing. Justice Adkins joined attorneys and spectators in a hearty laugh at the unexpected clanging.

From then on, the testimony ranged from that of Dr. Herbert Grossman, who said he had spent several hundred dollars in the machines and had accumulated property valued at $1,000 from them to other testimony that some players had no luck at all.

Technique Explained.

Dr. Grossman explained how the machines were "dressed" so that it was well nigh impossible for the player to get the "claw" to hang onto anything. He said he never played machines that were "tightly" dressed.

Some times, he said, articles were chained together below the surface of the small candy drops surrounding them so that there was small chance of the claw taking them out of the machine.

Again, the cellophane wrappings of some of the more desirable articles, sloping toward the top, made the hazard somewhat unusual, and in one instance a rubber band had been used to hold a particular item where it had been placed.

Other Experts Called.

His testimony followed that of others who, utilizing the vernacular of the average player, explained the practice of the veteran players. These included the well-known "spinner play" which consists of the player shaking the control wheel, shaking it more or less violently as it is about to slide away from a desired article.

It seems, it was shown, that the "shake" tends to make the claw grip more firmly. It is a favorite maneuver of the veterans.

The machines are now without judicial disfavor because of a temporary injunction requiring police to let them alone. The Government is seeking to dissolve the injunction, while machine operators are striving to have it made permanent.

One Missing, 3 Hurt In Oil Plant Explosion

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 16 (AP).—A terrific explosion tonight wrecked the Golco Oil Co. bulk gasoline and filling station in downtown Columbus, seriously injuring three employes and leaving another missing in the debris.

Cause of the blast was not determined, although witnesses agreed it originated in the gasoline mixing plant at the rear of the building. The missing man was Herbert Ketchpool. Search for him was hampered by the flames.

pellants stated, "because it is based on the false representations that no trainmen would be discharged or forced to quit the service of the Capital Transit Co. by reason of the introduction of one-man operation."

Discussing the anticipated effects of the $1 pass elimintaion, the brief states:

"The appellants aver that the termination of the use of the $1 pass will greatly diminish the number of riders to be carried and the corresponding operating expenses of the Capital Traction Co., and at the same time materially increase the gross revenue of the said company."

The court is asked to render the one-man car order inoperative during the litigation, to direct the commission to receive additional evidence upon the increase in revenue by reason of the abandonment of the $1 pass, and to direct the commission to suspend the order until final adjudication of the appeal.

Recall Filing of Petition.

The brief recites that a permit for a rehearing was filed with the commission within 30 days after issuance of the order by the then people's counsel.

The commission, it charged, denied the petition "without adequate consideration."

Issuance of the order by the commission followed a prolonged hearing in midsummer. The commission held that the financial condition of the company, together with the evidence as to the safety and speed of the one-man cars, made approval of the company's petition imperative.

It placed a restriction upon the company, however, by stating in the order that all future purchases of one-man cars must be in the class of trolleys at least equal to the quality of the President's Conference cars.

Zeitung in Danger Over Food Warning

Berlin, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Frankfurter Zeitung's recent warning that Germany faces a 1,000,000-ton wheat shortage may be the straw to break the back of that internationally known, liberally-inclined paper, reliable sources reported tonight.

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, the propaganda minister, was said to be considering withdrawal of the newspaper's publication permit.

The Frankfurter Zeitung is the only German paper to have bluntly predicted a food catastrophe ahead for the third Reich. It is estimated available wheat supplies at 4,000,000 tons, and said Germany needed 5,000,000 tons normally.

Meanwhile, regimented menus became the contribution of restaurant keepers to the Reich's four-year self-sufficiency plan.

Beginning January 1, the menu will be on a semiwar-time basis, with a limited number of dishes and emphasis on fish.

Revised House Program Waits New Congress

By Felix Bruner.

A new effort to revive and coordinate Government subsidized housing activities will be started with the opening of Congress. With the failure of a housing bill to pass in the last session the Government home building program at present consists largely of finishing projects already under way, or at least on paper.

Parallel with this building activity has been the work of Government agencies in assisting the financing of private construction. This work, centered principally in the Federal Housing Administration and the Home Loan Bank Board, has been booming.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, is planning to reintroduce a bill calling for a substantial appropriation for Government subsidized housing. He is being urged from some sources to confine his plan to providing grants in aid to local housing authorities, and to keep the Government out of the construction business.

Slum Clearance Bloc Active.

Another proposal is that the law provide the Government-subsidized houses be confined to such structures as actually replace slums and rehouse slum dwellers. The complaint has become general, and officials do not deny that it has some justification, that Government housing does not provide buildings in which slum dwellers can afford to live.

The principal Government building activities at present are being conducted by the Public Works Administration, which is struggling to complete its 51 housing projects, and the Resettlement Administration's subsistence homesteads and Greenbelt dwellings. None of these houses are designed to permit occupancy by persons in the lowest income group.

Few Government bureaus ever wish to drop any undertaking once started, but the Federal Housing Administration will be in the peculiar position of attempting to abandon one of its functions in the face of strong opposition. The section of the law which authorizes it to make modernization loans will expire April 1, and the FHA believes that it should be discontinued. Building material and home equipment dealers, however, are expected to insist that it be continued.

Advertising Criticized.

The FHA since it was organized has insured modernization and repair loans totaling $486,420,696. Officials believe that this has given modernization and repair activities a fair start and that private enterprise can carry on after April 1. One of the activities much appreciated by material and equipment dealers, but criticized in some other sources, has been the intensive modernization advertising campaign carried on by the FHA.

On June 30 the section of the law which provides that the Treasury shall guarantee FHA debentures issued in event of mortgage foreclosures will expire. The FHA is expected to recommend a continuance of this provision, although at the same time it has been pointed out that the organization has accumulated $15,000,000 in a revolving fund as a "cushion" to take up any losses caused by defaulting home owners. In some quarters it is felt that this should be sufficient insurance, especially in view of the fact that out of 142,280 mortgages accepted for insurance, there have been only five foreclosures.

Up to December 1, the FHA had done business totaling $1,125,839,240, including home mortgages accepted for insurance, modernization and repair notes insured and commitments on large scale projects. The figure also includes $70,411,046 of mortgages in process of being examined. From July through October, 54 per cent of the home mortgages insured were for new construction, the remainder being refinancing. The FHA now has an income of about $500,000 a month from mortgage premiums.

250,000 Homes Constructed.

Home building as the year closes has been greater than was anticipated at the beginning of 1936. In cities of 2,500 or over a total of 200,000 units were constructed. Including buildings outside cities, it is estimated that home building reached at least 250,000 units. This figure is twice that of last year and about equal 1931 construction. There is no indication of a tendency for building to slow down and it is estimated that in 1937 the total number of units will reach 350,000 or 400,000.

Rents have been going up as the number of vacancies has declined. The Commerce Department's index on housing costs (rent) increased from 73.9 in January to 80.8 in October. This considers the 1923 average cost as 100. The index figure for October, 1932, the low point, was 69.6.

On the other hand, there has been only a small increase in the cost of building materials. The Commerce Department's index for October was 87.3, compared with 86.1 in October, 1935, and 70.7 in October, 1932. The 1926 price is taken as 100.

Residence Building Low.

Residential construction, however, still is far below normal. Taking the 1923-25 average as 100, the index figure for residential construction in October was only 42.

Experts say there still is plenty of money available for home mortgages and Government activities are expected to keep interest rates low. In this connection there is considerable pressure to increase the power of the FHA to insure loans, especially on small houses, up to 90 per cent. The present limit is 80 per cent of appraised valuation. There is considerable question, however, whether banks generally will agree of 90 per cent mortgages. It is understood that the FHA will not oppose the 90 per cent plan.

Riders Declare Transit System 'Obsolete' Here

Overcrowding, Poor Service Draws Fire in Survey by Post.

(Because of the complaints about mass transportation in Washington, arising with the approaching discontinuance of the $1 pass, institution of court action to prevent an increase in one-man cars, and the usual havoc winter plays with the system here, The Post yesterday assigned a reporter to obtain a consensus of opinion from street car and bus riders.)

Street car and bus riders are universal in their condemnation of overcrowded transportation system. Some attacked the degree of overcrowding they found in Washington as "beyond decency."

They saw danger in badly-worn brakes, and scored the inconvenient transfer-point systems.

Men and women alike attacked rush-hour tieups and inadequacy of equipment to handle mass transportation in the metropolitan area.

Overcrowding and service changes brought about by the recent rerouting program were deplored by Miss Madeleine McGrath, of 2203 Fifteenth street northwest.

"The other day I was able to get off a packed Fourteenth street car only by courtesy of a stranger who pulled me by the hand after he had fought his way out ahead of me. The congestion is absolutely inhumane.

"Since the rerouting, very few Fourteenth street cars come by even at 4:30 closing time," continued Miss McGrath, who works in the Interior Building, Seventeenth and F streets northwest. "Usually you must take your choice of walking to Pennsylvania avenue and taking a car from which you must transfer, or boarding a bus or car in front of the building. In any case, it is necessary to transfer, which means a walk of two blocks or so in all kinds of weather. The chances are you will stand all the way home."

Long Waits Protested.

James A. Ryder, of 3311 Quesada street, a staff member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, cited the congestion of Chevy Chase buses during the evening rush period. His office is in the Navy Building Eighteenth street and Constitution avenue.

"The last through bus leaves this building around 5 p. m.," said Ryder.

"When we work overtime and miss the last one, we must walk or take a bus to Connecticut avenue and K. Many times, at that corner, I've waited as long as 45 minutes for a Chevy Chase coach. They came by often, of course, but they were loaded and did not stop.

"Coming to work mornings isn't so bad because I board the bus at Chevy Chase Circle, the starting point, and seats are plentiful. It's full, though, by the time we reach the Bureau of Standards. People waiting for transportation from that point southward face the same problem I do in the evening when I miss the 5 o'clock Navy Building-Chevy Chase bus."

William F. Haiber, of 1406 Ridge place southeast, said he bought an auto after 12 years of taking street cards to the Navy Building solely because the vibraton of the electric carriers affected his health.

"Day after day of standing in cars where you could feel the mechanism grinding away beneath your feet almost made me a nervous wreck," said Haiber.

The wrath of Dorothea Lewis, Interior Building, was centered on the slow morning service on the Fourteenth street line. She lives at 3216 Thirteenth street northwest.

Forced to Use Cab Often.

"Most of the time I have to take a taxicab to be sure I'll get to work on time. The street car jams are worst between Thomas Circle and New York avenue. In the vicinity of Park and Columbia roads, one may have to wait 15 minutes or more for a Potomac Park car; then when it comes along it creeps downtown."

Another employe, who asked that her name be withheld, described the sickening sensation she recently had when a car's brakes failed to take hold and the overloaded trolley skidded to within no more than a foot of a taxicab stalled on the tracks.

"And the rails were dry, too," she added.

One commentator told of overhearing a motorman, yielding his car to another pilot at the Decatur street car barns, warn his successor to "be very careful because the brakes on this crate are shot."

Miss Mary McColligan, of the Office of National Capital Parks, Navy Building, described the difficulty of reaching her work from 1726 M street northwest because of the scarcity of Potomac Park cars.

Another Government worker noted the increasing frequency of street cars that bear no labels or too many of them. In the one case, you must ask the conductor or motorman where he is going; in the other, you must ask which is correct, the "Takoma" on the side of the window or the "Fourteenth and Decatur" displayed at the top rear.

Still others complained that crew members are not familiar with the transit system, sometimes being unable to answer such a simple question as where to transfer to a certain bus. Among other grumbles were the old-fashioned street cars with two long rows of seats that face each other, long waits followed by a string of the street cars desired and the illumination of street cars.

Power Firm Seeks To Defer City Plant

Greensboro, N. C., Dec. 16 (AP).—The Duke Power Co., of Charlotte, and J. P. Williamson, a taxpayer, filed an injunction petition in North Carolina Superior Court here today against a proposal of the City of High Point to build a $5,766,000 power plant with the aid of PWA funds. A hearing was set for December 21.

The Duke complaint alleged that the project would be in violation of the State constitution's limitation of corporate indebtedness, and also of the Federal Constitution's provisions protecting private property and enterprise.

Pruden Takes Post as Pastor At First Baptist

Ex-Shanghai University Professor Succeeds Dr. Weaver.

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, former professor at the University of Shanghai, China, was formally installed as pastor of the First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets northwest. He succeeds Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, who resigned in May.

Dr. Pruden, a native of Chase City, Va., was educated at the University of Richmond and from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky. He also studied at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

He entered the ministry as pastor of the historic First Baptist Church, of Petersburg, Va., resigning that position after five years of service to teach in China.

Dr. Weaver resigned as pastor of the First Baptist Church here to become executive secretary of the Columbia Association of Baptist Churches last May.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the District Board of Commissioners, and high Protestant church officials attended the brief induction ceremonies. Dr. H. W. Millington, acting pastor, made the invocation. A reception in the church hall followed the services.

Club Will Feast Needy Youngsters

Plans for this year's Christmas party have been completed by the American Business Club of Washington, and they will bring joy to the otherwise destitute children of the metropolitan area, in co-operation with the Women's Club of Bethesda, which has donated the use of their clubhouse.

Children will be picked up at the Hay-Adams House next Wednesday, after the club luncheon, and taken to Bethesda, where Arch McDonald, the radio announcer, will introduce them to Santa Claus. The children then will have ice cream and cake, nuts and candy, and receive gifts while Santa tells them stories.

Robert T. Norman is general chairman of the entertainment, and he is being assisted by John Rowland.

Advisory Council To Report Jan. 28

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—The executive committee of the Department of Commerce's business advisory council compiled data today on slum clearance, housing, improvement of wages and working conditions, and absorption of relief workers into private industry—all preliminary to a final report to be submitted to President Roosevelt.

George H. Mead, of Dayton, Ohio, chairman of the committee and advisory council, said the report would be given to Secretary of Commerce Roper January 28.

Mead said the council's executive committee was giving no consideration at this time to various proposals for a modified re-enactment of the invalidated NRA.

Mother of 4 Acquitted In Slaying of Husband

Paragould, Ark., Dec. 16 (AP).—A Greene County circuit court jury acquitted Mrs. Lila Ray, 30-year-old mother of four children, tonight of a murder charge in the September 3 slaying of her husband, C. A. Ray, 33.

Mrs. Ray testified yesterday Ray had mistreated and threatened her after she accused him of keeping company with a woman who lived near their home 20 miles north of here.

Mrs. Ray pleaded self-defense and temporary insanity to the State's charge she shot Ray in the back with a pistol after a quarrel.

Five Guards Wounded In French Party Riot

Clermont Ferrand, France (Thursday), Dec. 17 (AP).—Five mobile guards were gravely wounded and several police injured early this morning during rioting after a meeting of Jacques Doriot's French Popular party.

Crowds sacked a cafe and broke windows in shops in the central square after Doriot and his principal followers had departed. A number of counter-demonstrators, reported to be Communists, were injured.

A Home Is Just Incidental Now, Fishbein Says in Center Speech

Editor of Medical Association Journal Says Only Food Outranks Automobile in U. S. Family Budget as Large Audience Chuckles.

Laughter rang through the Jewish Community Center auditorium last night as Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the American Medical Association Journal, outlined the "Changing Social Order."

Dr. Fishbein told of the contrast between life in 1890 and the present to a packed auditorium, which was highly amused by his satirical contrast of the periods.

"Home life in 1890," Fishbein said, "consisted of getting up before dawn, eating one of three cereals—oatmeal, wheat or farina—going to work, returning, maybe, to play a little cribbage and to bed at 9 o'clock.

"Today," he explained, "a house is just a place in front of the garage. We work unitl 2 p. m., play a little golf, go home to eat, play bridge, then go to a night club, returning about 2 a. m., and wonder when the children will get home."

Our homes, he said, are incidental. In case of sickness, there is not enough room for the patient. He interferes with card playing and radio programs, so he is shifted to the hospital, which is becoming the center of all medical care, including births, Dr. Fishbein said.

"We are born in a hospital, married in a church, die in an automobile and are buried from a mortuary. Home is a place to light in between," he remarked.

The most significant change in the social order in the past half century is the invention of the automobile, which has completely altered our lives," Fishbein said.

More money is spent for automobiles than for medical care or any item of the American budget but food, which, he said, we had to buy to live.

Another significant change he stressed since the turn of the century is the birth of children. Millions of dollars are spent by mothers who consult doctors before the blessed event, he explained. Weeks before a child is delivered the mother goes to an expensive hospital to be cared for and remains sometimes weeks afterward.

Export Decrease Forecast for 1936

By the Associated Press.

The smallest export balance in many years was forecast for 1936 yesterday by Commerce Department foreign trade experts who said the maritime strike was substantially responsible.

Not in 40 years has the excess of exports over imports run less than $100,000,000. A drop below that figure, they said, was an inevitability for the current 12 months.

The strike, hitting exports with much greater severity than imports, fell at a time when normally a much greater volume of goods is shipped abroad than is received from foreign countries.

Last year, for instance, the excess of exports was $98,435,000 at the end of October. In November and December, it gained $137,000,000 to establish the figure for the year as a whole at $235,000,000.

This year, the end of October saw the export excess at $20,000,000.

Ship Calls for Help Off Guadalupe Isle

San Diego, Calif., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—The Coast Guard radio station tonight reported a distress call from the John Crickett, believed to be a yacht or fishing vessel, which said the boat was ashore off Guadalupe Island and being pounded to pieces.

The message was signed by William Dietz, captain of the vessel, and said it needed help immediately. Guadalupe Island is about 250 miles south of here.

Quarter-Ton Rocker Gift for 500-Pound Man

Shell, Wyo., Dec. 16 (AP).—A quarter-ton rocking chair will be a Christmas gift for H. C. Hormel, 500-pound storekeeper and postmaster here.

Louise Hormel, Sheridan (Wyo.) nurse, ordered the chair for her father from a factory at Leavenworth, Kans.

Hormel, more than 6 feet tall, has been unable to lie down for several years because of a chronic ailment.

Signs Non-Existent, Motorist Dismissed

Ruling police have no right to penalize motorists who violate non-existent signs, Judge Walter J Casey yesterday dismissed a parking violation charge against Mrs. Charles O. Hardy, of Avenal, Md., who had been given a ticket by Policeman E. A. Horsley.

Horsley, who has gained city-wide recognition for making numerous odd arrests, tagged Mrs. Hardy's car on H street, between Seventh and Eighth streets. In court he admitted the signs supposed to be there were not. Judge Casey ordered Mrs. Hardy's collateral returned.

Other arrests attributed recently to Horsley are the seizure of a blind pencil peddler and the ticketing of a street car motorman for crossing against an amber light while he was riding in the car.

Judge Obliges Robbers Anxious to Quit Liquor

Roy O'Hara and Rudolph Coglin, each 30, pleaded guilty to robbing a store.

"I think if I get in the penitentiary I can get away from liquor," said O'Hara.

"I'll take the same," said Coglin.

Judge George F. Dunklee obliged with 1-to-10 year sentences.

Supreme Court Hears Attacks On Salary Law

Minimum Wage Measure for Washington State Women Held Illegal.

By the United Press.

Washington State's minimum wage law for women went under attack in the Supreme Court yesterday with two members of the court absent.

Justice James C. McReynolds, absent at least for the day because of other business, was recorded as eligible to participate by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, although no such action was taken in regard to Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, who is ill. Stone, however, has improved greatly and may be able to take part in final deliberations.

In view of the narrow margin by which similar cases have been decided by the court, the vote of either McReynolds, a conservative, or Stone, a liberal, might have an important effect on the final decision.

E. L. Skeel, Seattle attorney for the West Coast Hotel Co., opened attack on the constitutionality of the law. He will resume argument today.

Skeel said the Washington law, enacted in 1913, made no provision for fixing minimum wages on the value of services rendered, but at a rate which will insure the "necessary costs of living" and maintain health. In this respect, he pointed out, the act differs from the New York statute held unconstiutional last spring.

Skeel maintained, however, that the Washington law is similar to the District of Columbia minimum wage act held unconstitutional 13 years ago.

The Supreme Court of Washington upheld the law. The test case was brought by Elsie Parrish, a chambermaid in a Wenatchee hotel, who sued for $216.19 in back wages which she said were due because the law set a $14.50 a week minimum for her type of work.

Cream, 2,000 Pints, Is Sent to Russia For Envoy's Wife

Juliustown, N. J., Dec. 16 (AP).—Shipment of 2,000 pints of extra heavy cream for the use of Mrs. Marjorie Post Davies, wife of Joseph E. Davies, new United States ambassador to Russia, was reported today by John Hamilton, manager of a local creamery.

Hamilton said Mrs. Davies had enough cream to last about two winters "if she was careful."

Hamilton said the cream was packed in dry ice. He refused to give the cost except to acknowledge it was "a pretty big milk bill."

Sara Churchill, Oliver Will Wed

Philadelphia, Dec. 16 (AP).—Vic Oliver, orchestra leader and comedian, said tonight he would marry Sarah Churchill, 22, daughter of Winston Churchill, next week.

"We will be married December 22, 23 or 24, at an undetermined place," said Oliver, who is appearing at a local theater.

Miss Churchill arrived in New York September 20, followed a day later by her brother, Randolph, reluctant to say anything "about my personal affairs."

She was met at the time by Oliver, who declared Miss Churchill had come to America only to accept a position in the show in which he was then appearing.

Sesquicentennial Tree to Be Planted

Columbia Lodge of Elks will plant an oak tree Saturday at 3 p. m. on the grounds of the club, 301 Rhode Island avenue northwest, marking the sesquicentennial of the framing of the Constitution, which occurs next year.

The tree has been registered on the national honor roll of the American Tree Association, which is directing the tree-planting phase of the sesquicentennial.

Speakers announced yesterday by J. I. Highsmith, chairman of the civil liberties committee of Columbia Lodge, will include Dr. C. F. Parker, of Howard University, and Prof. J. C. Bruce, of the public school system.

AAA Criticizes Keystone Club In Graft Probe

Counsel Makes Statement on Appearing Before Prince Georges Jury.

Indirectly attacking methods used by the Keystone Automobile Club in its efforts to uncover an alleged bonding graft ring, Charles C. Collins, counsel for the American Automobile Association, yesterday testified before the Prince Georges County grand jury at Upper Marlboro.

Collins, who said he had been invited to appear before the jury by State's Attorney Alan Bowie, declared in a statement prepared for the press:

"Obviously, the A. A. A. is vitally concerned with every effort to safeguard the rights of motorists, whether in Prince Georges County or elsewhere. However, we never have felt that complaints against individual officers should be made the basis for wholesale charges against law enforcement officers generally."

The A. A. A., a competitor of the Keystone Automobile Club, declined a recent invitation to investigate reports of corrupt practices in Prince Georges County, it was revealed.

Previously Studied.

Attorneys for the A. A. A. did conduct an investigation of a bonding racket a number of years ago. Referring to this, Collins said of the present investigation:

"Whether the practices in Prince Georges County similar to those brought to light by the A. A. A. through court procedure are still in existence is a matter for the grand jury to decide."

Collins' appearance before the jury was a surprise move. It was the first time the American Automobile Association has been mentioned in connection with this investigation.

Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland State Senate and leader of the Democratic Party in Prince Georges County, could not be reached at his home in Upper Marlboro last night for comment. Senator Sasscer is a member of the board of directors of the American Automobile Association.

Action Today Possible.

The grand jury was believed to be preparing to report its findings to Judge Joseph C. Mattingly today. Bowie, however, declined to say when the report was expected.

At its session yesterday, the jury heard testimony from Louis Lebowitz, Mount Rainier attorney, who began the police-bonding investigation, and William C. Fraser, Baltimore auditor, who spent a week checking police records. Five motorists also told their stories to the investigating body.

George A. Mahan Dies; Was Mark Twain Fan

A prominent Missouri lawyer for more than 60 years, Mahan was nationally known for his efforts to perpetuate the memory of Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain). Years ago, he bought and gave to the City of Hannibal the home in which Clemens spent his boyhood.

Duke Convicted Of Attempting To Sway Jurors

Disbarred Attorney Plans Appeal; Faces Possible 6-Month Jail Term.

Jesse C. Duke, disbarred Washington attorney, was convicted yesterday in Federal Court at Alexandria, Va., of attempting to influence an action of the Federal Grand Jury.

Judge Luther C. Way said he would sentence Duke today. The maximum fine is $1,000 or six months in jail, or both.

Although he denied any wrongdoing, Duke admitted to the court that he handed to Joseph L. Crupper, grand jury foreman, a note asking permission to argue before the grand jury that he should not be indicted for harboring Rep. John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles, who were being sought for commitment to prison on charges of conspiracy to sell a West Point appointment.

Duke announced he will appeal his conviction. He will be tried in Richmond on the conspiracy indictment.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Irenee duPont Gave $116,630 For Campaign

All Donations Are Made to Anti-New Deal Units During Drive.

By the Associated Press.

Campaign contributions from a duPont to anti-New Deal causes and from cabinet members to the Democratic chest were included yesterday in reports to the Senate Campaign Funds Committee.

Irenee duPont, of Wilmington, Del., reported his contributions to various organizations totaled $166,630 made up of 32 items, none of which exceeded $5,100.

Secretary Morgenthau contributed $2,050 to the Democratic campaign and Secretary Woodring gave a like amount.

Representative Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, who headed the Democratic National Committee's speaking bureau, contributed $1,000, while Senator George, Georgia Democrat, gave $2,070.

Republican contributors reporting included: H. F. Brown, Wilmington, Del., $10,000; Joseph E. Widener, Elkins Park, Pa., $10,000; William M. Potte, Wyebrooke, Pa., $10,050; Mrs. Mabel L. Kent, Philadelphia, $15,000; Mrs. E. Parlamee Prentice, New York, $15,000; John A. Roebling, Bernardsville, N. J., $25,000; W. S. and M. W. Carpenter, Wilmington, $10,000; R. M. Carpenter, Montchanin, Del., $21,000 (Republicans, Jeffersonian Democrats and crusaders); W. R. Coe, New York, $17,000; E. C. Grace, Bethlehem, Pa., $10,000; Harold F. Pitcairn, Pittsburgh, $15,925; C. McCormick, Chicago, $11,000; E. T. Stotesbury, Chestnut Hills, Pa., $11,000.

Nathan Miller, New York, $3,000; Dwight F. Davis, $6,000. P. D. Block, Chicago, reported a contribution of $5,100 to a Republican cause and $1,000 to the campaign fund for Gov. Horner, of Illinois, a Democrat.

Democratic contributors included: Samuel Kramer, New York, $25,000 (loan); W. A. Julian, Washington, D. C., $7,600; Henry S. Hooker, New York, $5,500; Jacob Ruppert, New York, $5,000.

Leaders Expect Hamilton Vote Of Confidence

Fish Says Western G. O. P. Will Line Up Solidly Against Chairman.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—Several Republican leaders freely predicted tonight that John D. M. Hamilton would retain chairmanship of the Republican National Committee.

Walter S. Hallanan, committeeman from West Virginia, said sentiment in a meeting of the executive committee indicated a "unanimous" vote of confidence would be accorded Hamilton when the full group assembles tomorrow to decide whether to accept Hamilton's proffered resignation.

Ralph E. Williams, of Oregon, told reporters he expected "little important opposition" to the Kansan. Three other committee members—Representative J. Will Taylor, of Tennessee; Mrs. John E. Hillman, of Colorado, and John E. Jackson, of Louisiana—also opined Hamilton should remain at the party's helm.

Representative J. Hamilton Fish, of New York, who said he held the proxies of several unnamed committee members, predicted "the West will line up" against the chairman.

Sixteen of the 22 members of the executive committee conferred for two hours this afternoon. Hamilton said his resignation was "not even mentioned."

He reported the matter of determining policies and financial moves to put the party on the comeback trail had been left for consideration of the full committee.

Hamilton's program for tomorrow's session includes reading of the treasurer's report and discussion of the chairman's resignation offer. Then the participants will be free to advance whatever plans they might have for restoring the party after its overwhelming November defeat.

Mrs. Charles P. Plunkett will have her for the holidays her son-in?law and daughter, Comdr. and Mrs. Richard Stockton Field, and their sons, Midshipman R. S. Field, jr., and Fearn Field.

Government Due to Inherit Thriving Hamburg Business

Sandwich Dispensary, Legally Non-Existent, Survives Wrecking Operations on Site for New Federal Building Through Technical Quirk.

Picture your Uncle Sam, his striped trousers mottled with mustard stain, standing behind a hamburger counter and advising us in clipped Yankee accent to step up and get 'em while they're hot.

Impossible? Unthinkable?

Certainly not. Indeed, it's quite within the realm of possibility because 16 months or so hence the Federal Government is destined to fall heir—lock, stock and onions—to one of the busiest hamburger dispensaries in Washington.

It is the Little Tavern, in lower Fourteenth street, opposite the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Robert McFadden, vice president of the restaurant chain, yesterday explained the slightly dizzy situation.

Up to a few months ago there were two delicatessens, a cafeteria, a grill and the 'burger emporium in the block, not to mention a bank, apartments and other buildings. Then along came the wreckers to make way for the new Bureau of Engraving and Printing annex and pretty soon there was nothing standing but the sandwich shop.

Moved Out of Way.

Its survival came about in this way. After promising the Government it would leave and accepting a sum to compensate for demolition of the little building, the tavern management discovered the contractor was not averse to allowing the restaurant to remain if it were moved out of his way.

"While the contractor is working on the job," said McFadden, "he has full control over the site. So we arranged an agreement whereby we would pay him rental for our space and move the structure out of his way."

Accordingly, the white-front hamburger house was picked up and moved 38 feet south—its original site was where the main entrance of the annex will be—and turned around so it faced north instead of Fourteenth street (west) as before.

"Business went on as usual and not a hamburger or a customer was disturbed while the moving was going on," McFadden said proudly. "Flexible gas, light, water and sewerage lines made it possible."

Closed Two Minutes.

Previously, though, the mustard paddles were given a compulsory rest, but not for long. That came about when the tavern, keeping its word to the Government to give up shop, put out the lights and turned the kyes over to a Federal agent. He, in turn, gave them to the contractor, who then passed them back to McFadden, as per their understanding.

"I guess it took about two minutes," said the vice president.

He figures the shop is good for another year, maybe more, on the site. It won't interfere with construction operations, he said, because the annex is deeply set back from the sidewalk.

But when the annex is completed in 1938 and there is the spectacle of a buy-them-by-the-sack station planked saucily in front of a glistening, new dough factory—well, that is where Uncle Sam comes in.

"While, technically, the tavern does not exist at the present time as far as the Federal Government is concerned, the structure will be on the hands of the United States when the contractor gets through."

And that's why Uncle Sam, unless he objects to an aromatic wart on his new currency plant, an object which is not improbable, may be in the hamburger business before so very long.

Wallace Says Farm Tenancy Aid Inadequate

Costs of Problem Studied by President's Committee at Conference.

After hearing Secretary Wallace declare that present estimates of the cost of solving the farm-tenant problem are far from adequate the President's committee on farm tenancy at its first meeting yesterday began a discussion of possible solutions. The committee has been instructed to submit a tenancy program to President Roosevelt by February 1.

After calling attention to the fact that 2,865,155 farms were operated by tenants in 1935, Wallace declared:

"The figure of $40,000,000 has been suggested at various times as being sufficient to make a beginning toward financing the purchase of farms by tenants. An appropriation of this amount would take care of only about one-third of the annual increase in tenants. If some way could be found to stop the increase, and the sum of $50,000,000 used annually to reduce the number of tenant farms already in existence, it would require 230 years to eliminate tenancy."

Wallace based his estimate on figures showing that the number of farm tenancies increased from 1930 to 1935 at the rate of 40,158 a year. He estimated that elimination of tenancy would require an investment of $4,000 per farm. He said it would require $133,860,000 a year merely to prevent the increase in farm tenancy.

Poll Is Quoted.

As an indication of the general public interest in the question, the Secretary of Agriculture quoted a poll of the Institute of Public Opinion, published in The Post, showing that 83 per cent of the people would approve a Government program to enable tenants to buy the farms they now rent.

Wallace declared that to an unusual degree, the whole problem is a human problem.

"There are many tenants who have never demonstrated either desire or capacity to attempt ownership," he said.

He added that an additional problem is that of the stranded landowner on unproductive land.

"The heavily mortgaged owners," he said, "are in all too many cases not only destined to become tenants themselves, but also see their children limited to tenancy."

Wallace asked that a long-time, practical program be formed "which will revive hope and opportunities." He gave no hint as to the nature of such a program.

Open Contracts Asked.

The only tenant farmer on the committee, W. L. Blackstone, of Wynne, Ark., asked that the Government encourage the unionization of share-croppers. In addition, he advocated open contracts with landlords which would not require purchase of supplies at a commissary store. These contracts also should provide, he said, for settlement of disputes by arbitration boards, and that interest rates should not exceed maximums fixed by law.

Among the members of the committee are the authors of a book on the subject, "The Collapse of Cotton Tenacy." They are W. W. Alexander, Resettlement administrator; Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Foundation, and Charles S. Johnson, professor of sociology at Fiske University.

The authors proposed that the Government buy land from insurance companies, land banks and others and distribute it in 20 to 40 acre tracts, permitting the occupants to buy the property on easy terms. They also proposed that service agents supervise the operation of the farms and that seeds and fertilizer be supplied and money loaned for animals and equipment. In addition, they advocated co-operative farm colonies and community developments similar to those undertaken by the Resettlement Administration.

Senator Asks Outright Federal Age Pensions

Sen. Hattie W. Caraway, of Jonesboro, Ark., announced yesterday she would sponsor legislation to provide a Federal appropriation of $15 a month for every citizen on state old age pension rolls, regardless of whether the states could provide an equal amount.

ported, strong protest will be made against the primate's words.

The Mayor of Cannes, who sent a bouquet of flowers to Mrs. Simpson yesterday, received the following anonymous note today:

"If you spend the city's money on a woman like that, we will not pay any more taxes."

Edward Gay on Links.

An unimpeachable source said the duke was occupied with the possibility that Mrs. Simpson will come here from Cannes at a later indefinite date.

Even the cold and misty weather of the Enzesfeld golf course, a dubbed tee-shot, the aftermath of a head and earache and the deprecatory words of the Archbishop of Canterbury failed to affect the former British monarch's rising spirits.

Edward's Finances Discussed.

London, Dec. 16 (AP).—Former King Edward's finances were believed to have been the subject of a talk today between his brother, King George VI, and the chancellor of the exchequer, Neville Chamberlain.

Chamberlain, who holds Britain's purse-strings, was received by the new monarch at Buckingham Palace. King George was reported planning to provide Edward $125,000 annually.

BARONESS ROTHSCHILD, hostess at Enzesfeld Castle, defeated the Duke of Windsor during a round of golf played yesterday. The Baroness was the former Elsie Woolf, of Philadelphia.

Talking Mongoose Report to Be Aired to Divert Foes, They Declare.

"we reject entirely Mr. Lambert's theory of persecution for, in this case, the actions of the B. B. C. were fully justified. * * * The B. B. C. did not so much act upon a wrong principle as make an error in judgment in application of the principle to the facts before them."

The report will be debated today and may bring up a full-dress discussion of the administration of the B. B. C. with Gef in a leading role, for it was the talking mongoose who started the slander suit, which started the investigation, which caused the report, and which now is to come to a climax in the Commons debate.

But whether or not Gef can save the archbishop from parliamentary critics is a question, for the B. B. C. is criticized more for broadcasting the churchman's attack on the former King than for telling the world of the talking mongoose.

Thousands of letters have come to B. B. C. and members of Parliament criticizing the archbishop for his "ill-mannered" attack on Edward of Windsor and the B. B. C. for disseminating it.

Critics of the archbishop alleged that the report was published at this time as part of a deliberate plan to enable the government to shift debate from archbishop to Gef. They planned to resist this and to ask Postmaster General Tryon specifically whether he read and approved the archbishop's attack on the former King before it was broadcast—as demanded by law.

Bruce Tossers Defeat St. Mary's Five, 47-17

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 16.—Coach John Laughlin's Bruce High School basketeers of Westernport scored a 47-17 triumph over St. Mary's High School of this city, on the Penn avenue court.

Tally Hanna scored 15 points, while eight other Bruce players made one or more field goals. Hollen led St. Mary's with 10 points.

Bruce held leads throughout, the quarter scores standing 11-5, 21-11 and 32-14.

It's All a Mistake, 'Missing' Lieutenant Found at Quantico

It was all a mistake and the Marines, they announced yesterday, have the situation well in hand.

A few minutes before midnight Tuesday, Washington police were asked to look out for Lieut. Arthur J. Hagel, U. S. M. C., who supposedly had driven away from the Marine post at Quantico, Va., without permission.

Awaiting publication of the results of a general court martial held some time ago, Lieut. Hagel had the freedom of the post but was not to leave its confines. Tuesday night, when he could not be found in his quarters, Quantico sent an alarm to Alexandria police who, in turn, notified the local constabulary.

Yesterday, however, Quantico revealed Lieut. Hagel had never left the reservation, that it was all a mistake. But for the fact a civilian averred he had seen the officer driving toward Washington, an alarm would not have been broadcast in the first place, said Adjutant Kingman.

To Hold Second Dance.

The second of the series of dances at which the commandant and officers of the Washington Navy Yard and station are hosts will be held in the Sail Loft at the Navy Yard on Friday evening from 10 until 1 o'clock.

U. S. Employes Will Aid Post's Toy-Doll Fund

Parties Are Scheduled by Various Groups to Help Needy Children.

Co-operating with The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund, six groups of Federal employes are holding Christmas parties this week-end to help collect toys and money for the District's least-privileged children.

At all of the parties a new toy or doll for the fund is part of the admission, or guests have been asked to bring gifts voluntarily.

A high-light of all six parties will be the portrayal of Santa Claus by Samuel Lubell, conductor of The Post's Federal Diary. Attired in Santa Claus costume he will collect the gifts of toys, dolls and money at one party tonight, and at two more on Friday evening.

At three parties planned for Saturday night, Santa Claus Lubell will be assisted by a troupe of artists from station WJSV, who will help furnish entertainment.

Members of the Social Security Board Union are being asked to bring toys and dolls to a meeting tonight at the Palisades Field House. The program includes a lecture by Norman J. Ware on "Recent Tendencies in the American Labor Movement," and the singing of Christmas carols. The Social Security Singers, accompanied by Mrs. Walter J. Couper, will be featured.

Will Hold Dance.

On Friday night, Agriculture Lodge, No. 31, of the A. F. G. E., will hold a Christmas dance at the Hayloft, 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest. A short skit, "The Home of the Brave," will be put on by a group of players from the Resettlement Lodge. A toy or doll, or cash contribution to The Post Toy and Doll Fund, will be part of the admission.

Members of the Securities and Exchange Commission Union are asked to bring a toy or doll to a meeting of the union at the Thomas Circle Club tomorrow night. Judge John Burns, of the SEC, will be the speaker.

The Agriculture Athletic and Recreational Association is holding a dance in the patio of the Administration Building on Saturday night. Admission will be either 35 cents or 25 cents and a toy or doll for The Post Fund. Part of the proceeds of the party will also go to the Toy and Doll Fund.

Also on Saturday night the Railroad Retirement Board Union is holding a Christmas party in the cafeteria of the board building, Tenth and U streets northwest. Part of the proceeds will go to The Post Toy and Doll Fund.

Labor Lodge, No. 12, of the A. F. G. E., will stage a Christmas dance at the Hayloft on December 19. Guests are asked to bring a toy or doll voluntarily for the fund.

Boxes, where contributions to the Toy and Doll Fund can be left, have also been set up in Veterans' Administration Building, and in all of the Resettlement Administration buildings.

Some of the toys already collected will be distributed at the annual Christmas party of Costello Post, No. 15, of the American Legion, this Saturday afternoon, at Thomson School, Twelfth and L streets northwest.

Will Entertain Children.

Under the chairmanship of Capt. James Pistorio about 200 children whose parents are on relief will be entertained and given Christmas presents. Entertainment will be furnished by the Swanee Ballroom Studios. Costello Post is also planning to deliver Christmas baskets later in the month.

An opportunity to watch a radio broadcast first-hand, and at the same time help The Post Toy and Doll Fund, will be given Washingtonians this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Arthur Godfrey, announcer on the WJSV "Sun Dial" program, broadcast from 7 to 9 a. m., will conduct his program from the booth of the People's Drug Store at Eleventh and G streets northwest. People who watch the program are asked to bring a toy or doll as a contribution to The Post fund.

Free delivery of gifts that cannot be brought in person is supplied by the Terminal Transporation Co. By calling DEcatur 5130 you can arrange for a taxicab to pick up your contribution for the fund. Or toys or dolls can be left in person at Room 101, The Post Building, 1337 E street northwest.

Everything contributed goes directly toward making this Christmas mean only happiness for every youngster in the District. The Christmas workshop at 1524 L street northwest is repairing and repainting old toys and dolls. And distribution of gifts is handled by the Santa Claus center at the same address.

Old or new toys and dolls, and cash contributions from a penny up, will all help Christmas reach a few more under-favored youngsters. Cash contributions can be mailed to The Post, or left at the lobby in The Post Building. Special boxes where gifts can be left are also located in each of the 42 People's Drug Stores throughout the city, and in Loew's Capitol, Columbia and Palace Theaters.

Trial Error Delays Smith's Testimony

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Declaration of a mistrial in the case of two men charged with extortion today averted the scheduled appearance of Alfred E. Smith, jr., as a prescution witness.

The former governor's son was waiting when General Sessions Judge Owen W. Bohan halted the trial of A. Henry Ross, Brooklyn lawyer, and Max D. Krone, private detective, who were accused of obtaining $5,000 from a Boston business executive under threats of linking his name with that of a young stenographer.

Judge Bohan granted a defense motion to discharge the jury after Assistant District Attorney Eugene J. Finnegan made what he acknowledged to be a "slip of the tongue" by referring to another indictment accusing Krone of engineering a similar extortion plot against young Smith.

Biologist Asserts Young Wasps Have Variety of 'Personalities'

Wasps have personalities, according to a Smithsonian Institution biologist, who yesterday reported he observed wasps that were pugnocious, lazy, gentle, ambitious and friendly in the same colony.

Though it is often stressed that insects are creatures of instinct with rigid behavior patterns, Austin H. Clark concluded from his study of new-born wasps emerging from the same nest that the brothers and sisters possessed marked individual differences. The nest was brought here from Virginia.

The first female to leave its cocoon looked for trouble immediately.

"She had a very characteristic defense attitude," said Clark. "She was irritable and bad tempered. If any of the others approached her when she was resting she would make a lunge at them without moving her feet and menace them with her jaws.

"For resting she always chose a place near the bottom of the jar on the dark side of one of the corks. Her never-failing bad temper, combined with her small size and other features, made her always readily identifiable."

The next female to emerge, however, was a paragon of good deportment. She never struck a defensive attitude, unlike her sister, who went en garde even if a finger were placed in her field of vision.

Most of the other females, Clark reported, were good-natured and, while not especially sociable, did not menace one another. Only one male survived long enough to be studied. He was quite lazy.

The biologist found striking differences in the wasps' intelligence. The lone male had no difficulty avoiding the sides of the glass jar and the water dish at the bottom in flying about, but it took his sisters two days to learn how to stay on the fairway and out of the water hazard.

Only one of the females could extricate herself from the dish without aid. The others had to be lifted out several times before they learned to take care of themselves.

Clark found that wasps sleep soundly in the dark and are sluggish on cloudy days. Awake, they breathe by a "telescoping" of the abdomen back and forth. Asleep, they breathe like other insects by a slow, molecular diffusion of air already in the tracheae. Immediately on awaking the wasp resumes the telescope type of respiration.

The experimenter discovered the most effective way of rousing a wasp out of an 18-hour slumber in the dark is to subject it to violet and invisible ultraviolet light. Yellow and green light response to ordinary white light gave only a weak stimulus. The was much quicker than to colored light.

The Law's Uncertainties.

The decision of a Federal court declaring the Alabama unemployment insurance act unconstitutional calls attention to the uncertain status of this type of legislation at the present time.

The fate of such laws depends not only upon the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Federal Constitution but also upon the provisions of the State constitutions. Furthermore, it has to be remembered that the Supreme Court was evenly divided on the question of the validity of the New York State unemployment insurance act, with the result that the law was sustained without the benefit of a clarifying opinion.

In addition to the uncertain status of the State unemployment insurance laws, there is still greater doubt as to the validity of the Federal law providing for pay roll taxes. These levies are imposed upon employers of eight or more persons, with credits up to 90 per cent allowed employers in States adopting approved unemployment insurance laws.

Half, or possibly more, of the States have now passed legislation to this end. And a large number of the laws contain repeal clauses in case pay roll taxes are declared unconstitutional. Several States provide that the funds collected shall be impounded until a decision is reached as to whether the legislation is valid. At least six States, among them New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland, on the other hand, have laws with no strings attached.

The Supreme Court has been asked to review a decision of a Massachusetts Federal District Court upholding the constitutionality of the pay roll taxes. It is to be hoped that it will do so and will hand down a decision without unnecessary delay. Under the most favorable conditions, it would be some time before the case could be argued. And meantime the initial collections of the pay roll taxes will fall due. For all the States, including those that have resolved to institute unemployment insurance systems regardless of the fate of the coercive Federal tax, the question of constitutionality is a matter of great importance.

Nothing but vexatious delays and other complications will result from trying to avoid the constitutional issue. Whatever the outcome of a court test may be, enough States have shown a willingness to pass unemployment insurance laws of an unconditional character to strengthen hopes that many hesitant commonwealths could be induced to follow their example even without the prodding afforded by the Federal levies with their credit provisions.

Public Defenders.

Defects in our system of criminal prosecution have received a good deal of attention recently. Students of law enforcement have come to realize that prosecuting officers are frequently the weakest unit in the machinery of justice. Perhaps that is why Justin Miller, special assistant to the Attorney General, has pointed out the usefulness of "public defenders."

If prosecution were conducted on a high plane there would not be much demand for public defenders. The attorney representing the State would bring only such charges as he might consider reasonably justified, and he would conduct his investigations and subsequent trials with such scrupulous fairness that no rights of the defendant would be invaded. Unfortunately that is not the way most prosecutors operate. Being elected officials or appointees eager to build up prestige in short order, they are more inclined to make every charge a sensation and to work for 100 per cent convictions, regardless of circumstances in individual cases.

No doubt public defenders, by counteracting this attitude on the part of the average prosecutor, would serve a constructive purpose. But a far more satisfactory way of handling this particular problem would be to raise the standards of prosecution. This function should never be entrusted to elected officials. Rather such positions should be awarded through rigid tests of merit, and the tenure should be sufficiently secure to encourage consistent public service in place of ballyhoo.

To be sure, the best possible system of prosecution would not obviate the need of defendants for adequate legal representation. But it would relieve the State of any obligation to counteract high pressure of its own making. The current practice of judges in appointing private attorneys for indigent defendants would then doubtless afford adequate legal protection. No doubt this policy could be greatly improved in operation, with the assistance of legal aid bureaus and similar organizations.

Our law throws a tremendous number of safeguards around criminals before the courts. To provide defendants with special counsel retained by the State seems more than justice requires. In any event, there are many more important items on the calendar of judicial reform that should be given precedence over Mr. Miller's suggestion.

Consultation Not Neutrality.

The agreement which the delegates at the Buenos Aires conference are unanimously about to approve is being called a neutrality pact. It is a dangerously misleading title.

Overshadowing the neutrality provisions are those providing for mutual consultation by the 21 American republics in the event of any threat of war in the New World. It is this circumstance which gives the Buenos Aires pact its potential importance. The community of interests binding the nations of this hemisphere has long been recognized. But this treaty will give Pan-Americanism, for the first time since that term came into use, the force of law.

This striking development is in no small degree the result of efforts made by the Roosevelt Administration. The assiduous pursuit of the "Good Neighbor" policy has undoubtedly disarmed previous Latin-American suspicions concerning the United States. Thus the lead given by this Nation has now been enthusiastically and unanimously followed by the other New World republics.

To be sure the pact can be criticized for being too vague. Yet this justifiable criticism should not obscure the enormously important fact that the establishment in this hemisphere of a new apparatus of peace is nonetheless a potentially great step forward. For what the new treaty implies is that henceforth the policies of all the 21 republics, in their relations with each other, will be based upon the five peace treaties of American origin—including the Kellogg pact and the Saavedra Lamas treaty. By virtue of these treaties the New World nations will be pledged to employ only peaceful methods for the settlement of disputes between them and to consult together whenever the threat of war arises.

It is only in the event that all efforts at pacific settlement fail that the neutrality provisions in the pact will come into force.

What form will such neutrality action take? There was a suggestion in the draft plan introduced by the United States that the other nations of this hemisphere adopt as their own and as the common policy to be pursued by all, the mandatory neutrality law of the United States.

Had that been done the non-belligerent nations, in the event of war arising between two American states, would be compelled to clamp down an embargo on credit, arms, munitions and implements of war on the combatants regardless of which was the aggressor and which his victim. It is plain that obligations arising under such a neutrality treaty might easily come into direct conflict with obligations arising out of the Covenant of the League of Nations.

For that reason, certain of the Latin-American members of the League, in particular Argentina, balked. They saw no reason why they could not retain membership in the League while, at the same time, strengthening the bonds of peace in the Americas. At their behest, therefore, the Buenos Aires pact specifically provides that:

> Nothing contained in the present convention shall be understood as affecting the rights and duties of the high contracting parties which are at the same time members of the League of Nations.

What this means is clear. The small minority of non-League members will be free, legally if not morally, to make no discrimination between aggressor and victim in the event of a war in this hemisphere. The great majority of Latin-American League members will, on the other hand, be bound by the action of the Geneva organization which can not, under the Covenant, take such a stand.

Under the circumstances it is clearly absurd to call the important Buenos Aires treaty a neutrality pact.

Tolerance.

Washington, and the Nation as a whole, could do with more thoughtful discussions on the subject of tolerance, similar to that held at Langley Junior High School the other night by a Catholic priest, a Jewish rabbi and a Protestant minister, with Edward C. Higbie, president of Wilson Teachers' College, in the chair.

The subject is close to the heart of American institutions. For tolerance, in the sense of an open-minded attitude toward the reasoned opinions of others, particularly minority groups, is essential to the practical working of democracy. The doctrine of majority rule is only a part of the democratic principle. At least equally important is freedom for the minority to expound unpopular theories, on the assumption that if invalid they will be fruitless and if valid they will in time convert sufficient people to turn the minority into a majority.

But beyond its political importance, the virtue of tolerance is vital to any form of human progress. A closely reasoned argument to this conclusion was made by John Stuart Mill in his majestic "Essay on Liberty," and the line of his thought remains as irrefutable today as when first written.

The popular attitude on any issue, said Mill in effect, must be either completely reasonable, completely unreasonable, or, as is most frequent, a mixture of the two. If the general conviction is wholly reasonable it will only be confirmed by listening to opposition. If the received idea is thoroughly unreasonable, as in the old belief that a guilty person will sink if thrown into deep water, then it is certainly advantageous to have it exposed to arguments of a more intelligent character. And if the customary belief is partly true and partly false, free discussion will assuredly help to sift the invalid from the valid elements.

Rabbi Lazaron, of Baltimore, one of the three speakers at the local symposium, made the excellent point that the public schools are in theory the most effective agent for the development of tolerance as a national asset. They bring into close association children from very different backgrounds, and with very different viewpoints. Narrow prejudice is unlikely to linger in such an atmosphere, particularly if the field of intellectual inquiry is as free and diversified as the composition of the student body.

Dr. Lazaron, however, was assuming that the school curriculum itself will not be fettered by intolerant regulations, barring any consideration of unpopular ideas on the ridiculous assumption that the spirit of free inquiry is "un-American." So long as the "red rider" remains on the statute books it will be impossible to consider the public schools of Washington as an agency of tolerance. And for that reason there is an unfortunate lack of proportion in Speaker Bankhead's remark yesterday that legislation to end the "red rider" will probably be deferred by Congress until measures deemed of greater importance are out of the way.

Protection of the liberties of the citizen is generally regarded as the primary aim of our system of government. And for those who agree with that definition there can be nothing more important than the removal of undemocratic pressures on the schools.

The Farm Emergency Passes.

Secretary Wallace's annual report leaves no doubt as to the Administration's desire to revive control over agriculture. Drought-caused crop shortages, Mr. Wallace says, can be only temporary. "Blind competition" is expected to pile up new surpluses. Then, he fears, "soil conservation alone" will not be "a sufficient preventive."

Indeed, the Secretary of Agriculture points out that soil conservation leads to increased productivity. Moreover, farmers are inclined to cultivate their crops intensively when part of their land is withheld from commercial production. Unless foreign markets can be revived, Mr. Wallace fears that these and other factors in the agricultural situation will "confront the country again in the near future with the absolute necessity of establishing a good adjustment between production and market requirements."

The "permanent agricultural policy" which Mr. Wallace envisages would "achieve soil conservation, consumer protection, and crop control together." Neither crop insurance nor the payment of large bounties to farmers for planting grass and legumes offers the farmer security. The Secretary points out that "farm recovery began in 1933 promptly after the adoption of a national farm-adjustment program, accompanied by revaluation of the dollar." And he plainly intimates that agriculture may slip back into chaos unless its output can be controlled by the AAA.

Unfortunately, this whole argument is built up on the false assumption that crop control from Washington is responsible for the present improved status of agriculture. No doubt the AAA made its contribution to farm prosperity. But it is an indisputable fact that the drought has been by far the greatest factor in raising prices and thus enhancing returns to those farmers whose crops were not injured. It was chiefly the drought, and not AAA restrictions, that brought about the elimination of surpluses. And before unpredictable disasters of that sort the AAA is utterly helpless.

Net imports of wheat into the United States this year will amount to approximately 25,000,000 bushels. If the AAA could have foreseen the current demand for wheat at soaring prices, it would never have imposed restrictions upon the planting of this commodity. But it could not foresee the drought. Nor will it be able, with our present limited knowledge of future weather conditions, to avoid similar blunders in the future. In singling out the Supreme Court as the foremost obstacle to successful control of agriculture Mr. Wallace has casually ignored the most formidable opposing force.

A more realistic attitude might lead Secretary Wallace in a very different direction. He estimates the gross income of farmers in 1936 at $9,200,000,000, which is almost equal to their 1930 income. Since current prices are lower, he points out, the purchasing power of cash farm income in 1936 will be only 7 per cent less than it was in 1929. Obviously, farm recovery has gone a long way. In the face of this record, how can the Administration justify continued distribution of nearly $500,000,000 per year to farmers out of the Treasury?

Authorities failed to locate the Arkansas man who stole a pet skunk. He must have gone with the wind.

FHA's Stipulations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note a letter in your December 11 edition from Gladys Harley, of Washington, in which she states she "was told over at Colonial Village," that high Government officials are favored in renting apartments there and that she does not believe the Federal Housing Administration made any stipulations on that point "when supplying the money with which to build."

In order to correct an apparent misunderstanding on the part of the writer, I feel that I should say that the Federal Housing Administration never has and cannot by law lend money for anything. Colonial Village was built by Ring Construction Co. with a mortgage loan supplied by the New York Life Insurance Co., and the Federal Housing Administration insured the mortgage according to law.

Under the law the Federal Housing Administration can concern itself only with seeing that buildings are constructed in accordance with the plans and specifications, are properly located and, in the case of large scale housing developments like Colonial Village, that there is no rent gouging. It has no power to stipulate anything in regard to who shall or who shall not rent the apartments and has not undertaken to do so.

Jefferson Stadium?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A Thomas Jefferson stadium-auditorium has been suggested with which I fully agree. I do not believe we should build another Washington Obelisk, or Lincoln Memorial, grand though they be. Duplicating them in any shape would belittle those two great men, and, I am sure, we do not want any more men on horseback, or posing statesmen, scattered in our circles and parks in the city.

What greater tribute to Jefferson, whose greatest attribute was common sense, than honoring him with a grand stadium-auditorium, both useful and ornamental, which would make people not only look and think, but also act, seating at least 100,000 spectators, to be used throughout the year for all sports, concerts, etc?

On Throwing Stones.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations upon your editorial relative to the hide-bound Canterbury and some others of the cloth.

"Who hath appointed" some of the "more righteous than thou" men to pass judgment upon others?

Charity begins at home, and the average man and woman will do well first to sweep clean all before his or her door before stirring up the neighbor's dust. Jesus never adopted that method nor did He teach others to do so.

"FAIRPLAY."
Washington, Dec. 14.

Comforting Landon.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am pleased Mr. Roosevelt was re-elected so he now has the opportunity to clean up his own "mess"—the wasteful spending of the taxpayers' money for his re-election. He was cautioned and criticized all along, but no, he and his brain-trust planners, Frankfurter and Tugwell, knew best. Furthermore, Jim Farley insisted he must spend to buy votes for his second term.

Now he has it, let him "face the music." It's Mr. Roosevelt's "baby." Let him rear it. Gov. Landon, receiving 16,000,000 votes, has been saved the task.

ROBERT N. CARSON.

Port-of-Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After spending several weeks cultivating good will south of the Tropic of Capricorn, the President might well feel just a touch of futility upon reading in the headlines over your Monday pictorial page that he received an ovation in "the Port of Spain," when he gets back to Washington, D. C.

Instead of the bobble, why not a background article or two on torrid, active Port-of-Spain, where dwells a strange conglomeration of Negroes, Chinese, Indians (Hindus), Portuguese, Britishers and Americans, and whence comes asphalt, oil and many tropical products?

DARWIN DeGOLIA.

Boycott The Coronation?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because of the insults hurled at our American women by the English Parliament, I call upon Americans loyal to their country not to attend the coronation, thereby benefiting England by American money lavishly spent in favor of American detractors.

Arise and shame these English politicians who vote always against paying their just debts to this country. Arise in your might and boycott the coronation, loyal Americans.

INDIGNANT CITIZEN.

Not Representative.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to Mr. McKenzie's letter in The Post on December 10 entitled "In a Pickle," I do take exception to his calling Mrs. Simpson our representative American woman. A great many English people would disagree with him on that, although they are too courteous to make comparisons.

AMERICAN-BORN WOMAN.
Washington, Dec. 11.

The Patriots In Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Spanish insurgents are the patriots of Spain because they are struggling to save their country from the riff-raff that has floated in to prey upon the ignorance of the people and capitalize on disorder. The nations from which they come are fortunate in being rid of them.

Your letter-writers tacitly approve of confiscation of property and admire the Communists in Russia and Spain but still they cling to this country with its great capitalistic system. Their attitude is partly understood because the Communists in this country are the cleverest of propagandists, when they can use our educators without their knowing it. Birth control, mercy killings, teaching of sex knowledge to children, trial marriages and easy divorces are all part of their propaganda, being pagan doctrines and opposed to Christianity. Dispose of the church and then their way is clear and that is the reason she bears the brunt of the first attack.

All military men know that if the insurgents cared to do so they could lay Madrid in ruins in two days, but they have elected to take the more humane course by intimidating the people in dropping bombs in isolated spots, and the killing of women and children has been incidental thereto and not intentional.

WILLIAM F. McDONNELL.
Washington, Dec. 5.

A Canadian View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding a recent article in your paper by Mr. Waltman may I be permitted to point out two facts, which he appears to have overlooked.

1. The Canadian Government and people were a solid wall behind Mr. Baldwin and that can only mean we would not have the lady at any price. Certainly if she is not worthy to be the Queen of England, she is not worthy to be Queen of Canada and if the suggestion of Mr. Waltman was not so amusing it would be insulting.

2. Canada is not anxious to secede from Britain. Any other position than part of the Empire would be unthinkable. We love our Crown and its traditions and if today we are deeply grieved for a monarch who could cause such anxiety, we know that it is to the everlasting glory of old England that not a drop of blood was shed.

We can refuse to buy your newspapers and magazines but as we cannot control the ballyhoo of your broadcasting system, let me repeat the words of Irvin S. Cobb, "Let Americans mind their own business."

E. T. THOMAS.
Merritton, Ontario, Canada, Dec. 11.

Mencken's Comparison.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of December 11, Henry Mencken, Baltimore's Sage of Cathedral Street, is quoted as referring to Edward VIII as an idiot. A few days ago he ranked the King-Gay Divorcee accounts with the story of the Resurrection—a gratuitous insult to millions of Christians—and churchmen let him get away with it. Possibly, however, they chose to ignore him, his works and pomps. How delighted this jitney Voltaire would have been to have "made" the Index!

CHARLES E. CROSS.

"Tough Break."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was certainly gross inconsideration—you could almost call it impertinence—for "Edward" and "Wally" to "break their story" to the world at this time.

When a confirmed addict of the front page headlines makes a spectacular 15,000-mile jaunt only to be crowded off after but two days' monopoly of them is surely a tough break. He has every right to be sore at them, and there "ought to be a law."

J. M. MOORE.
Annapolis, Md., Dec. 11.

The Ethics Of Public Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been preached for some months past a doctrine, to the effect that the private life of a public man is his own affair, that was thoroughly discussed many times by Lord Palmerston, for 50 years one of the foremost statesmen of England. Then, as now, public opinion in the British Isles took definite ground that the doctrine is false as well as dangerous.

Not even a school teacher nor a mere college teacher, whether public or private, certainly not a preacher, of any Christian faith, not a mayor nor other public man in America is allowed to maintain and exemplify in his own life any such doctrine. Jesus Christ himself went much further, and St. Paul, apostle to the Gentiles, asserted for Christians, "Ye are not your own; ye are bought with a price."

Other peoples may perhaps hold to the doctrine; it does not fit into the scheme of personal and public ethics where men and women of the so-called Anglo-Saxon kinds are concerned.

This discussion is part of the general philosophy that goes with the British Constitution itself; and John Henry Temple, coming as he did of a great ancestry, known in history as Viscount Palmerston, should have been reviewed in the education of the princes of the British Kingdom and Empire. Moreover, every man in public life who speaks the English language should understand it well. Even kings should be brought under this control.

The notion may be hypocrisy in some cases, but once the facts are known to the public, the outcome is almost certain to be among English-speaking peoples exactly what we have recently been witnessing.

The general disposition of the American press upon this subject is that of most of the readers; we may forgive the sinner, but we retire such a person from the public authority which he is unfit to have.

Good Hope At Even.

HALF way up Good Hope road the bees were busy all summer manufacturing a high-class product that has not appreciably improved through the ages and has not needed improvement. It has always been and still is the superlative of sweetness. And with the true conservation spirit they have preserved and helped to propagate the flowers that give them sustenance.

Here, oddly enough, Man the Ravager, spurred by hope of gain, has given them aid. The flowers are carefully nurtured and in due season cut and sold. Thereafter they give solace to the sick, comfort to the weary, sentiment to young love, esthetic pleasure to diners and dancers and a pay envelope to growers, venders and interior decorators. All of which is perhaps a fair enough figure to pluck from the heart of Good Hope.

To Washingtonians Good Hope road is a gateway to southern Maryland and relaxation. To southern Marylanders it is a gateway to Washington and a stimulating bustle. More prosaically and, since you insist, more importantly, it is a highway of commerce between an agricultural State and an industrial one, with a never lagging exchange of goods and no visible tariff at the border.

That the road is a steep hill may also be symbolic, Good Hope both in the climbing and the coasting. And that there are filling stations at the top and the bottom of the hill may or may not give some sort of fillip to fancy's flight.

The highway's topography gives some hint of its history. The orphans' home with well-kept lawn and stately trees on the top of a hill tells us of the one-time country road, as do the detached houses, each a rural community distance from the public road. Nearer Anacostia's busier section there are rows of houses, some man's dream of a residence section in a rapidly growing suburb. With the coming of the stores the residences themselves took on a touch of commercialism, an occasional sign in a window testifying to the business of the head of the house within.

Beyond question, when Good Hope road was a country lane, and it was not so very long ago, the people who lived there knew something of the coming of day and night. There were those who milked the cows, who saw the first faint flush of dawn, and at the close of day weary workers marveled at the beauty of an exceptionally gorgeous sunset. But all this is now merely hearsay at the bottom of Good Hope road. Dawn doesn't mean a thing to the milkman while the street lights are burning, and if your business is in Anacostia you have to take a little walk to see the sunset.

The businessman sees nothing of the approach to twilight. At the first touch of grayness on go the lights. The Loafer on the Corner fares a little better. From his vantage point he views the gas works and the buildings in the Navy Yard, and happily notices that they take on an unexpected and unsuspected beauty in silhouette ere they prepare to fade away, delightfully, in the dusk.

"Prepare" is used advisedly, for they never quite make it. They never fade away; they are swiftly obliterated, and not by darkness, but by light. Light suddenly surrounds the Loafer on the Corner, and, like a saint who knows nothing of outer darkness, he sees nothing beyond his aureola.

Happily, he keeps his head despite its nimbus. He knows the gas works and the Navy Yard are still there, and therefore he remains in touch with the outside world. You know how it is. You know a man who knows the President, who knows all the ambassadors and ministers, and thus you are within a very few moves of knowing everybody and everything on earth. It is the same way with places. Good Hope road is a sister under the skin of Broadway, Piccadilly, Calle Alta de la Marina, Avenues des Champs Elysses, Unter den Linden and the Back Goree.

Light! Goethe asked for it, and here it is, more than he ever dreamed of. It is here to tell us we can get anything we want, anything to eat, anything to drink, anything to wear, anything to live in, anything to travel in or on. Red lights, white lights, blue lights, green lights, yellow lights, lights of any color you can imagine, and arranged in all possible shapes and sizes.

And so if a man were to return to this world after an absence of 50 years he would find no spot that could furnish him with more startling novelties than Anacostia's busy corner. First the illumination. Arc lights he will remember, but the incandescence will amaze. Radio; voices from the air that seem pure magic. Traffic; the constant streams of horseless carriages flowing in every possible direction. And overhead the buzz and lights of airplanes.

The Loafer on the Corner, who had momentarily invested himself with the characteristics of the man away from the world for 50 years, began to wonder whether things that amazed him most were the people who walked and talked in the pictures in the place up the street; the machines that mended his shoes while he waited; or the electric stoves which turned out fried hamburgs.

He was just about to make a decision when—

When along came his bus!

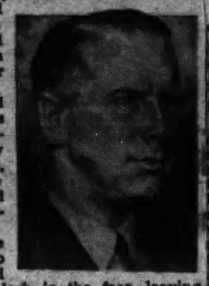
Food Throwers

THE PRACTICE of throwing food at public dinners may date 'way back, but I first noticed it at the alumni dinners and the All-America dinners at the close of football in the early 1920s. The hootch was very bad in those days and the time-expired athletes of previous years would feel a false sense of youth and give themselves over to unbecoming play.



Sometimes they would throw their minute steaks at the speakers and sometimes they would throw their half-fried chicken, according to whether the dinner was the standard No. 1 dinner or the standard No. 2.

In a way it was quite amusing to see a steak go sailing through the air and hit a guest of honor kersplash in the face, leaving traces of pimento and little cubes of Potatoes O'Brien on his features, but I used to recall the shortage of food in England during the war, and it seemed a defiance of God to treat good eating food that way. It seemed like bad luck sure.

After a while public opinion rebelled against the more untidy practice of the sport, and the throwing of food at public dinners was reduced to the biscuit throw. The banquet departments of the hotels, wishing to eliminate the expense of removing gravy stains from their walls and hangings, readily cooperated and developed a standard throwing biscuit which, like the regulation baseball and golf ball, was made to formal specifications as to size, weight and liveliness.

IN THE LAST few years even the biscuit throw has lost popularity, and the most difficult performers nowadays are ladies who get mischievous, at a certain stage of the evening. Maybe there are not many such ladies, but the few that there are do such spectacular tricks that they seem like a lot. Anyway, there are enough. Some people think they can be cured of this, but I say they can't, and I know what I am talking about. If you don't think I know what I am talking about, listen to this:—

Last year at a house party somewhere, a lady, known far and wide as an asparagus thrower was sitting next to a gentleman at dinner and going along as nice as you please when, all of a sudden, she snatched up a stalk of asparagus the size of a nickel ball bat, twizzled the end around in the Hollandaise and, whambo! right across the gentleman's dress-shirt front.

The gentleman pretended not to notice anything but he made up his mind that the next night h would get good and tight before dinner and at th first sign of trouble give the lady the works.

But first he warned her.

"Now, candy-lamb," he said, "be nice, because on false move out of you tonight and, by God, we ar going to town."

BUT, SURE ENOUGH, as soon as they sat down the lady led off with a pat of soft, squashy butte right in the eye. So, quick as anything, the gentleman grabbed a tomato surprise and mashed it in her countenance. She retaliated with a ladle of gravy, and he poured a bottle of chili sauce in her hair. After that they practically threw off restraints and smeared each other with mayonnaise, mashed potatoes, honey, buttered beets, strawberry shortcake with whipped cream, and rare viands and exotic delicacies too numerous to mention.

The lady looked like a blue plate special, and the gentleman looked like a dollar table d'hote himself, so they went to their rooms to change into othe clothes. But the gentleman was still full of good natured mischief, so he poured a quart of milk o magnesia over the lady's new dress and a box o bath powder on top of that, and she had to chang again.

This was the last dress she had, so she called fo peace and promised never to do it again, as she ha learned her lesson.

But she hadn't, because one night at another party the lady suddenly whipped around to the gentleman beside her with the half-eaten chassis of a squab and jammed it down on his head like an Empress Eugenie hat.

She didn't learn any lesson at all. On the contrary, she designed a dress with the colors of strawberry jam, scrambled eggs, liver and onions, mashed potatoes and Hollandaise all run together in a curious pattern, and a hat representing a gravy boat upside down. And everybody thinks she is delightful, and people invite her to come and sling food every night of the week. I just don't know what to make of it.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Portrait Of An Ex-King Thinking.

Well, it certainly feels good to be free of all that king business! . . . No more shoe-horning myself into tight uniforms, jouncing around in those royal coaches, inspecting regiments and forever pretending to be interested in things that bored me stiff . . ." (Inner Voice: Oh, now, David, it wasn't so terrible . . . You used to like it in spots . . . And it paid well, you know.)

• • • •

"Here I am a free man with no daily routine of appointments, conferences, visits, trips, addresses and all that bosh! . . . I can get up when I jolly well please and do what I jolly well like . . . And if I want to go down and greet the letter carrier in my pajamas it won't shake any empires! . . . What a relief!" (Inner Voice: There was a lot of heart-warming glory and prestige on that old job, David . . . The formalities and routines were restraining, but think of all the privileges!)

• • • •

"As a married man with no governing to worry about I shall be care-free and happy . . . The freedom will be the greatest relief I have ever known . . . Think of it, I shall be my own boss! . . . Nobody can tell me what to do! . . . Nobody can order me around . . ." (Inner Voice: That's what YOU think!)

• • • •

"No disagreeable people to receive! . . . No smiling at people for whom I haven't any use! . . . No going to parties and receptions not of my own choosing! . . . What a treat that will be! . . ." (Inner Voice: It's easy telling you've had no experience as a husband, David.)

• • • •

"The very air seems different! . . . I almost feel as if I had wings! . . . I'm free, do you understand? . . . Free! . . . I could shout! . . ." (Inner Voice: Better not shout, kid; it might be misunderstood.) . . . "No ceremonials! . . . No bugles! . . . No standing for hours on those balconies! . . . No worrying about the condition of the empire! . . . It's wonderful! . . ." (Inner Voice: "That's the way it seems now, but you'll miss those things after a time, lad . . . You can't hear bugles all your life and just drop 'em overnight.)

• • • •

"And no more of that Selling the Empire stuff! . . . No more of being Britain's super-salesman! . . . Am I glad to be rid of that! . . ." (Inner Voice: It was a swell empire, David, and, remember, it paid all the expenses!)

• • • •

"I'm master of my soul now! . . . Captain of my fate! . . . I can shinny up a lamp-post if I wish . . . I can jump through paper hoops, recite Gunga Din in public, write letters to the newspapers, go down the street with my shirt tail out, or take saxophone lessons! . . ." (Yes, David . . . you're a free man now . . . No more of those conventions imposed by occupancy of a throne! . . . But, Duke, will you miss 'em! And listen, kid, it was a great living!)

Canada's Reaction

Dominion Reported Finally Approving Baldwin's Stand In Simpson Affair; De Valera's Attitude Generally Disapproved.

By William Marchington.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa.

THE PEOPLE of Canada like their fellow-citizens in other parts of the British Commonwealth have been living under a very acute strain and even if the strange drama has ended in what is universally here regarded as a sorrowful tragedy there is widespread relief at the termination of the harrowing tension of the past fortnight.

The emergence into the limelight of the crisis between King Edward and his cabinet did not come as the same surprise and shock to the Canadian public as it did to the British, because they had for months past become acquainted with the existence of Mrs. Simpson and her intimate friendship with the late King through the agency of American papers which, circulating freely in Canada, carried at intervals spicy stories of their relations. There were also the American radio commentators who frequently broadcast highly-colored stories, vigorously repudiated by their Canadian audiences as impertinent fabrications, but still listened to with avidity. Nevertheless the first rumors of the contemplated abdication did come as a certain shock and created widespread dismay.

At first there was a disposition to think that the affair had been clumsily handled by the Baldwin ministry, that King Edward was being abruptly hurried into a decision, and that he was not getting exactly a square deal. But as the realities of the situation and the issue between the monarch and his cabinet became gradually clearer, public sympathy swung 'round to the side of the Baldwin ministry. When it was disclosed that His Majesty was actually asking the approval of the cabinet for his marriage with a twice-divorced woman, the great majority of intelligent Canadians and of their newspapers reached the conclusion that Mrs. Simpson's background was a very unsatisfactory setting for a British Queen. Moreover, it was felt that the public life of the King could not be completely separated from his private life and that in any matter relating to the throne and its succession he must take the advice of his ministerial advisers.

Strong Faction Backed King's Right to Privacy.

There was, however, an element which ranged itself strongly on the side of the King on the ground that he should be allowed to manage his own private life as he chose. The chief press exponent of this viewpoint was the Ottawa Citizen, a radical paper which has persistently argued that King Edward was being forced by Tory ministers to pay the penalty for his generous democratic outlook and his outspoken declarations of sympathy with the plight of the unemployed in the depressed areas as well as for his refusal to conform to archaic standards of monarchical conduct which he had outgrown. Curiously enough, this attitude toward the crisis was shared by Le Canada, the official organ of the Liberal party in Quebec which declared that an effort was being made to reduce the former King to an attitude of perfect constitutional docility before his coronation. But the great mass of French-Canadian people and other Roman Catholics in Canada were bound by their religious creed to disapprove of a marriage which they could never regard as valid.

Mr. MacKenzie King's government made no effort to influence public opinion but let it shape itself as the crisis proceeded. So, when the cables sent from London on the afternoon of December 11 definitely predicted the abdication the vast majority of the Canadian people, while deploring the necessity of such a step, was satisfied that the best solution of an impossible situation was being adopted.

Editorial comments with few exceptions indorse the wisdom and propriety of the course which has been followed and pay high tribute to Premier Baldwin for his statesmanlike handling of a most delicate problem. They also bid cordial welcome to the new King and find a silver lining in the fact that it has provided an opportunity for a wonderful demonstration of the solidarity of the British Commonwealth under a severe strain—a lesson which they think should not be lost upon the dictators of Europe.

DURING the latter days of the crisis Premier Mackenzie King was confronted with strong pressure by the resident press correspondents in Ottawa to make some disclosure to the public of the position and actions which his government was taking, but he refused to waver in an attitude of almost complete silence on the subject and had to face sharp criticism from the Toronto Globe-Mail and other papers on this point. He was, however, annoyed at what appeared to be a concerted effort in certain quarters in Britain to attribute to Canada and other dominions responsibility for forcing an issue between King Edward and his cabinet about Mrs. Simpson, and he felt it necessary to issue a specific denial that his government had taken any initiative in the matter.

When the crisis was drawing to a climax the King cabinet found itself faced with one delicate problem. The preamble of the statute of Westminster declares that the assent of the dominion parliaments must be secured for any change in the succession to the throne, and the present Canadian government was not prepared to accept the thesis of Prof. Barriedale Keith that this provision had been deliberately placed in the preamble for the express purpose of not giving it the force of law.

Instant action was imperative to ratify the change in the succession to the throne forced by King Edward's abdicatoin, but as some members of both houses of the Canadian Parliament require three or even four days' travel to reach Ottawa, the impossibility of convening Parliament in time to take simultaneous actoin with the British Parliament was clear. So the King ministry had reluctantly to adopt a course which implies on the surface a waiver of rights won by the statue of Westminster and pass an order in council requesting the British government to include Canada in the scope of any legislation being passed at Westminster for the purpose of validating the accession of the new monarch.

However, Premier King and his Minister of Justice, Mr. Lapointe, lost no time in explaining over the radio to the Canadian people that under the special circumstances they had no alternative but to follow this course, and that as soon as the Federal Parliament, which has been summoned to meet on January 14, assembles it will be asked to safeguard the Dominion's rights and confirm the action of the Government either by resolution or by the enactment of a statute identical to that which was passed in London. Yet certain extreme nationalists scent a deplorable reversion to a servile colonialism, and from Winnipeg, Mr. J. S. Woodsworth, the leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth party, sent a telegram to Premier King in which he said, "As a member of Parliament pledged to loyalty to King Edward VIII, I protest against the usurpation of the powers of Parliament by the Cabinet."

Edward a Favorite Of Canadian People.

KING EDWARD won for himself a very special place in the hearts of the Canadian people. His possession of a ranch in Alberta made them feel that he was one of themselves and he had during his three visits to the Dominion made scores of personal friends of high and low estate and endeared himself to the public by his easy democratic ways and high-spirited bonhomie. He was also specially popular with the Canadian war veterans, many of them had known him when he was attached to the Canadian army during the war and regarded him as a comrade-in-arms.

His successor, apart from one visit to Halifax and a hasty trip across Canada from the Far East, has spent no time in the Dominion and is therefore an unknown personality to the mass of the Candian people. They are, however, prepared to transfer immediately to him the loyal allegiance which they gave to King Edward, and all that they know about him and his consort creates a favorable impression. At the same time Canadian ministers are known to think it advisable that they should find time at no distant date to visit the dominions as King Edward had planned after his coronation and establish personal contacts with the people of Canada.

It has been a great and unprecedented upheaval, and it is premature to say that it will have no important consequences. The governments of Great Britain, Canada and the other Dominions are watching anxiously the course being followed by Mr. De Valera in the Irish Free State. The external relations bill which he has introduced, with provisions removing the King from the constitution of the Free State and abolishing the office of governor general, is viewed with general disapprobation in other parts of the British Commonwealth. However, Prof. Barriedale Keith, who is rated the greatest authority upon the constitutional arrangements of the British Commonwealth, has declared in the Manchester Guardian that De Valera could unquestionably claim that "Britain was acting unconstitutionally in legislating without the assent of the Free State, and on that score might assert his right to create a new head of state, ignoring the British Crown and thus in effect terminating the British connection. It would be difficult to deny the validity of such legislation even from the viewpoint of British law."

So there is clearly nothing much that the other partners of the British Commonwealth can do about De Valera's action.

Off the Record.

Two Camps

By Barnet Nover

The Real Division Among Nations.

FOR SOME TIME, and particularly since the outbreak of the civil war in Spain, the world has been told in a crescendo of emphasis that the future lies between fascism and communism.

Sooner or later, it is being said, every nation not already in one camp or another is bound to become, as Spain is now, a battleground between these opposing totalitarian philosophies. And ultimately that struggle will reach world dimensions.

In a rather backhanded but none the less striking fashion this hypothesis, which summons the democracies to collective suicide, is flattering to nations that are neither Communist nor Fascist. For it is based on the unspoken presumption that the Fascist states will get nowhere in their attack on the citadel of communism—Russia—without the aid of the rich and powerful democracies. Equally does it suggest that Russia's efforts to defend its far-flung frontiers and preserve its peculiar political and economic system will be fruitless if Moscow does not receive the support of the non-Fascist states.

BUT CLOSELY examined the present situation does not necessarily involve such a clash between dictatorial systems, in which democracies would be ground between the upper and nether millstones. The phenomenon of what Sir Norman Angell has called the "Internationale of nationalisms," declaring war on the Internationale of communism, does appear to be something new under the sun. But the struggle for increased national power which it cloaks is not new at all. It is as old as the state system itself.

The question then arises: Why are the Fascist nations tending to group themselves together? Is it because fascism as such has become a new religion and like all religions in their first stages is full of proselytizing ardor? Or is it because the Fascist nations, individually, feel themselves cribbed, cabin'd and confined, and to break the shell of their isolation and advance their respective interests, are pooling their ambitions and their forces?

IT CAN HARDLY be denied that both fascism and communism in certain of their manifestations do resemble religions, if religions of an older and more primitive sort than those with which the modern world is familiar. That is why, no doubt, they are both in one way or another hostile to organized religion, a circumstance which certain religious leaders, terrified by the specter of communism, tend to forget so far as fascism is concerned.

But the emphasis on the allegedly religious nature of the totalitarian systems can easily be exaggerated. And the important thing to remember in examining the propagandist and proselytizing activities both of fascism and communism is that, in each instance, these activities are primarily intended to serve the purposes of a state—be it Russia on the one hand or Germany or Italy on the other.

Certainly Germany's anti-Communist zeal is at least as much anti-Russian as it is anti-Marxian. So is that of Japan. Rome maintained very friendly relations with Moscow for more than a decade, despite the opposition between fascism and communism. Mussolini began to view communism as a world threat only when Russia, by aiding the Spanish government, threatened to establish anti-Fascist states at either end of the Mediterranean Sea.

IF, THEREFORE, instead of regarding the so-called Fascist Internationale not as a new Islam out to conquer the world for the Allah of dictatorships, but as a grouping of like-minded states brought together because the world is hostile to their ill-concealed national ambitions, we get a somewhat different perspective on the apparent struggle between fascism and communism.

In his splendid little book, "We Or They," Hamilton Fish Armstrong points out that the real antithesis in the modern world is not between fascism and communism, but between democracy and totalitarianism of whatever variety. The world, he says in effect, cannot remain half-slave and half-free. This, indeed, is a theory which the dictators themselves have proclaimed.

Hitler wrote in Mein Kampf: "Either the world will be governed by the ideology of modern democracy, in which case every issue will be decided in favor of the numerically stronger races; or it will be ruled by the law of force, when the peoples of brutal determination, not those that show self-restraint, will triumph." And similarly Mussolini, as cited by Armstrong:

"The struggle between two worlds can permit no compromise. Either we or they! Either their ideas or ours! Either our state or theirs!"

On the other hand Stalin has given effective recognition to this same hypothesis by proposing to democratize Russia. To what extent this will actually be done by the new Soviet constitution remains to be seen. At the moment it is significant that even the gesture in the direction of democracy has been made.

BUT MORE IMPORTANT than Mr. Armstrong's antithesis, or that expounded by the hysterical folk who demand that the world choose between fascism and communism, is the one between the peace-loving and the warlike states.

This division is certainly clear-cut and realistic. And it is so not least because the three nations whose present policies constitute a real danger to world peace are now by their own action grouped together.

So far as the democracies are are concerned the existence of nations whose political systems are different from ours has never until now constituted a danger. If it does so now it is only because some of the non-democratic nations are obviously threatening the peace of the world.

Anthony Eden put the whole matter in a nutshell when in a recent speech he rejected, so far as Great Britain is concerned, the "dangerous doctrine which would have us divide the world into dictatorships of the Right or Left." On the contrary, he argued, the criterion by which states should be judged is not the "form of government in this or that country," but "their willingness to keep the peace with their neighbors and to observe treaties which are framed to keep the peace."

Life of Moore

By William Lyon Phelps

By Joseph Hone.

The long-awaited life of the famous novelist, George Moore, has appeared in a volume of about 500 pages, with an excellent bibliography. It is written by Joseph Hone, and an extraordinary and delightful feature of the book is that one chapter is written by his cook: "An account of his last years, by his cook and housekeeper, Clara Warville." On one of the occasions when I called on Mr. Moore, I had some conversation with her. She seemed very intelligent. Her chapter is written unpretentiously, and is valuable for the close-up picture it gives.

• • • •

George Moore was born in 1852 and died in 1933. He became universally known in 1894, by his novel "Esther Waters," which deserved its fame. It belongs to English literature and is, I think, one of the great novels in the English language. He told me that he had surpassed it in his later work, but I enjoy it more than any other of his fiction. The description of Derby Day is one of the most marvelous pieces of combined picture and narrative in the whole range of modern literature.

Hence I can not agree with Mr. Hone when he says that Mr. Moore's reputation as a novelist must ultimately depend on "The Brook Kerith" and "Heloise and Abelard." They may be great works of art; but I think it is impossible for even a great artist to write a novel about the Founder of Christianity without even a spark of faith. I have never been able to finish this book, though I have tried. I am lost, submerged in a sea of language. What Bernard Shaw said of it is exactly to the point; his remark is quoted in this biography: "I read about 30 pages of 'The Brook Kerith.' It then began to dawn on me that there was no mortal reason why Moore should not keep going on like that for 50,000 pages, or 50,000,000, for that matter."

• • • •

No; I like best "Esther Waters," "Evelyn Innes," "Sister Teresa," and "The Lake."

Apart from his novels, Moore was one of the greatest literary critics of the age; he had some obstinate prejudices, but his comments and essays were usually profound.

This biography is admirable; and one should read with it Charles Morgan's brief Epitaph on George Moore.

A New Deal for Civil Service

Reform Progress Slow In Local Administration

Merit System Prevails in Only a Few of the 175,418 Political Jurisdictions; Almost Entirely Absent in County and Township Governments.

By Robert C. Albright.

Roots of the Federal Government's stunted growth of merit personnel standards run deep into the soil of local administration—in State, city and county government where spoils still holds a tenacious groups.

No. 8 of a Series.

Slow as has been Federal progress in civil service reform, it has set the pace for local units of administration.

In only nine or ten States is the merit system in force. More than 150 cities of more than 20,000 population, have no civil service regulations at all. Out of 3,053 counties, only four have a merit system of their own. Most of the States and smaller cities have not even made formal beginnings.

As the depression brought with it an increase in patronage demands on the Federal Government, so has there been a spreading indifference in the last ten years to merit principles in State, city and county administrations.

Together with the National Government, these local units have on their pay rolls about 10 per cent of all persons gainfully employed in the United States, or about 3,300,000 persons working in about 175,418 political jurisdictions. Their combined salaries have been estimated at about $4,521,000,000, or more than one-third of all Government receipts from taxes.

Taxpayer Informed of Losses.

With such vast outlays of public monies involved, several public-spirited organizations are attempting to drive home to the taxpayer the principle that merit standards in government not only will mean more efficient administration, but a tremendous saving in public funds.

There never has been a direct enumeration of all of the Government employes in the United States, but the Committee of Inquiry on Public Personnel etsimated that in 1932, public pay rolls and personnel totaled as follows:

	No. of Employes.	Total Pay.
Federal	934,000	$1,171,157,000
State	252,000	$338,689,000
Municipal	591,500	$895,539,000
County, township and district	312,000	$450,837,000
Public school systems	1,189,000	$1,664,732,000

Pioneer among the States in establishing civil service commissions was New York, whose civil service law dates from 1883, the year in which the Pendleton act establishing the United States Civil Service Commission, was born.

The New York law is still outstanding. It carries among other provisions a "taxpayers'" clause, which enables a taxpayer to bring action to enforce civil service requirements. Such a suit was brought in the celebrated "case of Dr. Walkers," resulting in elimination of $2,000,000 of positions, which were no longer needed when they had to be filled by competition.

Progress was steady but slow up to the World War period, but has since made little advance. Laws have been enacted by Massachusetts, Illinois, Wisconsin, Colorado, New Jersey, California, Ohio, Maryland, Kentucky, Connecticut and Kansas. But the Kansas law failed for lack of appropriations, and the Connecticut law was repealed in 1921, eight years after its enactment.

In all of the larger cities, and in most of the 450 cities operating on the council-manager plan, the merit system has made progress. Efficient personnel management has displaced spoils to a great extent. Out of 355 cities of over 25,000 population, 203 have civil service laws. But 152 in this group have no civil service regulation, and about 35 have only their police and fire departments on the merit basis. Altogether, about 350 cities have central personnel agencies.

Political Influence.

Merit requirements are perhaps at their lowest level among the 300,000 employed by counties, towns and townships. But although only four counties have merit systems of their own, there are bright spots in even this picture, for instance, where county personnel is co-ordinated with the State civil service in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Ohio and to some degree in Maryland.

Jobs in the smaller governmental units are subject to greater influence from politicians, and the depression perhaps has exaggerated this fact. Certainly, in few of the local administrations is government service looked at from the "career" viewpoint, and turnover in jobs is more rapid.

One proposal being agitated to infilter Federal civil service principles into the country at large suggests inclusion in every law-making grants-in-aid to States or cities, such as the social security law, a clause requiring application of civil service laws and regulations to all positions created by the grant.

The Commission of Inquiry on Public Service Personnel has recommended co-operation between Federal personnel administration and State and local administration, to mutual advantage.

Mayors and Cause.

Methods suggested include joint use of eligible lists, joint preparation and conduct of examinations, and wider development of technical studies. The commission proposed similar co-operation between State and local personnel agencies, and adoption in States and local Government of the short ballot.

Recently the United States Conference of Mayors struck a blow for improved local personnel administration, by going on record in favor of exchange of civil service eligible lists between municipal units, to give qualified local employes a wider outlet, and enable municipalities to profit from a larger field of selection.

One proposal of the Commission of Inquiry suggests "modernization of uneconomic and unworkable small units of local government" through consolidation of and use of central technical assistance, particularly in maintaining personnel administration.

Three Recommendations.

The Naitonal Civil Service Reform League's committee on education in the merit system recently recommended three steps to improve the quality of State and local personnel:

"1. A State law, or State constitutional amendment such as has been adopted in New York, Ohio and Colorado, should declare a general policy of appointment by merit, to be determined by competitive examination whenever practicable. Such a constitution provision may include merely a declaration of policy and a grant of authority to the Legislature to carry out the policy.

"2. The Legislature should then proceed ot enact a law establishing for the State a personnel agency, to be responsible for administration of the merit system. This agency may be presided over by a nonpartisan board of commissioners or by a single trained director.

"3. Since cities are legally subdivisions of States, the State may prescribe a merit system for all the cities of a certain class (as in New York and Ohio), or may authorize cities to determine their course of action for themselves. In the latter case, submission to the jurisdiction of the State personnel agency or enactment of a local law or city ordinance similar to the State civil service law would be in order.

"For smaller cities, counties and villages, the State may conduct examinations itself, or may authorize a few district personnel agencies to act for a group of small communities. It may seem desirable to permit small communities to contract with adjoining large cities for the services of examiners."

School for Legislators.

Boston, Dec. 16 (AP).—The 100 or more new members of the Massachusetts Legislature will have opportunity to "go to school" next year to learn what makes the legislative wheels go 'round. The State department of education announced today a series of 10 lectures, beginning January 11, to acquaint new members with legislative procedure and machinery.

Railway Heads Deny Accounts Were Falsified

Missouri Pacific Officials Say They Complied With I. C. C.

By the Associated Press.

Two officers of the Missouri Pacific Railroad denied yesterday that the road had "falsified" its accounts.

An accusation of "falsified" bookkeeping was made Tuesday by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, chairman of a committee inquiring into railroad finapcing, and Joseph Eastman, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

William Wyer, of Cleveland, secretary and treasurer of the road, and F. P. Johnson, of St. Louis, vice president and chief accounting officer, testified they were not only complying with I. C. C. standards, but were following methods used by other railroads.

The committee, for the second successive day, directed its attention to a contract between the Missouri Pacific and Terminal Shares, Inc., both subsidiaries of the $3,000,000,000 Van Sweringen empire. This contract involved acquisition of terminal properties in north Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo.

Committee investigators had contended the railroad carried as a current asset an item of $3,200,000, which had been paid to Terminal Shares as part payment for the properties. They contended the money had gone to discharge an indebtedness and thus was not an asset.

Wyer said the Interstate Commerce Commission had ordered the practice discontinued, but that it "had taken the commission a year to make up its mind the practice was wrong."

Johnson asserted that Wheeler's charges of "false" bookkeeping were "unjust at least so far as my company is concerned."

"Sometimes accountants may disagree," he continued, "But I did the best I could."

Legal Advice in Press, On Air Barred in N. Y.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—New York lawyers and judges were prohibited today by a decision of both the Manhattan and Brooklyn appellate divisions of the Supreme Court from giving free legal advice to the public either through the newspapers or over the radio.

The decision followed a complaint against participation of judges in the "Goodwill Court of the Air," sponsored by Standard Brands, Inc., food distributors. A. L. Alexander, who has charge of the "Good Will Court", declared he will comply with the ruling, but that the program will continue. Two New Jersey judges were scheduled to take part tonight.

Aeronautic Aide Quits; 'Politics' Is Charged

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 16 (AP).—Charging that the National Aeronautic Association is "politically controlled," John D. Sellers, Jackson business executive and aviation enthusiast, resigned as its Mississippi governor today.

Sellers made public a copy of his letter of resignation, in which he expressed belief the situation "is more detrimental to aviation than beneficial."

Windsor's Host Long a Bulwark Of Monarchs

Many Rulers Befriended by Rothschilds Over Century.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—The powerful Rothschild family has proved the best friend of many Kings of Europe in the past century—but never in the way one of their sons is befriending former King Edward of England today.

Edward's decision to make his refuge until at least after Christmas at the Rothschild castle at Entesfeld, Austria, recalls that many a ruler before him has turned to members of that amazing family for help in a crisis. Heretofore that help has always been in form of bank notes.

Bankers For Four Nations.

While royal dynasties have come and gone in Europe, the Rothschilds, by inter-marriage and close collaboration of their banking houses in four Nations, have built a dynasty much more secure.

Depending on the flourish of a pen in the hand of a Rothschild, armies of Europe for a century have starved and lost or had their bully beef and won.

Britain from the time of the Duke of Wellington; the rulers of Prussia, Bavaria and other German States down to the time of the Kaiser; the builders of the Austrian Empire and the Kings of the Nations formed out of it; the Bourbons and the Republicans of France—all in their time they have crossed a Rothschild threshold in search of their destiny even as Edward has.

Gambled to Crush Napoleon.

Mayer Amsel, brought up to be a rabbi, founded the Rothschild banking business in Frankfort-Am-Main about 1800. The red shield he adopted as his mark, it is believed, signified the family came from Stadt Roeskilde (Red Shield City), Denmark. At any rate, it is the origin of the name.

Four Rothschild sons established banking house branches in London, Paris, Vienna and Naples, while the oldest, Anselm Mayer Rothschild, remained at Frankfort and in 1820 became the Bavarian Court banker. Nathan, who went to England, became the most famous of all the Rothschilds. He gambled all on the Allies to crush Napoleon.

Appeal for Damage From Raid Denied

Acting Captain George M. Little, chief of the Police Department vice squad, was performing a "ministerial duty" when he seized equipment valued at $16,000 from Hammel's Restaurant in 1932 following a prohibition raid on the establishment, the United States Court of Appeals has ruled in affirming of a decision of the District Court which held the police officer was not to be held liable for the temporary seizure of the equipment.

Police raided the establishment, it was brought out, and took with them a Government chemist who examined some beverages and found two of them with alcoholic contents of 2½ per cent to 9 per cent. However, at a Police Court trial, all those arrested were acquitted.

Following the acquittal the property was returned and Louis J. Hammel, proprietor, brought suit for the unlawful taking of his property. He claimed he had been put out of business all the while the equipment was missing. He charged Little with "trespass to personal property."

Lost and Found

By Priscilla Wayne

SYNOPSIS.

Doris Lee has been snowbound for almost a week in the mountain cabin of a man whom she suspects is Dr. George Grayson. He has refused to tell her who he is. From the servants, an Indian, Teck, and his wife, Chicquita, Doris gathers that George is not hiding in the mountains. But why he—young, handsome, talented—should live in utter seclusion in a Jemez mountain cabin, she does not know. She knows only that he resents her presence, though he himself had saved her life when she was lost in the blizzard. She cannot reconcile his churlishness with the occasional flashes of affection. For her part, Doris has met churlishness with impudence and anger, affection with affection.

Doris never guesses that much of George's surliness is caused by suspicions of her. On the night he rescued her from the blizzard he heard a radio police call which described a girl bank robber, Polly Donnelly, who had robbed a bank. The fugitive was believed to have escaped into the mountains, and her description fitted Doris. When George sought to question Doris about her reason of being on the mountain, she indignantly denied the implication that she might be a fugitive—but George is convinced of her identity when Teck brings in the contents of her coupe, all marked with the initials, P. D.

George decides that, right or wrong, he will help her to escape. Disguised as Indians, they are to drive Teck's old car down the mountain as soon as the snowplows come up.

Patrick, George's big German police dog, insists on going with them, and they hide him in the back seat of the old sedan. On their way down they meet a carful of officers going up the mountain.

They are stopped and questioned, but the officers do not suspect them. They reach the valley in safety but realize they must soon abandon their Indian disguises if they are to travel further unquestioned. Patrick's presence complicates their problem.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN.

The refuge they found for the night was a shabby old cabin camp. Half a dozen cottages in the foothills that swept from the mesa up into the far reaching Sandia Mountains.

George estimated that, in all the day's traveling, they had actually come less than 50 miles from their starting point. But there had been endless circling of highway trails, sometimes on roads passable only by the high slung, old-fashioned cars of the Indians, such as they drove.

Teck's wisdom in insisting that they drive his car was now perfectly plain. George must acknowledge that his own inexpensive, low slung car would never have made the mountain grades over the rough and almost impassable roads. "Not that I'm even sure this one will," he told Doris, "But it hasn't failed us yet."

Manages to Go.

"A good many times it's complained bitterly enough," Doris laughed. "But somehow or other we manage to go on."

It was late afternoon when they decided to stop for the night. The had been cabin signs along the road. The signs, at least, made convincing reading. "Shady Bend Cabins. Neat and Cozy."

But the cabins were neither neat nor cozy.

The proprietor, a Mexican, stepped out of the tiny shack that was designated by a misspelled sign as "Office and Grocery Store." He pushed a grimy register book toward George. There had been no entry in the book for several days. "I don't take Indians here, usually," he said gruffly. "But business is slow this time of year. You folks can stay."

"Three dollars," the proprietor said without glancing at the name.

A Mistake.

From his clothes George took a wallet. It did not contain a great deal of money, perhaps $50. But the instant George brought it to light he regretted that he had done so.

The eyes of the Mexican narrowed. Involuntarily he took a step forward.

The Mexican showed his fear that he might lose a paying customer.

"It's the biggest cabin I've got. And the best. Good furniture. Everything." He boasted. "You'll be very comfortable."

"All right," George agreed reluctantly, stripping the three dollar bills from his roll. "Here." Then he started as if greatly frightened, leaped to the car and opened the back door. He grabbed Patrick by the collar and the big dog who had been listening, quivering in every muscle, leaped out seemingly resentful of restraint. His back arched, his glistening, well kept hair stood on end and deep, low throated growls shook him.

The Mexican hustled back into his little office grocery store and stood looking out fearfully with his hand on the screen door as Patrick threatened. "I—I didn't know you had a dog," he stammered.

"He won't hurt you if you don't act suspicious," George said. "But he's a killer. He killed a man once."

Patrick Helps.

"I'd—I'd think you wouldn't be allowed to keep him," the Mexican trembled.

"If anybody's afraid of him all they need to do is keep out of his way," George said. "Which cabin?"

The Mexican led the way to the cabin, keeping a wary eye on the dog and suggesting that George hold the dog's collar.

"I will," George said, "but show us the cabin."

The Mexican had said the cabin was big. And he had said it was comfortable. It was neither. It was a miserable little two room shack. One room contained a bed, a shabby, wired up affair. The other room boasted a stove, a rude table made of pine lumber, a cot and a few cooking utensils.

"I thought it was a big cabin," George grumbled.

"Big enough for four," the Mexican argued. "And there are only two of you. See this cot here opens up for two. But you don't need to have it. This is a two bedroom cottage, you see."

Paid Enough.

"Well, get out of here," George commanded. "It belongs to us for tonight, not you. As a matter of fact, I paid you enough to own the shack."

"Patrick has instinctive likes and dislikes," George told Doris. "You see he despised the sound of that man's voice from the very first. I wasn't running any bluff about it. If I had let go of Patrick's collar he would have leaped right at the throat of that Mex."

"Well, we're glad we've got him," Doris said.

George looked at her closely. The girl was near collapse. There was no doubt of that. There were great circles around her eyes. Her hair hung in little disheveled wisps about her face and she was deathly pale.

"You sit down," George told her, pulling out the only easy chair the cabin boasted. It was a rocking chair broken and then wired together again, none too expertly. "You sit here. I'll bring the car over and then I'll buy some food at that grocery store. Fortunately there's kindling here. You rest now. You look all in."

Patrick Stays.

"Listen, Patrick," George told the dog. "You stay here with Doris. Do you understand? You are to take care of Doris."

As though he understood every word his master had to say Patrick turned slowly, stalked over to Doris' chair. He sat down beside her, looking first from her to his master.

"Good dog," George said, "now, Doris, don't worry. I'll be back in a few minutes."

And he was back very quickly. Sensing that the girl had reached the limit of her endurance he was very cheerful and talkative, although he really felt neither cheerful nor talkative.

"I got all the things the Mex had. Almost his whole stock. There's a can of pepper pot soup here and a carton of crackers. I didn't dare trust any of the unpacked stuff he had. But Patrick must risk the germs." He laid a package of meat down on the table and Patrick regarded the package with interest.

George was building a fire in the cracked old stove as he chatted on. "That Chicquita is a wonder. She thinks of everything. Do you know that she sent my surgical bag along? I was certainly glad to put my hands on it. I've never been without it since I earned the right to carry it. I guess I was too excited to think straight this morning. I would have been lost without it—" He stopped abruptly, retired for the instant into the shell of reserve that always surrounded him when his profession was touched upon.

He opened the can of soup with his pocket knife, since the well equipped, comfortable housekeeping cabin did not possess a can opener, and he heated the soup right in the very can it came in.

He found two bowls and two soup spoons and wiped them carefully with surgical gauze that he took from his surgeon's bag. "They'll be antiseptic," he laughed. "And I don't trust the water around here. We'll not use any of it. There's too much chance to pick up a typhoid bug or something. But I've got to risk you, Patrick. Here's a pound of weiners. The Mex sold 'em to me as a great delicacy but after he handled them with his greasy hands I feel like public enemy No. 1, Patrick, to give 'em to you."

Patrick, however, did not feel squeamish. He gulped the weiners with deep appreciation and wagged his tail joyously as a puppy might. "Poor Patrick," George patted the dog's beautiful head. "You're going through plenty of hardships for you."

Too Much.

With keen eyes he watched Doris. The nervous excitement of the day had been almost too much for the girl.

"Please eat every bite of the food," George urged. "It's warm and clean and nourishing." His voice was so kind and so gentle that Doris did her very best to obey even though it seemed to her that the food would choke her.

"Now you're going to say good night to me and to Patrick," George said to the girl, "I want you to go right to bed, and rest because we're getting out of this place early in the morning. Try not to worry and try to go to sleep. We needn't be afraid, even of the Mexican with Patrick ranging the cabin. I couldn't have enough money in my wallet to make that Mex enter this cabin while Patrick's here. You are to have the presidential suite,"—he nodded toward the bedroom, "I'll bunk here."

Police, Firemen Lose Time Fight

Washington policemen and firemen Tuesday lost their battle for time off equivalent to Saturday half-holidays and legal holidays allowed other District government employes.

Richard N. Elliott, acting comptroller general, in a ruling told the District Commissioners that special legislation would be necessary before they could take the additional time. He held, however, that policemen and firemen are entitled to a full 26-day vacation, exclusive of any legal holidays that may fall within the leave period.

Hitherto, police and firemen have been charged with whatever holidays fell within their vacation periods. Elliott stated that Sundays (or days off) and holidays should be excluded from computation of the vacation period.

Regents, Jeered By Pupils, Vote Frank Hearing

Chairman Charges President Spent Too Much on House and Car.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 16.—Vehement debate on efforts to remove Dr. Glenn Frank from the presidency of the University of Wisconsin ended today in a decision to hold a public hearing on the charges against him.

The board of regents—at a stormy meeting interrupted by table thumping and cheers and jeers of student followers of their "proxy"—voted 9 to 6 to consider the case at an unspecified date in the near future.

Undergradutes crowded into the room applauded Dr. Frank when he declared he will not resign. They jeered Chairman Harold M. Wilkie, leader of the regents appointed by Gov. Philip F. La Follette, when he asserted he will ask for Frank's retirement at expiration of his contract in June.

Lists His Reasons.

As the long-smoldering controversy came into the open, Wilkie urged early consideration of a successor to Frank as head of one of the Nation's leading educational institutions.

He listed these reasons why he could not vote for Frank's reappointment:

"The evidence is unmistakable that Dr. Frank lacks the qualities of either a business or an educational administrator.

"Dr. Frank has lost the confidence of those with whom he must deal. This extends to members of the regents, members of the Legislature and other officials and persons.

"Dr. Frank lacks primary qualities essential in the administrator of a university.

"Dr. Frank has failed to devote sufficient time and attention to university affairs. Indeed, he has failed to fulfill even the specific conditions contained in his original memorandum of service entered into when he was first appointed.

"Dr. Frank has permitted practices regarding expenditures of public money in relation to himself and his own household that I consider questionable, an opinion which has been held by members of the administraitve staff who have been much embarrassed thereby."

A memorandum of expenditures for Frank's house and car, paid from university appropriations, was attached to Wilkie's statement.

Frank charged Wilkie's statement was a "document of generalities" and was "shot through with inaccurate statements of fact."

Then the storm broke and the long conference table resounded to the pounding of fists while the regents debated the issue.

Replies to Criticism.

Frank, president of the school 11 years, told the regents Wilkie's charges dealt with "types of criticism that can be heard on the campus of every major university in the country."

He said Wilkie's criticism of the president's office expenditures hinted of something of a personal or family nature.

"My family and I did not request to live in the residence directed by the board," he said. "I believe we would be better off economically and more satisfied personally if we could live in a house or apartment comparable to the one we had before we came to Wisconsin."

Frank said he has brought Wisconsin from seventh to second place among the Nation's universities and asserted he would "demand a record vote of all those who want a change despite the fact that the curve has gone up."

The upshot of the regents' discussion was the vote for a public hearing on the accusations.

The name of Gov. La Follette, whose regents control the board, was drawn into the proceedings directly.

Describes Conference.

Wilkie said Regents Daniel Grady and John Callahan, both Frank supporters, had attended a conference with Gov. La Follette, Gates and himself last spring.

Grady said he had not always agreed with the president, but accused Wilkie of making a half statement of facts.

"I said at that meeting," Grady asserted, "that if it comes to a question of removing Frank I wanted it understood I would not vote for it."

Callahan denied Wilkie's statement that he had voluntarily agreed to tell Frank the regents were dissatisfied with him. He concurred in what Grady said—that La Follette had told Callahan: "John, you're the man to do it."

Wilkie denied partisan politics had anything to do with the Frank removal movement.

U. S.-Italy Pact of 1871 Junked For New Treaty

New Accord Planned, to Take Effect in Year, Nations Agree.

The American Ambassador to Italy, William Phillips, informed the State Department last night that he and the Italian minister for foreign affairs, Count Galeazzo Ciano, had begun preliminary discussions for the negotiation of a new treaty of friendship, commerce and navigation between the two countries.

The conversations are to be continued with a view to supplanting in a new treaty the old agreement of 1871, still in force, and now considered antiquated and inadequate to meet modern conditions.

In the background is the present American neutrality law, expected to be renewed and extended on an even broader basis by the coming session of Congress. Article 6 of the 1871 treaty provides that neither country shall impose restrictions on exportations to the other without taking similar action against all nations. This conflicts with the mandatory provision in the neutrality law that President Roosevelt must apply strict embargoes on shipments from the United States of arms, ammunition and implements of war. This was done during the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Since Italy, if it had wished, could have challenged the neutrality law as a violation of international law, the revamping of the old treaty is deemed of first importance.

In Rome yesterday, according to an Associated Press dispatch, Count Ciano and Ambassador Phillips jointly denounced the old treaty, with the denunciation to take effect in a year's time.

The new treaty will provide equal rights for American businessmen in Italy with Italians and vice versa in this country, thus continuing the unconditional most-favored-nation provisions of the old treaty.

Work of Blind Placed on Sale At Exhibit Here

Institute Sponsors Bazaar for Benefit of Sightless D. C. Residents.

Exquisite craftwork, made by the sightless residents of Washington under the auspices of the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind, is now on display and offered for sale at 1116 Vermont avenue, at headquarters of the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing.

The exhibit represents the work of approximately 40 persons who have been trained by the Institute's home teaching department under the direction of Miss Cora A. Fitton who is totally blind herself.

Pillow tops, crocheted scarfs, knitted shawls, embroidered towels, shell flowers, hand-woven rugs, leather articles and numerous other types of hand-made pieces are included in the bazaar, arranged for the benefit of the handicapped persons whose work it represents.

One of the unusual features of the display is a collection of cats and dogs made of lamb's pelt, stitched on the wrong side, reversed and stuffed with mattress filler. "Blind pupils did all the work except putting on the eyes and nose and mouth for each cat or dog. Someone who could see had to help us with that part," said Miss Fitton.

A part of the sale-exhibit was furnished by the sightless colored residents of the District, who got their instruction from Miss Esther Dillard, a blind teacher who has classes at Phyllis Wheatley Crafts Shop. "All the woven articles in the display were made by Miss Dillard's pupils," Miss Fitton said.

Another section of the exhibit is a display from the institute's manual training shop which specializes in turning out genuine rush seats. John Paul Jones, partially blind instructor, has arranged an electrically-lighted stand on which samples of 30 different types of rush seats are exhibited.

The sale, beginning yesterday, will continue today and tomorrow from 10 a. m. until 10 p. m. Refreshments will be on sale each day from noon until 2 p. m. and from 5 to 7 p. m.

By Sidney Olson.

Gus Gennerich was a big, wide, solid man.

After he had died suddenly, slumping over on the table in a Buenos Aires cabaret on the morning of December 2, the ohter Secret Service operatives decided that he was going to be buried "right."

Two of them went out to get a coffin for Gus—not just any coffin, but the best and biggest they could find.

In a back street in Buenos Aires they found a cabinetmaker who had the coffin they wanted. It was huge and heavy, in a rare dark Brazilian mahogany, with great round gold handles. They bought it for Gus, the man who guarded Franklin D. Roosevelt for eight years—the man who was the President's shadow, bullet-proof vest and strong right arm all in one.

So yesterday morning the body of August Adolf Gennerich lay in state in the East Room of the White House in a Brazilian mahogany coffin draped in the American flag. The President was there, and Mrs. Roosevelt, the Cabinet and their wives, representatives of the Army and Navy, members of the Senate and the House, and lesser dignitaries.

They all sat quietly, staring at Gus' coffin, which rested before an immense bank of flowers before the golden drapes of the huge east window in the soft, clear light of the three enormous hanging crystal chandeliers. There, in the room where former King Edward VIII danced, where Calvin Coolidge, jr., was mourned, where the glittering functions of state have been held, the dignitaries of 1936 sat and thought of Gus.

The President sat quite still, the same grim look about his mouth that was there when his lifelong friend and secretary, Louis McHenry Howe, was buried from this same room last April.

The Rev. Dr. G. E. Lenski, white-haired pastor of the Grace Lutheran Church, said the services, in a brief and simple talk that held the room even quieter than before, somehow.

Then the President got up and walked out on the arm of his son, James Roosevelt, who later accompanied the body to New York for funeral services there, with interment to follow at Middle Village, L. I. After him went Mrs. Roosevelt and Gus' only two relatives, Charles and Augustus Gutrie, his brother-in-law and nephew, respectively.

No one mentioned the abandoned 150-acre farm that Gus bought two years ago in Dutchess County, near the Hyde Park home of the man he always called "The Boss." Mrs. Roosevelt had been helping Gus furnish the place, choosing curtains and rugs. He wanted to live near "The Boss" after Mr. Roosevelt quit being the President of the country.

Two uniformed White House guards stood by Gus' coffin yesterday. The White House flag was at half-staff. Then they carried him to the train.

Oslo Permit Expires, But Trotzky Will Stay

Oslo, Norway, Dec. 16 (AP).—Leon Trotzky's permit to reside in Norway reached the eve of expiration tonight, but there were indications the Russian revolutionary exile would go right on living here.

The government has refused to renew the permit, which expires tomorrow, and Ttrotzky has let it be known he will not accept Mexico's invitation to live there unless Mexico will grant him full freedom of political activity. Mexico, it was understood, is not prepared to go that far. Hence, it appeared, Norway will have to make the best of an embarrassing situation.

Father of Twins Is 100.

Oklahoma City, Dec. 16 (AP).—The State Health Department recorded today the birth of twins in Ridgway, Pittsburgh County, to the wife of a man claiming to be 100 years old. The twins, Alice and Albert Lee, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lee. The father wrote on the certificate that he was born in Kentucky in 1836. Mrs. Lee gave her age at 36.

Army Calls Tax Parley on Cuba School System

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Dec. 16 (AP).—Army headquarters tonight asked all members of the house of representatives to meet with military leaders tomorrow as a controversy between civil and military authorities over an army-sponsored sugar tax bill threatened to create a government crisis.

Civil leaders tightened their lines to block passage of the measure and military leaders said they are ready for a last-ditch fight to obtain $1,500,000 in tax money for their rural school program.

The bill has passed the senate and is before the house of representatives. It provides for a tax of nine cents a bag on all sugar produced, to be turned over to the army for establishment and maintenance of rural schools in which army men would teach.

President Miguel Mariano Gomez, after signing the law creating the authority for the schools, was understood to have decided the bill would be against the interest of the government. The Gomez supporters have succeeded in preventing a vote, but the bill is scheduled to be brought up at a special session of the house Friday night.

Last September the army opened 700 rural schools, and 2,300 more are to be opened in 1937.

Domingo Macias, cabinet member and close friend of the president, declared last night.

N. Y.-to-Brazil Flier, 21 Hrs. Overdue, Safe

Miami, Fla., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Joseph Costa, goodwill flier en route from Corning, N. Y., to Brazil, landed safely today at San Juan, P. R., almost 21 hours after he had been expected, Pan American Airways officials reported. Fears for his safety developed last night when he was long overdue. He reportedly landed at Dabajon, Dominican Republic, when he ran into bad weather and remained there overnight.

Officials Assail 'Melodramatic' Raid by Hoover

N. Y. Fire and Police Heads Term Gun Battle 'Small Town Heroics.'

New York, Dec. 16.—Breaking openly with J. Edgar Hoover and his G-men, the heads of the New York Police and Fire Departments today voiced sharp criticism of what they called the "melodramatic" Federal raid on an upper Westside apartment house yesterday.

"Heroics" and "small town stuff" were among the descriptive phrases applied by Fire Commissioner John J. McElligott to the sub-machine gun and tear-gas barrage that resulted in the capture of Harry Brunette, Green Bay, Wis., desperado, and his wife.

"I don't think it takes more than two New York cops to do a thing of this kind," he said.

McElligott denied that Hoover and his ten agents had blasted the lock off Brunette's apartment with gun fire. He said it was ripped off by two firemen who braved a storm of bullets to extinguish a blaze caused by an exploding tear gas bomb.

McElligott protested in a letter to Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine that the firemen had been unnecessarily exposed to gun fire. Valentine replied that he considered the protest "well founded," and blamed the shooting on the Federal agents.

The police commissioner said it was his rigid policy to "prohibit melodramatic raids on the hiding places of criminals."

"In a matter of departmental routine," he said, "members of our force frequently arrest criminals as desperate as Harry Brunette is alleged to be, yet always without fanfare, the spectacular or unnecessary gun play."

In this connection he recalled the capture last March of ten members of what came to be known as the "Arsenal Gang," so called because their hideout contained numerous firearms. The police did not give them an opportunity to use any of their weapons.

Despite Hoover's assertion yesterday that "nobody was double-crossed," Valentine declared the Federal agents had violated a prearranged plan by which it was hoped to seize Brunette as he entered or left the apartment.

He expressed relief that "no innocent person was injured or killed" in the raid. Brunette's wife, who was slightly wounded in the thigh, was the sole casualty.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia declined to enter the controversy. He said there was "complete co-operation between the police department and the Department of Justice."

Fire Commissioner McElligott said approximately 100 persons on the upper floors of the building were imperiled by the blaze. He expressed belief the Government men should have withheld their fire until it was brought under control.

"I think the gunman would have given the firemen that break," he added. "He was trapped in there himself."

Brunette, meanwhile, was in Trenton, N. J., awaiting trial on a charge of kidnaping a New Jersey State trooper last month.

Federal agents continued their search for Merle Vandenbush, his alleged accomplice in three Wisconsin bank robberies, as well as in the kidnaping.

Rhea Whitley, head of the New York office of the Bureau of Investigation, tonight said Vandenbush "definitely" was not in the apartment with Brunette at the time of the raid.

Brunette Indicted.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 16 (AP).—A county grand jury indicted Harry Brunette as a kidnaper and robber today, while a Federal grand jury summoned witnesses to appear before it tomorrow in the same case.

The Somerset County grand jury, sitting at Somerville, named Brunette's wife, who was captured with him in a gun battle in New York yesterday, and Merle Vandenbush, who is still at large, as Brunette's companions in the Armistice Day kidnaping of State Trooper William A. Turnbull.

Wins Cummings Praise.

By the Associated Press.

Denying that J. Edgar Hoover had violated any "agreement" with New York City police in the capture of Harry Brunette, Attorney General Cummings yesterday praised Hoover and federal agents for their work in taking the alleged kidnaper into custody.

Cummings said he had talked with Hoover several times by telephone, that he was familiar with the manner in which Brunette and his wife were captured in their Riverside Drive apartment early Monday, and that no official complaints had been received.

Officials Study Market Rumor Of Corn Corner

Strict Rules Laid Down on 'Open Interest' Deals in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Declaring the Government wants to see "if there has been any attempt to corner corn," Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, chief of the Commodity Exchange Commission, disclosed yesterday that the recent jump in grain prices has been watched closely by Federal agents.

In an effort to tighten their check-up, he said, additional reports have been required on trading in the Chicago market for December wheat and corn futures.

Reports now are required on wheat transactions of 100,000 bushels or more, while dealings under 200,000 bushels formerly went unreported. Reports now are required on 25,000-bushel corn trades, while transactions below 200,000 bushels previously did not have to be reported.

Open Interest Traced.

Dr. Duvel, in charge of supervising speculative trading in commodities, said there was a large open interest in December corn, with very little of the grain available in Chicago.

"We want to see who has this open interest, and if there has been any attempt to corner corn," he added.

(Commodity exchange spokesmen defined "open interest" as future contracts not yet performed. They said if a person sold 1,000,000 bushels of corn for December delivery that was an "open interest" until he bought that amount and closed the transaction.)

Dr. Duvel told reporters his men, in investigating the cause of the recent upward swings in grain prices, "have not found anything in the market, except gossip that there was a food shortage in Germany and that Italy was increasing purchases of foreign wheat."

Wheat Weather Prevails.

Coincident with his disclosure of redoubled vigilance over speculative trading, the Weather Bureau reported conditions last week were "favorable for winter wheat in the main producing sections."

This followed several weeks of dry weather, especially in the western great plains.

"The top soil is in fairly satisfactory shape in most of the plains, and in the lower Missouri Valley, although subsoil moisture remains deficient," the bureau's crop survey said.

Conditions in Kansas and Oklahoma, important wheat States, were reported favorable recently, although more rain was needed.

Youth Indicted For Sending 2 Threats in Mail

38 Other True Bills Voted by Jury; Gun Wielder Must Face Trial.

The District grand jury yesterday brought in 39 indictments, all of which were returned to Justice Peyton Gordon, sitting in District Court.

In one, Steve Michael Terry, 18, was charged with extortion. He is said to have sent two threatening letters to Samuel Einwohner, of 441 Decatur street, proprietor of an Eleventh street drug store. Terry was arrested after Einwohner had placed an ad in the papers after consulting police. Terry at the time had gone to the city postoffice to collect the $1,000 he demanded in the letter. He was captured October 10.

Two policemen charged they were targets for King's wild shots when he fired at them from behind a broken door.

Police Tell of Shots.

The policemen, Raymond E. Maust and Ralph F. Edwards, said they were called to the D street address, where they met Mrs. Ruby King, wife of the prisoner, who told them her husband had ejected her from the apartment and cut her hand.

When they went to arrest King, he fired two shots through the door, one of the bullets narrowly missing Maust. Tear gas bombs were ordered, the door broken down, and King, told he was about to be gassed, surrendered.

Two colored men were charged with first-degree murder. They were Will Kinard, 36, charged with slaying his wife, Laura, and James Doughtridge, 23, who was accused of killing Thomas Frisby, also colored, a fellow employe in an M street apartment house.

In addition the grand jury named five men for homicide. They were James Bailey, 35; Solomon Speed, 42; James Marsh, 19; Willie Williams, 28, and Herbert Sharpert Titus, 27.

Felon Indicted.

Now serving time in Florida for armed robbery, Fred Housewert, 34, was named in indictments charging him with three cases of forgery and uttering. Housewert is said to have obtained $50 from three local banks on money order blanks stolen from the Railway Express Agency at Gastonia, N. C., in 1934.

Bandit Waves Wand, $1,000 Disappears

Washington, Pa., Dec. 16 (AP).—officials of the Citizen's National Bank said today $1,000 disappeared from a teller's cage after a man visited the bank carrying what they described as a wand with a bulb on one end.

Albert J. Allison, president of the bank, said:

"We're not sure exactly what happened.

"Some of the customers say the stranger poked the wand through the grill work and removed the packages of bills.

"A check-up shows $1,000 is missing."

Small Courts Well Plans Abandoned

The District Engineer Department has abandoned plans to obtain artesian water for the air cooling system to be installed in the Small Courts Building to be erected in Judiciary Square, Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, disclosed yesterday.

Test borings have failed to produce a sufficient supply of water, Col. Sultan said. As a consequence water from the municipal system will be used, but it will be utilized over and over again so as not to constitute a drain on the city's reservoirs.

Col. Sultan also revealed the District, for the same reason, had been instrumental in having the Federal Government run a special pipe line to the Potomac River for the air conditioning of the Capitol.

D. C. Heads Seek Fund for School

The District Commissioners yesterday went before the Budget Bureau to plead for inclusion of an item of nearly $200,000 in next year's District budget for purchase of a site for the Jefferson Junior High School in the southwest.

The money requested would not place a heavier burden on the inadequate municipal revenue as it was appropriated in 1932.

While the original appropriation was for construction of the building, the reappropriation would be used for buying the site. The District already has bought half of a site but has been blocked for several years in its efforts to obtain the other half.

'Captain' Bailey Is Found in Fire's Ashes Near River He Loved.

house wasn't there. It had been torn down three months ago by the National Capital Park system—to make way for something or other

Sits Under Tree by Fire

But the fact the old boathouse was no longer there did not deter "Capt." Bailey. Every day for three months he has been going back to the site of the old boathouse, to sit under a drooping willow by a fire, spending night after night in the open with a few cronies who liked to gab.

Fuzzy and ragged Charley Franz, who lives in a shack lighted by a ship's lantern and inhabited by 17 cats, sometimes would walk by and look at "Capt." Bailey sitting on his box. But Charley and "Captain" never got along well because Charley is a newcomer around there, an upstart. "I only lived here since 1915," Charley explained last night, "besides, I always thought it was funny how 20 of my cats were poisoned once."

"Captain" got along better with Eugene Jones, watchman at the P. E. P. Co. plant across the street. Jones is a great story teller, and will tell you without a blink about a 600-foot snake he saw dug up on a farm next to his. There were other casual acquaintances of the "Captain," each a Mark Twain character, who liked to sit by the fire bulling all night long, but for the most part he liked it just as well when alone, near the boathouse that was no more.

Once Had Good Business.

He would get to thinking about the live bait business he once had, when he sold smelts, frogs, crayfish, worms and clams all over the United States and got rich at it. He would get to thinking about all the bateaus he had built in his day, and star boats, and even some cruisers. He wanted to build one more 50-foot boat. Then he would think about how he had brought the first motorboat to Washington, years and years ago, and what a sensation it had been; the pile of money he had made in his time, and spent, just as fast as he got it, as rivermen always have and always will. Or the years he had been a game warden on the river and the fights he had had with tough fishermen who set seines against the law; and all the lore and mysteries of fishes he knew. He was the oldest man around the river. He knew much. He had many memories.

It had been a great life down on the Anacostia, and a quiet white home in a suburb was no place for a man like him. That sort of thing was all right for his son, Barry, jr., or his wife who lived with the boy's family, or his sister, or his other son, Martin. Let them come and take him away in their big cars—he'd fool 'em and sneak back to the river next day. Monday morning he sneaked away and stayed by the river all night.

Yesterday the old man was found dead, stretched out face downward in the cold wet ashes of his campfire. He had tumbled off his box during the night, Death having stolen upon him unexpectedly during the lonely hours. The fire had gone out. The river slid silently by, and the reeds parted to let the stranger through. Death came quietly, peacefully, and the old man died happy by the side of the mistress of whom he had never grown tired.

Pickpocket Gets $200 From Aged Man in Rush

Yesterday at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest he became caught in a wedge of Christmas shoppers. He was jostled and in the scuffle a nimble-fingered thief took his wallet containing $200.

Wright reported the theft to police. He said he felt himself pushed, but dismissed it as the rush of the crowd.

Bird 40,000,000 Years Old Deduced From Single Bone

A hitherto unknown species of pigmy falcon which lived 40,000,000 years ago was described yesterday by Dr. Alexander Wetmore, ornithologist and assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

Mentally reconstructing the creature from a single fossilized bone found in a Nebraska quarry, Dr. Wetmore deduced it was about the size of the male of a small race of the sparrow hawk which now inhabits Florida. Evidence indicates the pigmy falcon lived in the middle and upper Miocene periods.

With the bone were found fossil remains of ancient horses and other animals that roamed the American Midwest 400,000 centuries ago. They were referred to the Smithsonian for identification.

Any addition to fossil avian material is of exceptional importance, Dr. Wetmore said, since very meager evidence exists of prehistoric birds. While mammal fossils are comparatively abundant, bones of ancient birds are extremely scarce because they were lighter and fragile. Moreover, feathered creatures were not so likely to perish under conditions conducive to their preservation as fossils.

THE POST'S New Yorker

No Lights for Eleanor

ELEANOR HOLM and Art Jarrett make their first New York appearance this week, at Loew's State . . . "We'll tour the road first," was the pretty picture Jarrett had painted, "and then wind up in a blaze of glory—our names in lights on Broadway" . . . But there is no blaze of glory. For their names, scheduled to appear in lights above the Loew's State marquee, aren't there—because of electricians' union trouble!

THE ADS for the Perry-Vines match at the Garden next month have the wrong name captions under each player's photo. Incidentally, that allegedly secret match between them was played September 9, before a gallery of friends, with Vines beating his amateur opponent in straight sets, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2. Perry now insists he merely was practicing his strokes then . . .

MARRIED members of the Ziegfeld Follies cast, who start the road tour next week, describe the event as "a Shubert divorce" . . . Sidney Skolsky, Eddie Cantor and Oscar Levant, three hypochondriacs, grouped together at a party. "What d'ya say we all go see a doctor?" Levant proposed . . . "Okay," Skolsky agreed, "and as far as the cost is concerned—low blood pressure pays all."

ROBERT BENCHLEY and Ken Smith exited from Tony's at 3:30 a. m. and remained transfixed at the door. On the otherwise deserted street, right before their eyes, paraded nine elephants all in a row, graded according to height, with the tail of each entwined in the trunk of the other. The elephants plodded along Fifty-second street. Benchley and Smith turned to stare at each other silently, wheeled automatically, stepped to the bar and chorused: "One Scotch. Quick!"

LADY FURNESS, one of former King Edward's circle of friends, arrived in England just in time for the abdication—which will cost her a lot of money. Her fashion show, featuring coronation gowns, was scheduled to have opened here yesterday. Because Lady Furness knew the King so well, as well as the styles he preferred, a heavy sale had been expected.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Settin' Around.

HOLLYWOOD, DEC. 16.

When a mystery picture is being filmed, the Paramount studio seems drenched with excitement. As though the tenseness of the story is communicated to every member of the company. "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back" is in production at this studio, and walking from stage to stage I got the feeling that sinister-eyed men armed with sharp knives were stalking me. Well, maybe they were; men with knives poised to plunge in backs are not uncommon in Hollywood, if you understand what I mean.

HEATHER ANGEL.

Ray Milland (playing the role Ronald Colman brought to the screen) and Heather Angel were resting between scenes on the "Bulldog Drummond" set. "I'm having the time of my life playing this picture," Miss Angel said, "because Drummond was my favorite hero when I was in boarding school in England. I used to read about him when I was supposed to be studying my lessons," Milland snickered and said, "I thought so!"

The entire cast is English (Milland, Miss Angel, Sir Guy Standing, Reginald Denny, E. E. Cline) and so many aitches are being dropped that I think the studio should hire a man to sweep them up.

Difficulty confronts those who might go on a Carole Lombard set. A sign at the stage door reads: POSITIVELY NO ENTRANCE, and a special guard is on hand to see that the rule is obeyed. It seems that our Miss Lombard is in a peeve because a newspaper woman asked too many personal questions about her romance with Clark Gable, so she demanded a ban on all reporters while she is at work.

Strange, because it has not been long since Carole was parading Clark to public places, and talking about their "fun together."

Actual dollars-and-cents bets are being wagered as to whether Bing Crosby will show up for his annual photograph sitting. The Crooner hates to pose for portraits, but agreed with the studio cameraman that he would go to the gallery "sometime in December." "Aw, you'll give me the usual run-around," growled the photographer.

"No, I'll sign a promissory note for it," Crosby said, and he did. The note promises that he will pose for a sitting before Christmas. As yet, Bing has not appeared, and the betting odds are long that he will wangle out of it, somehow. I believe he will keep the appointment. He makes few promises, but I have never known him to fail in one.

Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Lovers to Have Two-Week Chance to Hear Words by Noted D'Oyly Carte Company Next Month; Chick York and Rose King, Noted Vaudevillians, to Head Stage Bill at Earle Theater Over Holidays.

IN SITTING in contemplation of the screen goings-on of Preston Foster, Ann Dvorak, Russell Hopton and the rest of the boys and girls engaged in the largely nefarious business of "We Who Are About to Die," one is regaled now and again by the apparition of a small lad who steps out on the screen in announcement of the next featured attraction and virtually sings his little head off. This would be Bobby Breen, the youngster brought to the attention of an army of radio fans by Eddie Cantor and made known to another army through his splendid work in "Let's Sing Again."

BELL.

This Master Bobby Breen is by way of being a bit of a phenomenon. I don't recall any other screen youngster who can sing so well or act so effectively. And by "youngster" I mean precisely that, in or out of quotes. I suspect that this lad is in the neighborhood of 10 years old, but he doesn't quite look it and he certainly doesn't quite sing it or act it. He could be 30 or 40 and do worse!

In "Rainbow on the River," the youthful Breen will have the advantage of support by May Robson and a long list of others of the first rank.

This, however, is not the only claim that RKO-Keith's can make to attention during the holiday period. Hot on the heels, as the saying is, of "Rainbow on the River," Lily Pons will be coming along to Fifteenth street to present her piquant personality and incomparable voice in "That Girl From Paris." That would be about New Year's week, as the crow flies. Jack Oakie, Gene Raymond, Herman Bing, Mischa Auer and others of note have congenial assignments in support of Mlle. Pons in her next vehicle.

We have had a good deal to say in this space recently about the presence in the tesselated magnificence of the drama department of Master Wallace Munro, former Buckingham Palace guard, soldier of the King and now confrere of ambassadors extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary, who comes to town to herald the imminence of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company in their incomparable renditions of the Gilbert and Sullivan Savoyard works.

For the benefit of prospective seat purchasers, it might be well to name the operas in the order of their presentation at the National, beginning with the week of Monday, January 18. So here they are:

Monday, January 18, "The Mikado;" Tuesday, "Trial by Jury" and "Pirates of Penzance;" Wednesday, "Yeomen of the Guard;" Thursday, "The Gondoliers;" Friday, "The Mikado;" Saturday, matinee and evening, "Iolanthe."

Monday, January 25, "The Gondoliers;" Tuesday, "Iolanthe;" Wednesday, "The Mikado;" Thursday, "Cox and Box" and "Pinafore;" Friday, "Patience;" Saturday, matinee and night, "The Gondoliers."

So now you know.

Those fine old representatives of the high flights of vaudeville at its zenith, Chick York and Rose King, will return to the local rostrums to headline the Christmas week bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater.

You will remember, of course, that these two glorious buffoons call their act a "Tintype Revue." They pose once as a tintype might once have been posed, but that is about all you can make out of the title. You can make a lot of fun out of York and King, however, any way you look at them.

My say always has been one of admiration for their long service in the two, three, four and five a day, where they created joy for years on end. I place these able performers in the same list with The Four Cohans, The Four Mortons, Ezra Kendall, Cressey and Dayne, James J. Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Barry and the rest of the vaudeville immortals.

Others on the Earle's Christmas stage bill, by the way, will include Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey, favorite radio songsters, and Bob Ripa, best of all the contemporaneous jugglers, who recently missed a boat at Copenhagen, as you may remember.

The Loew interests in the Capital have sent out a hurry call for 25 debutantes to take part in Rudy Vallee's "Punch Bowl Revue," to be seen on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater starting on Christmas Day.

Vallee, it seems, has a novel production number that will require the participation of four debutantes at every performance. They will not be required to sing, dance or act, but they really should be there to walk across the stage in a truly debutante manner.

Any Capital debs who are interested are urged to get in immediate touch with Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Capitol, who is acting as contact man for Rudy in this emergency.

Blackfriars

"THE JOYOUS SEASON." The Blackfriars Guild presents the drama in three acts by Philip Barry, directed by Mary Olive O'Connell, with setting designed and constructed by the Guild. In St. Paul's Hall, December 14, 15 and 16. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

A detailed study of the temperaments, conflicts and lives of a family group of nine, "The Joyous Season" was the choice of the Blackfriars Guild for their contribution to the 1936 Christmas season. But the Philip Barry drama was none too happy a selection.

Drab in spots, extremely verbose in others and motionless in still other places, the play could hardly be termed one to add any particular levity to what even the author termed "The Joyous Season."

Yet, withal, the Blackfriars Guild presented another neat bit of stagecraft, making as much of the script as the degree of talent represented permitted. The credit of the evening goes to Mary Olive O'Connell, who so manipulated her dramaturgic implements as to draw forth the maximum effect.

The story revolves around the division of material wealth and real estate, centering upon Sister Christina's choice on properties for a convent. Into the main plot come the hopes and ambitions, the antagonisms and petty jealousies of the various members of the family.

Mary K. Crowley, no stranger to nun roles, appears as Christina and dominates in word, act and pose the entire play. Without her quiet mien, her soft, yet perfectly audible voice, her ease of performance, the drama would have lost its most valuable asset.

Others participating included Adah May Brady, John A. Beaver (between whom is the major battle of words), John Edgar Chadwick, Henry Quirk, Leo Brady, Edgar Kloten, Nelle Orton, Clarence J. Wittler, Dorothy Davidson, Marguereta D. Nordstrom and Vera Whitman.

A Good Prison Picture Makes Debut for RKO

By Nelson B. Bell.

"WE WHO ARE ABOUT TO DIE" RKO-Radio picturization of a screen play by John Twist, featuring Preston Foster and Ann Dvorak, with Johnny Beal, Russell Hopton, J. Carroll Naish, Ray Mayer, Frank M. Thomas, Lane Sisters, John Wray, Paul Hurst, T. DeWitt Jennings, Bryant Washburn, Howard Hickman, Wilfred Lucas, Oscar Apfel, Tom McGuire and Willie Fung. Directed by John Christy Cabanne. Reviewed Tuesday night at RKO-Keith's Theater.

That long "last mile" that spreads itself interminably between the grim threats of the present and a problematical eternity is made the plot basis of "We Who Are About to Die," the new picture which opened at RKO-Keith's on Tuesday.

There is nothing startlingly new about the story of the wrongly condemned innocent, verdicted into an assumption of the guilt of a dyed-in-the-wool gangster, or in the Governor's reprieve from the gallows at the last minute, but there is, after all, a dramatic forcefulness and a tug at the heart exerted by this picture that set it slightly apart from those which have so often been cast in the same mold.

This I cannot attribute wholly to the performances of those in the pivotal roles. Preston Foster, Ann Dvorak, John Beal and the rest do fine work, but the real "punch" of this item rests in the manner in which it has been contrived by the authors of the working script. They have seen to it—or rather, John Twist, the scenarist, has seen to it single-handedly—that "We Who Are About to Die" offers a succession of incidents so expertly counterpointed and contrasted as to make a picture of continuous and sustained suspense.

Cast Balances Well.

While we may seem to take something away from the cast's responsibility for the excellence of this screen subject, there are yet many things to be said in commendation of the roster of principals who have been engaged for this production. Ann Dvorak and Preston Foster, I think, both have been better in other pictures, but I doubt if that honestly could be said of Johnny Beal, Russel Hopton, J. Carroll Naish or Ray Mayer, an old vaudevillian who suddenly has gone celluloid.

The story is, as I have intimated, a stereotyped recital of what happens in the death house of a major penitentiary. There are scenes in this one that reveal the mental reactions of the prisoners to their environment and incessant surveillance that are, perhaps, the best that ever have been made—exceeding even the vivid realism of "The Big House." For this quality of splendid adherence to a sinister and repugnant reality I credit Paul Hurst, John Wray and that inexplicable Celestial, Willie Fung, more than anyone else. They make the prison scenes extremely real.

There is a numerous assemblage of short-reel subjects to lend further interest to a bill that has a slightly trite but moving feature as its main attraction.

Snapshots Thickly "Peopled."

A new issue of the "Screen Snapshots" discloses the principal enterprises of a long list of Hollywood celebrities, including some of the younger generation who will be crowding their daddies and mamas off the screen in the course of time. "Dizzy Ducks" is a cartoon comedy of considerable merit and the Pathe News, in addition to current events of universal interest, presents a comprehensive review of the career of the lately abdicated King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wally Simpson, of which, I am sure, we all are getting a little tired by now.

In the large view, this is a bill that can be recommended to those who like variety in their screen fare, even if the major attraction lacks something of pristine freshness and the degree of originality upon which many patrons of the cinema insist.

Player's Club

"OUTWARD BOUND." The Players' Club of the Central Community Center Department presents the fantasy-drama in three acts and four scenes by Sutton Vane, staged by Francis Crane. At the Theodore Roosevelt High School. Reviewed Tuesday evening by Johnson Williams.

One of the most exquisitely drawn dramas of metaphysical imagining—a fantasy which many an amateur group has produced with commendation—is Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound," but last evening the Players' Club production of this thought-provoking drama revealed little more than memorable lines read with uncertainty in a setting where normally slow action was replaced almost with inertia.

The theme of the play—what transpires on that outward-bound voyage from death to the parting of the ways—need not be further recounted. Of the nine characters, William Austin Davis stood forth as the one person in whom there seemed to abide some semblance of the true appreciation of the Vane philosophy. Mr. Davis' interpretation did not reek, as some have, of alcohol, and in this regard his was a somewhat different interpretation of the youthful ne'er-do-well.

Young love—supposedly consummated in death when it was forbidden in life—was depicted stiffly by Delmar Boulger and, a bit more realistically, or Alice Louise Hunter. James Carroll was a quiet scrubby; Dorothy Braun, a haughty socialite; Terry McPhearson, a crusading cleric; Richard Boulger, an officious businessman, and Harriett Bryant, a rather miscostumed cockney mother. The examiner was depicted with quiet dignity by Jack Rollins.

The single setting was simply and effectively arranged.

'Boy Meets Girl' Heads Attractions for Week of Fine Shows.

"Boy Meets Girl," one of last season's smash comedy hits of Broadway, will be the attraction at the National Theater for the week beginning next Monday night. The play has been produced and directed by George Abbott, who also had a finger in the production of "Three Men on a Horse" and "Brother Rat." The cast for this engagement will be led by Marie Brown, Roy Roberts, former leading man with Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players; Owen Martin, Richard Waring, Fleming Ward, Jean Casto, Byron Shores and Douglas Gerard. There will be the customary matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

At the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow the attraction on the screen will be Joe E. Brown in "Polo Joe," reputedly one of the funniest comedies he has made, even bearing in mind 'Earthworm Tractors." The star is ably supported in this subject and has a chance to demonstrate the skill he has acquired in a game that long has been one of his private hobbies. On the stage for the new week, the headliner will be Josephine Huston, a new voice from the air-waves.

Charlie Chan, in the agreeable person of Warner Oland will occupy the silver sheet at Loew's Capitol next week in "Charlie Chan at the Opera," a new film play based on the Earl Derr Biggers formula. This film play, which will begin its run tomorrow, has in its supporting cast such luminaires as Boris Karloff, Keye Luke, Charlotte Henry and Alan Dinehart. The stage bill will be headlined by George Beatty, who bills himself as "half singer, half wit," with Moore and Revel, the Three St. John Brothers and others supplementing the living entertainment.

For a second week, "Born to Dance," the superlatively excellent musical film play on the screen at Loew's Palace, will continue to intrigue the interest of Washington audiences. With Eleanor Powell, Sid Silvers, Buddy Ebsen, Raymond Walburn, Una Merkel, Jimmy Stewart and a host of other clever entertainers in the cast, This is a subject to lure the wariest screen taste. The short subjects, of course, also are being held over.

When the current run of "The Life of Edward VIII" and "Love in Evile" is completed at the Belasco Theater, the major screen attraction will be a return engagement of 'Don Quixote," in which the title role is played by that fabulous Russian barytone and actor, Feodor Chaliapin. Other players in the cast are Emily Fitzroy, Sidney Fox, Miles Mander, Oscar Asche, Lydia Sherwood and Renee Valliers. The picture was directed by that past master at this sort of thing, G. W. Pabst.

The next offering on the screen at the Rialto Theater will be "If I Had a Million," that delightfully episodic story of what people in various walks of life would do if they suddenly came into wealth. W. C. Fields, Alison Skipworth, Charles Laughton and many others appear in prominent roles.

"Rendezvous" has been selected as the next screen feature at the Little Theater, with William Powell and Rosalind Russell in the principal roles. The yarn is one of wartime machinations and the secret service. It is a little hard to take at times, but in the end adds up to a pretty exciting hour or so of screen entertainment.

At the Metropolitan for the attraction following the eminently successful "Theodora Goes Wild," the management announces Martha Raye, that raving singing, comedienne who has come to the fore so rapidly, in "Hideaway Girl." Just when this will come off, nobody seems to know.

The incoming attraction on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater is "Rose Bowl," in which the costellar roles are played by Eleanore Whitney and Tom Brown. The story naturally is one of gridiron prowess. It will be augmented by the usual short subjects and newsreel.

At the Gayety next week beginning with the Sunday matinee performance, the offering will be a new Independent Burlesque Association production, starring "Boots" Burns and Mlle. Tamara, two feminine sensations, and featuring the three lively comics, McNally, Devine and Wallace. Two matinee and one night performances daily, as usual.

Ruby Williams, Mr. Hyatt Wed

Of interest to Montgomery County was the wedding last evening of Miss Ruby Mae Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry T. Williams, and granddaughter of former County Commissioner Downey Williams, to Mr. Herbert Souder Hyatt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hyatt, of Damascus.

The wedding took place at the Williams home near Etchison, Md., in the presence of about 250 guests. The Rev. William A. Ledford, pastor of Mount Tabor Methodist Church, officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines, with a veil falling to the end of the short train. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and baby breath. Her only attendant was Miss Hilda Hyatt, sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor, who was dressed in changeable blue taffeta and wore a corsage of talisman roses.

Mr. Kenneth Howes, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Guy Howes, of Etchison, was best man.

A reception followed the ceremony, at which the bride and bridegroom were assisted in receiving by their parents, and Mrs. J. Ernest Hawkins and Mrs. Thomas Hawkins, of Etchison. The bride's mother wore a gown of black crepe and a corsage of roses. Mrs. Hyatt chose rust crepe for her gown.

Cotton Boosted Many Millions By 2 Operators

'Little Fellows' Squeeze Market by Demanding Actual Delivery.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, Dec. 16.—Two "little fellows" on the New Orleans Cotton Exchange who belittled the magnitude of their operations today squeezed out the December spot position and raised the price of outstanding cotton many millions of dollars.

They were Garner Tullis and Robert Craig, who accepted all tenders of cotton they had demanded on their futures contracts, and the result was a $4.20 a bale price gain in the last two weeks.

Traders estimated Tullis, Craig & Co. had taken 45,000 bales of cotton off the market since they began calling for actual delivery instead of offering to sell their contracts. The two merchandised this cotton themselves, and some of the big firms who were caught short had to continue boosting the price to meet the Tullis-Craig demand for actual staple.

Certificated stocks of December cotton totaled 49,500 bales and it was estimated that 2,000 additional uncertificated bales were tendered. An Eastern firm reportedly took about 5,000 bales. Delivery on the contracts is due December 21.

First reports on Gravier street had been that Tullis and Craig were 100,000 bales "long" on December contracts when they started their bull movement. Instead of taking the usual futures contracts which are hedges against sale of the actual cotton, the young brokers began exercising their right to demand the actual cotton.

The rise in cotton reached its peak on the New Orleans exchange at the opening, December 14, when December spot was $5.35 a bale higher. The firm then let some of the contracts go back on the market, with an 80-cent-a-bale drop in price. But today, the partners stood firm and closed out the month by accepting all tenders.

Tullis issued a statement minimizing importance of his operations and denying a "squeeze" had been engineered. Natural factors helped boost prices. As the British constitutional crisis passed, a wave of foreign buying hit the market.

Then traders saw the Novemner consumption report. It was the biggest in history. There was little spot cotton to be had and when Tullis and Craig began taking all they could find, prices shot up.

RFC Loses Suit On 'Dawes Loan'

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation lost today an attempt to collect $1,250,000 interest on the $90,000,000 "Dawes loan." Its request was denied by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Filing of the interest suit November 24 followed a ruling November 7 by Judge Wilkerson that Illinois stockholders of the defunct Central Republic Bank & Trust Co. must pay $12,500,000 toward the deficiency on repayment of the loan. The amount represented the value of the bank's stock held by the stockholders, who were liable under the Illinois double liability law.

Then counsel for the RFC demanded 5 per cent interest on the $12,500,000 for each of the two years during which trial of the case was in progress. Interest at a similar rate on the original loan was included in the estimate of deficiency on the repayment of the loan.

Lumbermen Walk Out On Carpenter Union

The lumbermen sought a vote in the convention. The convention approved a committee report recommending a thorough study of working conditions in the Pacific Northwest.

There were reports the timber workers would desert the carpenters brotherhood and join John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the National Symphony Orchestra, under Hans Kindler, in Constitution Hall Wednesday afternoon. Program: Aufforderung zum Tanz (Weber-Weingartner), Concerto Grosso No. 21 (Handel), Symphony in B minor (Schubert), Prelude to Act III, Vorspiel and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" (Wagner).

An audible murmur of regret rippled through the auditorium yesterday afternoon when C. C. Cappel announced before the beginning of the concert that Mme. Lotte Lehmann, indisposed with a severe cold, had been obliged by her physician's advice to postpone her appearance as soloist with the orchestra. The group of songs by Richard Strauss, which she was to have sung, was replaced by Schubert's B minor symphony, and the excerpts from "Tristan und Isolde" were performed without her voice in the Liebestod.

Since Carl Maria von Weber's "Invitation to the Dance" is the composition by which he is most widely known, included as it has been in the tasks of every piano student for three-quarters of a century at least, Dr. Kindler was right in selecting it for performance in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth. Yet every pianist will agree that Weingartner's transcription glorifies the romantic trifle beyond its modest merits. What was originally a programmatic salon piece, the ancestor, perhaps, of Schumann's "Carnaval," has been so enriched with instrumental colors as to glow like Ravel's "La Valse."

Handel's Concerto Grosso in D minor, apart from one's enjoyment of its dignified workmanship and its tremendous vitality, reminded one afresh that musical cosmopolitanism is not as modern a thing as our international societies would have us believe. Like Bach and Scarlatti, Handel composed music in which the Germanic, Italian and French manners were blended into a style distinctive to the period and acceptable in any capital.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Gordon Quartet (Jacques Gordon, David Sackson, William Lincer, Naoum Benditzki) and Frank Sheridan, pianist, in the chamber music auditorium Wednesday night. Brahms program: Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1; Sonata in D minor for violin and piano, Op. 108; Piano Quintet in F minor, Op. 34.

At this third concert in the series of eight provided by Mrs. Whittall, the Stradivari instruments of her donation passed into the hands of the Gordon Quartet, and these temporary custodians used them most delectably in the exclusive exposition of Johannes Brahms. Much as can be advanced in favor of variety in programs, there are times when the arguments can be refuted by the charm of a concert where one composer has his uninterrupted say.

It is, of course, a test of a composer's staying qualities, of his ability to hold the attention by his power of persuasion. But nearly all composers whose intellectual strength matches their emotional sensitiveness can meet this test successfully. And in Brahms this balance between mind and heart is so well maintained that his eloquence can keep the listener intent without tiring him.

The C minor quarter exemplifies in itself the cerebral and the sentimental aspects of Brahms. The first and last movements are excitable in a deliberately calculated way; the agitation is in the style of writing and not in the emotional content. One can admire the craftsmanship, the dovetailing of phrase with phrase and the structure of the paragraphs, without being moved. In the romanza and the allegretto, however, the poetic Brahms speaks with an urgency that is irresistible.

The splendidly controlled pianism of Frank Sheridan, together with the plastic tone of Jacques Gordon, made the D minor sonata take on a freshness of color for ears habituated to its message. And the close collaboration between Mr. Sheridan and his colleagues was wholly admirable in the quintet.

Cadets Will Get 11-Day Holiday For Christmas

Midshipmen Up in Classes Granted Full Leave; Others Must Study.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 16.—Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Naval Academy, ordered today a Christmas leave from noon December 23 to 6 p. m. January 3.

The full leave will be available to midshipmen who are satisfactory in studies for the months of October, November and December. Those who have an unsatisfactory average will be granted leave from noon, December 23 to 7 p. m., December 27, when they will return for extra instruction.

Midshipmen entitled to leave may stay at the academy if they desire. Holiday routine will be observed during the period, with all studies and exercises, except extra instruction, suspended.

Academic departments will operate from 9 a. m. to noon from December 28 to aJnuary 2, with the exception of New Year's Day, to give extra instruction, and to aid midshipmen desiring help or advice.

St. John's College will be closed from December 22 to January 3. The county public schools will be closed from December 23 to January 4.

Canada Exports to U. S. $5,367,000 Over 1935

Ottawa, Dec. 16 (AP).—Exports to the United States of products affected by the Canada-United States trade agreement were more than $5,367,000 higher in November than in the same month last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

Comparative figures are $20,891,420 and $15,524,177.

Exports of all commodities were $46,536,866, an increase of about $10,570,000 above $35,966,967 in November, 1935.

During the 11 months ended November 30, exports under the agreement were valued at $194,667,373 compared with $152,284,930 in the same period of 1935, while total domestic exports amounted to $366,992,672 against $322,541,847.

Robert M. Miller and Lansing Hall Are Acclaimed in New Civic Theater Drama

Sherwood's Play of "The Petrified Forest" Is Given Fine Reading.

"THE PETRIFIED FOREST." The Washington Civic Theater presents the drama in two acts by Robert E. Sherwood, directed by Day Tuttle, with stage settings designed and supervised by William M. Girvan. At the Wardman Park Theater, December 16, 17, 18 and 19. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Gramp Maple.....Ralph Fowler
Boze Hertzlinger.....Norman Rose
"Gabby" Maple.....Lansing Hall
Alan Squire.....Robert M. Miller
Duke Mantee.....H. H. Bratsburg
Telegraph linemen, customers, gangsters, legionnaires.

Much credit for play well selected and commendably acted, again accrued to the Washington Civic Theater last evening at Wardman Park as Robert Emmett Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest" was creditably produced.

In the Sherwood opus the players found a congenial vehicle for their collective talents, and although there were times when the playing missed complete inspiration, the tragic drama of the eastern Arizona desert was, in the large view, no less commendably done than "Caesar and Cleopatra."

After being viewed on the stage locally and on the screen with Leslie Howard, Bette Davis and Humphrey Bogart, there is little necessity to go into the purely narrative aspects of the drama. Suffice it to say that Mr. Sherwood, in expounding a philosophy of life—and essentially the drama is little else—has brought to bear those facile qualities of playwriting which made his "The Road to Rome" a gem of anachronistic comedy and a thoroughly engaging study of human relations.

Robert Miller in Howard Role.

As the itinerant author is Robert M. Miller, who, for the erstwhile Columbia Players, never turned in as consistently smooth and understanding an interpretation as he does here. Lansing Hall, as the feminine lead, and evidently patterning her work after that of Bette Davis in the same role, was fine as the daughter transplanted to the desert. But commendable as were these two, it was H. H. Bratburg, as the gangster, Duke Mantee, who delivered the most engaging interpretation of the evening. In looks and bearing he lives up to the Bogart prototype.

Among those who might be singled out for effective bits are Ralph Fowler, especially good when, as the grandfather, he tells of being missed by Billy the Kid; Norman Rose, as the suitor not entirely unwelcome; Joe N. Bourne, as the girl's father, an ardent Legionnaire; Denis E. Connell, as a telegraph lineman, who sees some merit in communism, and Richard Kreuzburg, as a farmer. Others in the company included William Jordan, Rachel Sewall, Harry A. Westcott, Ruth Perrott, Eccles Huff, Malvin B. Plunkett, Don Hoffend, G. Washington Johnson, Ralph Hohenstein, Jock McFadden, Arthur W. Bingham and Clyde Maxwell, jr.

Conrad Wirths Hosts At Hotel Dinner Party

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad L. Wirth and Mrs. George A. Moskey were hosts at a dinner party at the Shoreham Hotel last evening.

The company included Mr. and Mrs. Arno B. Cammerer, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Demaray, Maj. and Mrs. T. Dodson Stamps, Dr. and Mrs. Roy Lyman Sexton, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Mrs. Melvin Hall, who has been visiting Mrs. Higginson Rogers, has moved into an aartment at the Fairfax Hotel.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

The Planning of Squeeze Plays.

The most essential point in the planning of squeeze plays is visualization of the end position which, it is hoped, can be attained. This may sound like putting the cart before the horse, but in sober fact, it is the easiest method of approach. Let us examine a typical squeeze-possibility hand and follow an expert declarer's thought processes.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North: ♠ A ♡ 8 7 4 3 ♢ A K Q J 4 3 2 ♣ 10
West: ♠ J 10 9 4 3 2 ♡ J 6 5 2 ♢ 8 ♣ J 9
East: ♠ K 8 5 ♡ 10 9 ♢ 7 6 5 ♣ K Q 6 4 3
South: ♠ Q 8 7 ♡ A K Q ♢ 10 9 ♣ A 8 7 5 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♢	Pass
2 N T	Pass	4 N T	Pass
5 N T	Pass	7 ♢	Pass
7 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding is not recommended. I am merely reporting it as it actually took place at a certain table in a match point duplicate game. South returned to no-trump in an effort to capture "top on the board." He probably thought that many teams would reach seven diamonds, and therefore gambled on the few extra points that a no-trump contract offered.

West opened the Jack of spades, and dummy's blank Ace won. Count of tricks disclosed one spade, three hearts, seven diamonds and one club—a total of only 12. There was no possible finesse in any suit. There was the chance, of course, that the adverse hearts would drop in three leads and establish dummy's fourth heart for the thirteenth trick, but if this did not occur, only a squeeze play would be left.

Declarer set himself to visualizing the subsequent play of the hand. He saw that if he should run off dummy's seven diamond tricks, he would then be unable to return to dummy and, thus, even if the hearts were divided 3-3, there would be no entry left in dummy to reach the established heart. Obviously, then he had to cash three top hearts first, which he proceeded to do. As he had feared, the hearts did not break, but he had not "shot his bolt" by any means. Now dummy's diamonds were run off until finally the end position he had visualized came about. Dummy was left with the low heart, one diamond and one club. He himself had the Queen of spades and two clubs. West had already been proved as the holder of the fourth heart, and the opening lead was ample testimony to the fact that the spade King was in East's hand, since West would certainly not have led from the King against seven notrump.

Capital Girl Is Married To Mr. Farr

Rushmore Patterson and Miss Peyton Kirk Wed in New York.

Two weddings of interest to society in Washington took place at 4:30 p. m. yesterday, the one in St. Alban's Church, where Miss Catherine Duncan Miller became the bride of Mr. Harry Orello Farr, jr., and the other at St. Bartholomew's Church, in New York City, where Miss Peyton Steele Kirk was wed to Mr. Rushmore Patterson, son of Mrs. Jean Rushmore Patterson, of New York and Washington.

Miss Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emore Adams Miller, was married to Mr. Farr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Orello Farr, of Brunswick, Ga., in a ceremony performed by the Rev. Edward D. Harris and followed by a reception at the home fo her parents, 3009 Cathedral avenue.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, by whom she was given in marriage. Her white satin gown was made as a redingote with buttons down the front, and she wore a Mary Queen of Scots cap with a long tullee veil and a shorter face veil. She carried a preyer book belonging to her great grandmother.

Miss Lloyd Maid of Honor.

Her maid of honor, Miss Emily Lloyd, of Leesburg, Va., wore a blue velvet frock with a roll collar and short puffed sleeves. She, too, wore a Mary Queen of Scots cap and carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Betty Gibson, Janet Harrison, and Helen Corbell, of Leesburg, the former home of the bride, and the Misses Mary Harrison, Peggy McNeale and Elizabeth Buell, of Washington. They wore crimson velvet gowns similar to that of the maid of honor and carried Johanna Hill roses.

Mr. James Littlejohn, of Washington, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Lyles McNairy, of Bennettsville, S. C.; Mr. William Belser, of Columbia, S. C.; Mr. Samuel Knight, of Asheville, N. C.; Mr. Pontelle Nichols, of Charleston, S. C.; Mr. Samuel Alexander, of Leesburg, Va.; Mr. Winton Brown, of Pittsburgh, and Mr. Elmore Miller and Mr. John Miller, of Washington, the bride's brothers.

After the reception, Mr. Farr and his bride left for a wedding trip to the North, the latter wearing a green suit trimmed with beaver and a green hat. They will make their home in Pittsburgh.

The bride attended Holton Arms School, the Abbott Art School, and Colby Junior College in Maine. Mr. Farr attended the University of Pennsylvania and received his doctor's degree from the University of North Carolina.

Archbolds Entertain.

Mr. Armar E. Archbold and his sister, Miss Moira Archbold, son and daughter of Mrs. Anne Archbold, of Washington, entertained at dinner Monday evening at the Pierre in New York in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, jr., who were married yesterday in St. Bartholomew's Church, New York.

Other guests at the dinner were Miss Elizabeth Brown and Mr. John Dana Archbold, whose wedding will take place on New Year's Day.

Mr. John Archbold and Mr. Armar Archbold were ushers at the wedding. The bride, who was given in marriage by her mother, wore a gown of ivory satin with two panels hung from the shoulder forming the train. Her tulle veil was held in place by a twisted coronet of ivory satin, and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias.

Mrs. Roger Ripley Page served as matron of honor, and wore a blue velvet frock and in her hair a small wreath of velvet flowers with a veil. Her bouquet was of bronze snapdragons.

The bridesmaids were Miss Nina Moore and Mrs. Alexis Carnel Coudert, who wore frocks similar to that of the matron of honor. Mr. Frederick E. Donaldson, jr., of New York, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. J. J. Stevenson, jr., of Columbus, Ohio; Mr. Robert McK. Thomas, jr., of Mendham, N. J., and Mr. C. Berwind Harjes, Mr. William B. Hewson, Mr. Newcomb D. Cole and Mr. Charles W. Nichols, jr., of New York.

The bride attended Ashley Hall in Charleston, S. C., and the bridegroom is a graduate of Choate School and Princeton University. He is a member of the Union League and the Tuxedo, Princeton and Metopolitan clubs.

THE MERRY WHIRL
by MARYLYN

There was a mild flurry of excitement in front of the Mayflower the other evening. Just as a taxi was nosing its way up to the curb to pick up some passengers, the doorman waved it back and frantically motioned to a large black himousine lurking beyond the line of waiting cabs. Quickly and silently it slid into its place and who should get out but the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley They had just arrived in town and were bound for an "off the record" party. Mrs. Farley must have all of her shopping done, so peaceful and happy does she look. She was wearing a stunning gown of black taffeta sprinkled with little dangles of crystal beads, over this she wore a mink cape. The P. M. G looking quite fit after his trip to Erin, of course, was top hatted and white tied.

Now it can be told. At the recent very gay and enjoyable birthday party for Mrs. Leiter, her mother went as Julius Caeser and was the hit of the party. We can just imagine Mrs. Williams attired in laurel wreath and draped toga. Granddaughters, Nancy, had the time of her life teasing her mother and, in fact most of the members of her family. She impersonated her honorable ancester, Levi Leiter, beard and all Everytime her mother seemed to be particularly enjoying some of the food, or refreshments, "Levi" would saunter up and in a not too quiet tone remind her that "he" was the one to whom thanks were due.

Mrs. William A. Moffett, who has just returned to town after having a ripping time down at the Miami air races, is seriously thinking of going back to the Southern resort as soon as Christmas has passed. She probably would have lingered for a while, except for a tree waiting to be trimmed and presents to be wrapped, not to mention the eggnog party Beverly is giving Wednesday which promises to be one of the gayest of the holiday parties for the younger set. Then, too, Charles will be up from Annapolis on leave, and middies get home so rarely it is quite an event.

From far off China comes news of Kay Brown Hughes and her husband, Commander Jimmie J. Hughes. They have been living in suitcases and picking up every now and then to shove off for new fields. Their latest stopping place was Shanghai, which Kay informs us (and are we disappointed) is surprisingly like New York. What is the use of going thousands of miles only to find yourself in a spot that is too much like a neighboring city back home? Back to the Hughes again. They were first-nighters at the opening of one of the very swankiest night clubs of the East. The funny thing is that the club was so popular that one opening was not sufficient so they had three opening nights, so that everyone might be a first nighter. Very clever the Chinese!

Jimmie is now captain of the U. C. S. Panay and a busy lad he is. His titian-haired wife has no spare time either. Kay, among other things, is studying Chinese, typing and everything there is to know about a car. She has a perfect jewel of a "house boy." Chin, who adores work and simply dotes on snatching up anything that has the slightest sign of a wrinkle in it and trotting off with it to the ironing board.

Naval Academy Honors Italians

Ambassador and Party Are Luncheon Guests of Superintendent.

Signor Fulvio Suvich, Italian Ambassador to the United States, received full naval honors yesterday when he motored to Annapolis for a short visit to the Naval Academy.

He was accompanied by Donna Matilde de Suvich and Capt. Don Umberto Cugia, Marquis of Sant' Orsola, Italian naval attache.

Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Academy, greeted the Ambassador in front of the administration building. With Admiral Sellers were Capt. Forde A. Todd, commandant of midshipmen, and Lieut. Basil N. Rittenhouse, aide to the superintendent.

Maj. and Mrs. S. J. Morse, of Nice, France, are now in Washington and occupying an apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Many Attend Symphony's 2d Concert

Orchestra Plays Famous Schubert Composition as Substitute.

By Dudley Harmon.

Rain coming down in torrents yesterday created rushing business for cabbies and interfered only slightly with attendance at the second Wednesday afternoon concert of the National Symphony Orchestra. There was a collective sigh of disappointment from the audience when Mr. C. C. Cappel, the manager, announced that because of illness Lotte Lehmann would be unable to keep her engagement as soloist with the orchestra, but every one applauded when he added that the orchestra would substitute Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" for Miss Lehmann's songs.

The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky occupied their box at the left of the stage, the latter muffled in a mink coat and wearing a small brown hat trimmed with the same fur. Nearby was Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, with a party of friends, and Miss Mabel Boardman, who seldom misses a concert, was in her box.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe's box was occupied by Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, whose black tricorne hat was trimmed with Persian lamb fur to match her coat. She had with her Mrs. John Boit, Gen. John Beaumont and Mr. Paul Wilstach.

With Miss Elizabeth Patterson were Miss Fanny Lay and Miss Carlile Porter, who made her debut recently. Others entertaining friends included Mrs. Ann Archbold, whose daughter, Miss Moira Archbold, also was "among those present."

Miss Anne Carrere drove all the way from her country home near Havre de Grace to be present at the concert. Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin were early arrivals, the latter wearing a black wool coat trimmed with caracul and a small black hat.

Miss Stellita Stapleton, who wore a mink coat over her vivid blue dress, and a hat of matching shade, was accompanied by Mr. Wolcott Waggaman. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse; Miss Betty Davis, Miss Sophie Staunton, Mrs. Harry N. Cootes with her son, Mr. Merritt Cootes, Miss Louise Myers, and Baroness Serge Korff with her son, Baron Korff.

Mrs. Eleanor Owens Hostess at Bridge

Entertains at Supper in Women's Party Club.

Mrs. Eleanor Owens was hostess last evening at bridge and a buffet supper in the National Women's Party clubhouse.

The guests included Judge and Mrs. George Merrick, Mr. and Mrs. William Brooke and Mr. Hampton Magruder, of Upper Marlboro, Md.; Mrs. John Marshall Boteler, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wallace, Col. and Mrs. George Calvert, Mr. Harvey Benner, Mr. and Mrs. West Russell, Miss Annie Bowman, Mr. Ernest May, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Mattingly, Mr. Henry Saunders, Miss Peggy Stanley, Mr. Mackubin T. Owens, Miss Mary Morse, Mr. and Mrs. John R. T. Reeves, Commander and Mrs. J. M. Miller, all of Washington, and Miss Helen Calvert, of Alexandria, Va.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman in Late Thirties Who "Desperately Feels Need of Purpose in Life" Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In a world where there are so many important things waiting to be done, it seems queer that an intelligent woman in her late thirties can't decide where she could be happily useful. Leaving the city where I had always lived to come to Washington a year ago probably intensified my feeling of futility. But even among old friends and familiar surroundings I have felt desperately the need of a purpose in life—a cause.

• • • •

It isn't that I can't fill my time (although I am sometimes lonely). It is rather that activity without organization, drive or purpose is only a stop-gap. It diverts the mind from introspection for a time, but it can't keep down for long feeling of unhappy scorn for one's uselessness.

• • • •

No one knows better than I that when a person begins to lose his self-esteem, it is time to take drastic steps to change matters. Knowing this, why do I keep thinking in circles? One day I'm sure that low-cost housing, providing attractive homes for people of good taste with moderate incomes, is the thing I wish to promote. But then I can't figure out how to set about it.

• • • •

Last spring I started a business course, thinking stenography might supply the opening wedge into a large real estate firm. I am also interested in social legislation and have taken a couple of post-graduate lecture courses in current social problems. I have wondered if I could be useful as secretary to a Congressman, or if such occupation would only involve me in a lot of political claptrap. And so it goes—'round and 'round, and I come out where I started.

Boiled down, my problem seems to be inability to decide what I want to do, and how to get started doing it. I don't seem to be a self-starter. Can you give me a push?

Very truly yours,
GERTRUDE C.

A Handy Guide Book.

DEAR GERTRUDE C.: Dorothea Brande has written a book called, "Wake Up and Live," in which she propounds the theory that "the will to fail" is largely responsible for the all-too-prevalent type of frustration from which you appear to be suffering. Having explained the reasons why so many persons fail to turn their lives and talents to productive account, she then proceeds to outline the A-B-C rules of how to release one's potential creative energies along organized lines of self-satisfactory, socially helpful and remunerative endeavor. I advise you to possess yourself of this volume and use it as a handy guide book for "finding yourself" in some congenial field of worth-while work.

M. H.

On First Cousins Marrying.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read with a great deal of interest the letter from "Puzzled" in your column of December 12, posing the question: Should first cousins marry? It may console her to know that my father and mother are first cousins and have been very happily married for 27 years. There are three children of the marriage and so far all have proven average with respect to physical health and mental fitness. Both my father and mother had to overcome the antagonism of their respective families in order to marry. They, too, had known each other only a short time when they fell in love. They met when my mother was 15 years old and my father a few years older, and for five years they went around together before their families would give their consent to marriage. There are also a number of other first-cousin marriages in my family, and so far they have been successful and the children have been normal.

I can see no reason, therefore, why "Puzzled" and her first cousin should not marry, if they are physically fit, particularly since they met each other only a year ago. I think that fact alters the situation greatly. It would be different if they had known each other all their lives. Then they might hesitate, for the suggestion of a brother-sister bond from childhood might seem too pronounced. I believe, however, that they should take your advice and secure a physician's opinion in the matter. If he says, "all right," then they should feel justified in going ahead with marriage plans. Sincerely,
SYMPATHIZER.

DEAR SYMPATHIZER: I am sure "Puzzled" will appreciate the kindly interest which has prompted this bit of reassurance and advice. I am equally sure that all of us wish her happiness, but she can only find it by making the wise and right decision now. And the opinion of science, we both agree, is rather more important in this case than the opinion of any layman.

M. H.

Gold Decorations Lead This Year's Christmas Parade

Last year it was predominately a blue Christmas—blue snowballs, blue holly wreaths, even blue bewhiskered Santas.

Now—even though blue is still popular—there is a trend toward gold in holiday decorations. Many of this season's Christmas cards are in a gold and brown motif, and they are considered smart.

Packages sent out by those who like to keep up to the minute in fashion likely will be wrapped in gold paper or trimmed with gold seals or tied with gold ribbon. Gold and white, gold and brown, gold and red or green are popular color combinations.

Gold and white is being used for Christmas table decorations, such as white candles set in candlesticks of white poinsettias with gold-tipped petals, and a table serice of white trimmed with gold.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Nosebleed.

Hemorrhage from any part of the body is an important symptom—not that the loss of a small amount blood is necessarily serious. Continuous oozing, however, may lead to a dangerous state before the true situation is realized. Thus we find anemia developing as a consequence of hemorrhoids (piles) or some parasitic infestation such as hookworm or the fish tapeworm.

The most common type of hemorrhage is that from the nose and, as a rule, the cause of an accident. This structure may be bumped or struck, with rupture of tiny blood vessels which lie close beneath the mucous membrane. Too vigorous blowing may bring on the symptom.

Variety of Causes.

The condition of the blood has much to do with power to coagulate, and we recognize that certain individuals are natural or hereditary bleeders, that is, they have a constitutional tendency to hemorrhage on the slightest injury. Others may be suffering from some disease affecting the elements in the blood which are responsible for clotting. In older persons the symptoms may appear without obvious reason. It may follow exertion, come on because the capillaries are more brittle than normal, or because the blood pressure is high. Occasionally one who journeys from a lower to a higher altitude will observe the phenomenon.

In most instances the site of the trouble can be located and the area compressed or packed with gauze, the pressure being sufficient to stop the oozing. It may be well to add a little adrenalin to the pack and, in many patients, this is all that will be required.

Now and then hemorrhage will persist in spite of the usual remedies, and in such cases skilled assistance must be secured. Subcutaneous injections of whole blood or the administration of some coagulating substance is recommended. Favorable results have been reported following the use of snake venom, which is a toxin with powerful clotting properties. In emergencies this material should be resorted to before a transfusion becomes necessary.

Ice Packs Employed.

In children, particularly, nosebleed may appear more alarming than the circumstances justify. Parents may become disturbed unduly and communicate their apprehension to the child, with the result that many false moves may be made.

In the presence of bleeding that does not come on as the result of a surgical operation the patient should not lean over the washbowl and allow the blood to drip. Neither should he be put to bed. The best plan is to place him in a straight chair with the head titled backward. An ice pack may cover the forehead.

He Alternates Rug Making With Golf

Col. John A. Lundeen is among the most enthusiastic rug makers of Washington. He finds this pastime more constructive than playing golf and fully as pleasurable. He spends many of his mornings in the art department of a local department store, where he has recently completed his third hooked rug.

Rug Making Expands Its Appeal As Diversion for Men and Women

Col. Lundeen, One of Capital's Most Ardent Fans, Finds Craft More Constructive Than Playing Golf; His Work Is Neat and Systematic.

By Rebekah Blake.

RUG MAKING, one of the necessary arts of our grandmothers, now has become a popular handcraft and source of diversion, not only to Washington women, but to men as well.

An increasing number of men are taking up the art, according to rug-making instructors. That may be, because, as Col. J. A. Lundeen, one of the Capital's most ardent rug makers, explains it, they find it "more constructive than playing golf."

Col. Lundeen, 88 years old, a retired officer of the Coast Artillery, who has known strenuous Army life at many posts, who served in San Francisco in the stirring days following the earthquake and who later was commanding officer of the Presidio, now finds rug making not only restful and quieting to the nerves but a most exhilarating form of activity. On the days that he does not play golf he is to be found in the knitting department of a downtown store vigorously plying his needles in the intricacies of a hooked rug. Developing the rug pattern and blending the colors he finds a more exciting pursuit than reminiscing of Army days.

Col. Lundeen's Army discipline, however, has stood him in good stead. He is one of the neatest and most systematic rug makers, his instructor reports.

Col. Lundeen has finished two rugs, hooked with yarn, which he thinks more interesting than working with rags, and is now finishing his third rug, which he will present to his younger daughter, now stationed with her husband at Fort Custer in Battle Creek, Mich. He has made gifts of his other rugs to his older daughter, Mrs. Harry L. Steele, with whom he lives at 2139 Wyoming avenue northwest.

Throughout his life Col. Lundeen has recognized the value of hobbies. He has long been a golf player and is now probably the oldest active golfer in Washington. He plays regularly with a foursome, often on the links at the Soldiers' Home. Mahogany cabinet-making was a former pastime of Col. Lundeen. He originated a collapsible type of mahogany furniture especially adapted for moving from one Army post to another. In his daughter's home are many specimens of his furniture handcraft. His interest in rug-making developed when he watched his daughter making hooked rugs and was heightened when he accompanied her to the rug classes.

Other men are also quickly taking to the pastime. One Washington doctor and his wife have, together, completed five rugs since October. According to instructors, the rugs made by men are more accurate and in the end more beautiful than the ones made by the gentle sex. They are willing to spend more time with their work and do not rush so much to finish the article. Another local man hooked two rugs which he entered in a county fair and took first prizes with both of them, much to his own surprise.

This fascinating hobby has spread from this city. A Washington woman taught her father the art which he has taken with him to South America. Instructors report many followers of the art take it up on advice of doctors for the correction of nervous disorders.

Though hooked rugs may be made with rug yarn or thin strips of rags, the yarn ones are more popular and fit better into the small homes and apartments of Washington. They are handy and inexpensive, as well as being attractive, and blend in especially well with maple or colonial furniture that is so popular now.

Capital Manners

Courtesy Calls to the White House Should Be Made When Season Opens.

By Margaret Wallace.

EVERY SEASON is a new deal in Washington as far as good form in calling and leaving cards are concerned. Officials and others on the White House lists leave their cards at the White House as soon as the season opens. Most people like to perform this act of courtesy before Christmas.

Cards should be left at the White House irrespective of White House invitations that have been received or are expected. Cards must also be left at the White House after a person has been a guest at a meal there.

Since no one ever asks to see the President or Mrs. Roosevelt when leaving cards it is proper to leave these cards at other hours than calling hours if it is more convenient to do so.

Cards should be left at the homes of officials and private hostesses during the calling hours from 4 to 7 o'clock. Sometimes when many cards are to be left in an afternoon the card callers start out as early as 2 or 3 o'clock. Of course no one would be so rude as to check the exact hour cards are left. But it is not proper to pay these card calls in the morning. Cards left for the purpose of expressing condolences can be left at any hour, because they are messages of sympathy tendered as soon after bereavement as possible.

Cards should be left for visitors in Washington as soon as possible. Since the hostess must call on out-of-town visitors she intends to invite to dinner or an entertainment it is quite proper to leave cards for these visitors at any hour of the day. For instance, a hostess may call on an out-of-town visitor in the morning and send an invitation by hand for dinner for that night or extend the invitation over the telephone. This makes it possible to observe the formalities during a short visit to Washington. If the guest who has been invited to dinner has to leave Washington the next morning the dinner call can be made by sending a card by hand or mailing it.

QUERY—I have been invited to the White House by Mrs. Roosevelt. My invitation is in card form and says that Mrs. Roosevelt will receive me at four o'clock. I judge it is a tea. Should I be on time or wait until some of the other guests arrive as I am very shy? I am sure there are to be other guests as some of the people I know have been invited. When do I leave?

ANSWER—You must be on time. When an invitation of any kind from the White House or from any official hostess or any other for that matter reads "at" a certain hour it means that the guest must be there. This applies to teas and receptions as well as dinners and luncheons. It is very rude to be late and the really courteous guest will arrive almost five minutes before the time set. Usually Mrs. Roosevelt leaves the room and the guests depart, or the time for the guests to leave is indicated by those in charge of such functions at the White House.

Pattern 5745.

LINENS (like humans) love to "show off," especially when they've the perkiest of 6-to-the-inch cross stitch roses for their corners and borders. You'll enjoy making gay linens as scarfs, tea cloths, pillow cases and towels with these quick-to-do stitchery motifs. And you'll adore the way each rose is set off by a lattice work of running stitch (it's so quick to do), in black or a contrasting color. In pattern 5745 you will find a transfer pattern of two and two reverse motifs 5½x8¼ inches, two and two reverses 3x8¼ inches and two and two reverse motifs 4½x4¼ inches; material requirements; color suggestions; illustrations of all stitches used.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th Street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 16.

MY PET SWAMI assures me that it won't be long now, and at present I have practically abandoned my own concerns to hunt frantically for some suitable gadget to give That Odd Man for Christmas. Since he already owns "Gone With the Wind," and has only asked, quite absurdly, for a little baby sister, I am forced to do most of my scouting among the more novel types of Christmas gifts. So I pass on the results of my researches to you, as possible aids.

ALICE HUGHES.

If your man is the frivolous sort, he may like the little handcarved figures which give visitors a look of scorn and whistle derisive songs at them; and there are also musical beer-pitchers to be had which, when lifted, play traditional masculine airs until placed again on the puddled mahogany. For the more serious-minded male, there is a new super-colossal desk set which is only 15 inches long but is made up of a radio, a clock and a pen set.

As for the sporting type, golf balls are always good if you know his favorite brand, and he may like the ones on an elastic band which are used during the winter for those 300-yard drives in attic. For fishermen of the stern Hemingway ilk there is a marvelous deep-sea fishing chest which contains everything needful for that thrilling off-shore sport.

• • • •

Gunmen this winter can be handled wonderful new shooting coats with all kinds of pockets for the necessities of their explosive fun. The pipe-smoker will be delighted with a new tobacco pouch which also contains a compartment for his pet dudeen—and you know how fussy such creatures are about their baccy-carriers. There's also one made of python skin which contains the tools for cleaning.

And, after all, I suppose we'll snatch him a couple of striped ties!

• • • •

Veteran stay-outs often tell me of the time Lady Furness called the then Prince of Wales in London from a table in a local night club and had a long talk with him. Other customers were that awed and thrilled! . . .

• • • •

Captain Rustis of our eagle-eyed Pickpocket Squad tells us girls to be smart in the shopping jams. Don't be too courteous, says the cop, to those who shove us around at the counters. They may be bag-snatchers or openers. Hold the handbag with both hands on crowded elevators. And never, never lay the bag on a counter while handling merchandise!

• • • •

Was I surprised the other night to see Mr. Henry Louis Mencken, the venerable sage of Baltimore, at the giddy Club El Morocco! He told me it was really the first time he had done our night club circuit, and that he thought the people nicer than most members of private clubs, which was pure Menckenese. Mrs. George S. Kaufman and Mr. Alfred Knopf were his cicerones and chaperones . . . Bea Kaufman, by the way, is now Movie-Man Samuel Goldwyn's story editor in the East—and a right nice job it is, too!

• • • •

Observations on the moment's fashion picture—but no run is guaranteed . . . Pink is having a most important splurge this winter, and seems likely to keep going until the first crocus croaks in Central Park . . . As for spring, beige shows every indication of being the color . . . At any gathering of businesswomen here these days at least 90 per cent of them wear black . . . Elsa Maxwell, the international gloom-chaser, is against women's wearing their hair brushed up from the forehead. "Makes 'em look too intellectual," says Elsa. And heaven save us girls from intellectuality! Glamour's the thing

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

A LADY had better watch her oh's and ah's around Christmas time. Especially when she's window shopping with the man of her choice. But if she's diplomatic she can wrangle practically anything she wants.

We're concentrating on a rug for the front hall—we've set our heart on a Kirman we found . . . an old type of Kirman with a rose ground. Our second choice is a Chinese rug in indigo and cream in a traditional pattern too. We bring the conversation to them on the slightest provocation, so if our husband doesn't take the hint we'll be practically crushed. Particularly since we refuse to let our eyes or our enthusiasm wander to anything else when he's in reach . . . he just might mistake a casual admiration for a burning wish and we'd end up with a new bookcase instead of the rug we've set our heart on.

Our neighbor wants a lot of small finishing touches for her fireplace—brass andirons, a brass fender and a good looking fire screen. And if thrust upon her, she'd accept with gratitude a pair of dramatic brass candelabra she saw the other day. She's been busy getting her husband around to see all these things and making sure that he understands just which designs she prefers. To the point of busying herself at the crucial moment with something at the front of the store, while he transacts whispered business with the clerk.

And our sister has been taking her husband window shopping for a silver tray. Being of a business turn of mind, he's attentive to her wants in sterling silver. "Because it has intrinsic value," says he. Which is a point to bring up if you're trying to interest your spouse in silver . . . men appreciate that angle!

Plush and Moire Reversible Robes Delight Shoppers

Jelleff's Boudoir Sacques and Snow Suits Are Tops in Fashion.

BY RUTH ANNE DAVIS.

IF YOU think dressing robes aren't news then you haven't seen the ones we saw yesterday. In the first place they're reversible and viewed from one side appear to be simple, tailored, definitely chic moire affairs with soft, silky plush lapels and cuffs. But cheerio, wear them inside out and what do you have? About the stunningest thing you ever saw! An all-over plush rug, soft as snow, and warm as a cosy fire.

There are three quite plain and plausible reasons why $16.95 is a bargain price for these little boudoir beauties. No. 1, they have the wearability of an Eskimo's winter suit. No. 2, they have a style that smacks of Paris. No. 3, they're as pretty as they're practical and as practical as they're pretty! ! !

Don't miss seeing them! They come in flame, light and dark blue, and other luscious shades. In Jelleff's pajama and negligee section.

WHILE you're there it would be a pity to depart without casting an appreciative eye over the superb collection of bed jackets. Or boudoir sacques, as some say. If variety is the spice of life, here you'll find spice a-plenty. Jackets galore in dozens of styles.

One of the most dashing is made of chiffon ruffles, one over the other, to give a fluffy, ruffly effect that's devastating. This one in flame is just too, too, too! (of course, it's in other colors as well). Also lovely are the comfy quilted satins and velvets, the satins with the heavy borders of lace, or the satins just trimmed with faggoting.

Before we leave bed jackets behind we must turn the old shopping spotlight on he one with the full accordion-pleated sleeves like small capes. And the unusual one with neck and long sleeves fitted in with a draw string.

Remember—Jelleff's for bed jackets! Prices, $3.95 to $16.95.

WHEN ICY winds begin to blow and white flakes fall from a snow-laden sky, 'tis the time to bundle up in your snow suit and brave the elements in the spirit of sport. Just think of the make-shift costumes one sees during such weather! Think how ludicrous some of them look and how inadequate they are for protection. And think again how dashing is a snow suit, how comfortable, and generally satisfactory. To be convinced, see those at Jelleff's. They take the laurels. Especially that Parka style with zipper pockets, zipper front, and zipper hood that unzips into a collar. A stunning combination of dark blue and red. And only $10.95.

With lots of young folk's appeal is the double-breasted windbreaker type with cap and scarf in contrasting colors. Tops for skii-ing is the gaberdine suit, beautifully fitting, waterproof, and lightweight. In navy and brown, $16.95.

Children Resent Emotional Note From Mother

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. SMITH was about to undergo an operation. Sitting in her hospital room the night before and feeling lonely and somewhat depressed, she decided to write to her oldest daughter, a girl of about 16. The letter reached the child the next morning, at just about the time the operation was taking place. It was essentially a farewell letter, morbid and emotional, and shocked and upset the child quite unnecessarily.

Many mothers write such letters. Fortunately, many of them have the good sense not to send them. Mrs. Brown, who has the habit of operations, has written several. Mrs. Green indulges in these emotional orgies every time she has a baby.

The emotional strain of receiving such letters is too great for any child. It shatters the sense of security which a child should have, and in the end rouses in him a sense of resentment against the sender. The mother who is willing to make her child endure such needless suffering is not really mature. She is, in fact, still in the stage of attention seeking, dramatizing her own illness as a ten-year-old might do.

Subconsciously the child knows this, and it is the sense of its mother's emotional inadequacy which rouses in it, not pity and sorrow, but anger. It can only suffer, and generally must suffer alone, since all attention is at the moment centered on the mother.

A farewell letter in any event is as useless as a death-bed repentance. No matter how serious the ordeal the mother is about to face, the more calmly she takes it, the more matter of fact she is about it, the more the child will in the end respect and admire her.

Fishy Globules Adorn Latest Hats for Paris

New York (AP).—Scores of little bright globules adorned the black silk straw hat which Mme. Simone George, Paris milliner, showed Manhattan before departing for her native France.

Asked what they were, she replied with the staggering practicality which the French often show, "Fish bladders, bought in the fish market!"

Dyed back, she said, the fish bladders look "brilliant" as hat decor. The tiny fish globules are full of air, and can be deflated at will, like a balloon.

If you haven't decided what to give that very good, hard-to-please friend of yours, may we suggest a perfume lamp? They're such clever little gadgets and so attractive looking, small, crystal, styled for any room. An indentation in the top marks the spot for a drop of your favorite fragrance. The warmth from the small glove inside sends the scent wafting through the air. Not quite a perfumed zephyr, but almost!

Primed to hang from your Christmas tree and then your neck are the bath balls. These splendid little accessories (which really aren't so little!) are, yea, verily a necklace of soap. That is to say, one ball of soap, about the size of two tennis balls rolled into one, hangs from a soft rope loop, which, in turn, encircles your neck. No more fumbling for soap and risking somersaults on a slippery floor! Here's a No. 1 selection for a masculine Christmas sock! $1.00.

SURE to make your heart beat is Charberts' set of toiletries identified as "Drumbeat." Talcum, perfume, and bath powder are all in chic containers patterned after a drum. The fragrance is decidedly appealing—and different. Perhaps just what you're looking for, $3.00.

Dean of Pennsylvania Clubwomen To Be Honored in Philadelphia Today

Mrs. Chapman, Winner of Peace Scholarship, to Be Speaker.

Washington club women are very much interested in the luncheon in honor of Mrs. Lucretia Blankenburg, dean of Pennsylvania club women and well known in Washington, to be given today by the Philadelphia Federation of Women's Clubs and Allied Organizations.

Mrs. Mildred Chapman, of Barrington, R. I., who received the peace scholarship fund from the European club women this year, will be one of the speakers. The American women in Europe who form the Federation of American Women's Clubs Overseas awarded the scholarship donated by Mrs. Clarence Gasque, of London.

The winner of the scholarship has the opportunity to study for six months in Geneva with the primary objects of learning the spirit of the youth of two continents in the matter of peace. Mrs. Chapman was selected because of her academic record as a graduate of Boston University and her interest and activity in the problems of international cooperation. Mrs. Chapman will come to Washington to attend some of the midwinter conferences scheduled for after Christmas and will probably be present at the midwinter board meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in January. The award to Mrs. Chapman was made through the General Federation.

Another important visitor to Washington this winter who will attend the luncheon in Philadelphia today is Mrs. Albert Connett, of Barbizon, France, president of the Women's Clubs of Europe and chairman of education and scholarship committee of the American Women's Clubs Overseas. Mrs. Connett is internationally known for her work. She was one of the founders of the American Women's Club of Paris and served as its president for two terms, and was also president of the American Women's Clubs of Europe in 1934-1935.

South Africa, its people and problems, was the theme of an interesting address at the American Association of University Women by Dr. Eben Eybers, head of the department of education and psychology at the University of South Africa, last night. Guests at dinner included the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Eybers are very prominent in social, educational and reform work in South Africa. They are in America to study the problems of education by radio.

The Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Close also attended the meeting of the League of Republican Women yesterday afternoon. The minister spoke on South Africa. They remained for tea. Mrs. William Fitch Kelly, president of the league, received the guests. Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey was hostess and had assisting her Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, Baroness von Below, Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Miss Daisy Prentice, Mrs. Phillip Campbell, Mrs. E. E. Robins, Mrs. Frank Mondell, Mrs. Carl Droop, Mrs. Hutchinson Cone, Mrs. E. A. Chase, Mrs. Daniel B. Devore, Mrs. John Marshall and Mrs. Mead Moore.

The meeting of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase was held at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon.

After a business meeting a Christmas cantata was presented by members of the club. Contributions were made by members to the public welfare committee fund for Christmas work at Friendship House and in Montgomery County.

The floor committee was composed of Ex-Gov. O. Max Gardner, Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, Charles P. Gay, Lieut. Comdr. Ovid C. Foote, Robert H. McNeill, and Senator Robert R. Reynolds. The ladies' committee included Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, Mrs. John Small, Mrs. Thomas R. Offenbacher, Mrs. Aubrey D. Fadyen, R. W. D. Connor, Mrs. Boydston Satterlee, and Mrs. Arthur Wells Dew.

The president, Giles Yeomans Newton, received the guests.

Children of Trinity College graduates will be guests at a Christmas party to be held at the college Sunday. The party is an annual affair given by the Washington Chapter of the Alumnae Association of Trinity College.

About 70 children will be present, and there will be presents for each of them, distributed by Santa Claus in person. The big Christmas tree will be laden with candy and nuts for everybody.

A puppet show will provide the main entertainment feature. Arrangements have been made for a moving picture to be made at the party, in which each child will have a part.

Miss Regis Boyle is chairman of the committee which is planning the party. She is assisted by Miss Dorothy Skirm, Miss Rita Walsh, and Mrs. Ralph Dunn.

Acee Blue Eagle, famous Creek Indian artist, will arrive this morning by plane from Bacone College, Oklahoma, where he is director of art. Acee Blue Eagle is coming to Washington for an exhibition of his water colors and murals at the Arts Club Sunday. Tomorrow the distinguished Indian will be guest of honor at tea of the Newspaperwomen's Club and Saturday the Arts Club will give a dinner in his honor. The exhibit of his works will open Sunday with a tea and will continue for a fortnight.

A reception in honor of Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, new pastor of the First Baptist Church, and Mrs. Pruden, was held at the church Wednesday evening immediately after the installation service. In the receiving line with Dr. and Mrs. Pruden were the Church Moderator and Mrs. E. Hilton Jackson, Dr. and Mrs. H. W. O. Millington, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Rowley, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan R. Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis F. Colbert.

Miss Bertha Noyes and Miss Mary G. Riley was hostesses for the dinner Wednesday at the Arts Club before a talk on modern art by Mrs. Katherine Munroe.

Stanley Nishwitz Wed in Puerto Rico

Couple Plan to Visit Groom's Parents Here.

Miss Conchita Valencia and Mr. Stanley Nishwitz, formerly of Washington, were married at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the Union Episcopal Church of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Mr. Nishwitz, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Temple Nishwitz, this city, was graduated from Blackstone Military Academy in Virginia and attended Georgetown University.

The couple have sailed for the United States to visit his parents until after the first of the year.

Miss Gertrude Schultz And Mr. Benner to Wed

Mrs. G. Edward Schultz, of Bethesda, has issued invitations for the marriage of her daughter, Miss Gertrude Ray Schultz, to Mr. James Harrison Benner, also of Bethesda. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock on December 30 at the ancestral home of Miss Schultz's aunt, Mrs. J. Enos Ray, of Chillum. Mrs. Ray is the third generation of the family to live there.

The Rev. Stanley White, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., will perform the ceremony, which will be followed by a reception. Mrs. Preston King, jr., will be matron of honor, and Mr. Ralph K. Benner will serve as his brother's best man.

Is Your Name Here? Now?

BELOW is a list of surnames of some of the most distinguished American families. Our research staff, over a period of years, has completed preparation of manuscripts dealing with the history of each of these families. If your name is listed, you should have a copy of your manuscript. You will find it not only of keen interest, but a source of pride and satisfaction to yourself and your kin.

YOUR FAMILY HISTORY — $2.00

Each manuscript is a GENEALOGICAL and HISTORICAL sketch of the family from earliest times, showing its origin and growth, its place among the gentry in Great Britain or on the Continent, its part in the founding and development of America, and its achievements in this country. The derivation of the name itself is traced; family traits and characteristics are brought out; and genealogical data are set forth. Each history is a separate and distinct work painstakingly compiled from the most authentic sources. Bound as it is in an attractive cover, the manuscript may be filed among your family records or other important documents. It should serve as background material for your immediate family history and as a basis for the genealogy of future generations. Free, with each order, will also be sent a copy of "The Romance of Coats of Arms"—an illustrated booklet of special value to those interested in this fascinating subject.

The following is our latest revised list. The coupon, with $2.00 (no other charge), will bring you your manuscript by return mail. Satisfaction is assured by our unconditional money-back guaranty. Any two manuscripts may be had for $3.75; any three for $5.00. Send for yours today. MEDIA RESEARCH BUREAU, 1110 F St., Washington, D. C.

Seagram-sponsored research has conclusively proved that Seagram's Crowns are the form of whiskey most likely to agree with most men. It pays to follow this guide to Whiskey-kindness.

Shop early, avoid the rush, guard your nerves. Watch what you eat . . . And, if you drink, choose a whiskey that AGREES with you . . . choose Seagram's Crowns,

"A MOST WHOLESOME FORM OF WHISKEY"

Try this Delicious Seagram Egg Nog . . . Your Guests Will Enjoy It

This recipe makes enough for 10 people—it has been tested and tasted by experts.

1. Separate the yolks and whites of 6 eggs. Beat whites stiff and add gradually 1 cup sugar while beating.
2. Add the thickly beaten yolks to the whites, beating well together.
3. Stir in very gradually ¼ cup Jamaica rum and 1 pint of your favorite Seagram Crown Whiskey (or 1½ pints if extra strength is desired); slowly add 1 pint milk.
4. Last, stir in 1 pint heavy cream, and serve from punch bowl or pitcher in egg nog or punch glasses.

Say Seagram's and be Sure

Transfers.

Creation of machinery by which the Civil Service Commission would qualify persons already in the Government service for transfers to higher positions was urged by Albert H. Aronson, the Social Security Board's personnel chief, at the third of Labor Lodge No. 12's civil service forums.

Aronson suggested that the commission certify two lists of eligibles for vacant positions, one the standard list of new eligibles, the second, a list of persons in the next lower grade already in the service. Personnel officers would then be able to select their employes from either list, giving preference to experienced Government workers where desirable.

This means of giving preference, Aronson said he thought, would accomplish pretty much the effects sought by Richardson Saunders, personnel assistant to the Secretary of Labor, in his promotion plan outlined in the Diary Tuesday, without tending to exclude in any way persons outside of the service. Saunders suggested that employes already in the service with high efficiency ratings be given a five-point preference over newcomers. Aronson frowned on the preference feature.

The Civil Service Commission, Aronson ventured, probably would be favorably disposed to setting up such transfer machinery if it had the necessary funds. As a step in this direction, Aronson suggested that the commission now call upon all departments to submit the names of persons eligible for vacancies in other departments.

An interesting sidelight of Aronson's talk was his explanation of how temporary employes came to get more leave than permanent employes. The original draft of the leave bill called for 30 days annual annual leave, with temporary employes getting one-twelfth of that, or 2½ days. When the bill was finally approved the 30 days were scaled down to 26, but the 2½-day provision was untouched.

Xmas Fund.

The announcement that the Federal Diaryist will play Santa Claus at the various parties being given by Federal employe groups for the benefit of The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund has brought us a flock of promises and threats which leave us trembling alternately with fear and delight in our Santa trousers (the trousers are so big we can do both at the same time).

Dorothy Bailey, of Labor Lodge 12, has promised to provide strawberry shortcake and has threatened to have 15 of the most beautiful Laborines on hand at the lodge's Saturday night party to stroke our beard; Mrs. Cora Faulkner, of the Railroad Retirement Board Union, wants us to lead a square dance; from Agriculture Lodge, No. 31, we've heard the dark rumors that Santa may be scalped by a tribe of Indians who have taken over these United States, while the Agriculture ARA officials plan to spend tomorrow afternoon putting up Christmas decorations—including sprigs of mistletoe.

Right now, however, Santa is concentrating his efforts to make good at his dress rehearsal performance tonight at the Social Security Board Union's party at the Palisades Field House. Norman Ware will lecture on recent trends in labor legislation and if Santa is coaxed sufficiently with toys and dolls or—need we add—cash, he will deliver a speech on how Santa intends to be fair to organized labor this year. There will also be carol singing, in which Santa will join with his persistent monotone voice which only his reindeer have been able to stand so far, and the usual beard-dunking refreshments. Santa also has a surprise up his sleeves (and they're big sleeves too) for all fund contributors. So don't forget to bring your td's or you'll drive Santa in his disappointment, to the dt's.

AAA Lodge, No. 116, will go it alone on its dismissal program, the lodge having voted against cooperation with WPA, Resettlement and Agriculture Lodges on their three-point program.

Postals.

Post on Reserve Board Sought for Dallas Man

By the United Press.

Rep. Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), Texas, tonight said that he had recommended to President Roosevelt that George Waverly Briggs, Dallas, be considered for appointment to the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

The vacancy arises from the resignation of Ralph W. Morrison.

Plea to Lift School Paper Ban Refused

Board Hears Editor of Scholastic Defend Editorials.

Authorities Decide to Appeal Lois Kemp Court Ruling.

For one hour the Board of Education yesterday heard Maurice R. Robinson, editor of school weekly, Scholastic, banned from District schools two weeks ago for pacifistic policies, defend his magazine, but was not moved to reconsider its previous decision.

The board took no action in the matter, except to receive the editor's brief.

Robinson, who came to Washington last spring to answer charges that Scholastic had Communistic tendencies, vigorously upheld yesterday, in his second defense of the publication in the District, Scholastic's anti-war editorial attitude. At the same time, he denied that the quotations from the magazine, on which the board based its stand against the weekly, represented Scholastic's editorial policy.

The editor accused the board of judging Scholastic's peace stand on four "suggestions," contained in an Armistice Day editorial appearing in the magazine in 1933. In an editorial urging "the youth of America to adopt a program on which students of good will can unite," the editor set down these "possible planks:"

"We will not fight in any war unless the mainland of the United States is invaded by a foreign foe, or unless by international agreement against an aggressor state.

"We will not fight in any war which has not been declared by majority vote in a nation-wide referendum.

Editorial Excerpts.

"We will not accept conscription of our bodies for the Army or Navy without an equally complete conscription of the capital and profits of industry."

"We will maintain to the end our right to determine our own conduct by independent thinking."

Then the editorial closed with this question, "What do you think?"

Robinson insisted yesterday that the editorial, while provocative, did not constitute a declaration of editorial policy.

Questioning Robinson, Henry I. Quinn, board member, asked if the editor did not think the editorial as written "implied indoctrination."

Henry Gilligan, who, like Quinn, voted to have Scholastic kept from the schools, asked the editor if he believed in the doctrine, "My country, right or wrong."

Robinson replied that he did not believe it essential to a patriotic attitude to consider "everything in the country is right."

"Not Revolutionary Then."

The editor pointed out that the controversial editorial did not sound "revolutionary" in 1933, because "the determination to resist war as individuals was at its height in this country." Reminding the board that Scholastic had been under fire, first on communistic charges, and now on pacifistic counts, he said "we cannot possibly be both. If hatred of war, opposition to war and the things that make for war are defined as pacifism, then I doubt if there are more than a handful of Americans who would be classified as pacifists."

Robert A. Maurer, a member of the board, explained to Robinson that "the board is not in favor of war. But it thinks you have gone too far in the planks in that editorial (the 1933 editorial)."

Robinson pointed out that of 93 editorials appearing in Scholastic between January, 1932, and May, 1936, only three had been on the subject of war and peace. He read extensively from magazines on the approved list for school use, in which authors of articles took strong pacifistic stands.

Before the board yesterday were numerous communications protesting its stand against Scholastic. One from Mrs. Wilda P. MacKenzie, member of the Gordon Junior High School P.-T. A., congratulated the board on the vote cast by Mrs. Mary McNeil, board member, in favor of retaining Scholastic on the approved list. Mrs. McNeil was the only board member to vote against the ban.

Acknowledging receipts of a letter from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, the board voted to continue the prosecution of the pending appeal in the Lois Kemp case. The appeal followed a decision of the District Court that Lois, an 11-year-old Clarendon (Va.) girl, is entitled to admission to Gordon Junior High School. The decision, opening District schools to all nonresident pupils with parents employed in the District, reversed a previous opinion of a former corporation counsel.

Commissioner Hazen, in his communication to the board, transmitted a memorandum from Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal requesting instructions from the board as to continuing the prosecution.

"We should have another court ruling on the case, since it is a matter of great public interest," declared Mrs. Leonore Smith.

'Numbers' Writer Dies of Shot Fired by Rival After Argument

Police Report Harvey James Admits Shooting in Which Victor Juliano Was Wounded; Started Fracas, Is Claim.

Gorman Wright, 27, colored "numbers" writer and former bootlegger, died in Emergency Hospital yesterday from gunshot wounds allegedly fired by a "numbers" rival Monday night.

Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson said yesterday Harvey James, colored, 27, admits shooting Wright after an argument that started at Joe Turner's fight arena. James also confessed firing the shot that wounded Victor "Toots" Juliano, well-known police character, Thompson said.

Juliano is confined to Sibley Hospital with a bullet wound in his shoulder. He will undergo an operation this morning to remove the slug.

James, police said, confessed at his cell in the Tenth precinct station. James said he had made a bet with Wright on one of the fights. After the bouts, he was quoted as saying, he left the arena without paying Wright who won.

Wright, according to Thompson, asked Roger Simpkins and Albert Vincent, both colored, and Juliano to go with him to see James. Juliano is alleged to have driven the colored men to an apartment in the 1600 block of Twelfth street northwest.

James told police Wright attacked him when he entered the flat. James, police said, admitted he fired a shot which struck Wright in the abdomen. The other three men fled.

A shot fired after the fleeing men struck Juliano.

An inquest will be held in connection with Wright's death probably Saturday. Thompson said James will be charged with the shooting today.

Meanwhile, suspicion that the death of Maurice Juliano, 28, who was found dead in a garage in the rear of his home, 2105 Fourth street northeast, was linked with the shooting of his brother, was removed when Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said the man committed suicide.

Wright had been arrested several times for gambling and on liquor charges.

Five-Car Crash Near Beltsville Hurts Trucker

Series of Accidents Due to Slippery Streets Injures 4 Others.

Three heavy trucks and two passenger automobiles were involved in a spectacular crash on the Baltimore boulevard near Beltsville, Md., last night, sending one man to Casualty Hospital with a broken leg.

E. W. Pulliam, Ashbury, N. C., told police he slowed his truck down to avoid hitting a parked automobile. In a split second, police said, two other trucks and a passenger car had skidded on the wet road and jammed up behind the first truck.

Sanford Hammond, colored, 18, of 1054 Bladensburg road northeast, a helper on the third truck, was taken to the hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. His condition was reported to be not serious.

Trial Set for Wednesday.

Officer Vernon Spicer, of the State police, charged Pulliam and the drivers of the other vehicles with reckless driving pending trial in police court Wednesday. Charles C. Foote, Berwyn, Md., owner of the parked automobile, was charged with illegal parking.

Benjamin Ruby, 42, of 222 Third street northwest, suffered a fractured left leg, several fractured ribs and a possible skull fracture yesterday when he was struck by an automobile at John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said his condition was serious. Frank Crawley, 20, of the 300 block of H street northwest, driver of the car, was charged with reckless driving.

Two Others Badly Hurt.

Two men were badly injured late yesterday when their automobile collided with a street car operated by Ernest Shumaker, Fifteenth and H streets northeast, on Benning road northeast, near Twenty-third place.

Walter B. Sisson, 22, of Bailey's Crossroads, Va., driver of the car, suffered possible concussion of the brain, cuts and bruises, and his companion, Gay Omohundro, 20, of Farmers Fork, Va., suffered concussion of the brain. Both were taken to Casualty Hospital.

A fractured left leg and cuts and bruises were suffered late yesterday by Robina Rae, 46, of 1616 Crescent place northwest, when she was struck by an automobile operated by Elmer Lincy, 19, of the 1300 block of Twenty-seventh street northwest, on East Executive avenue near E street. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Father Follows Daughter to Altar

Joseph A. Griffith, formerly of 111 Sherman avenue, Takoma Park, who is assistant cashier at the city postoffice here, became a bridegroom only a few hours after his daughter, Dorothy Griffith, became a bride, it was learned yesterday.

The weddings took place Saturday. Griffith and Mrs. Mabel L. Redmiles, of College Park, slipped away from the wedding reception of his daughter and the man who had just become her husband, George Livings, and were married by the Rev. Ralph Smith in the presence of Mrs. Redmiles' daughter, Norma, and Griffith's other daughter, Mary Louise.

The postal official and his bride will live in College Park, and Mr. and Mrs. Livings at 4106 Third street northwest.

N.F.F.E. Asks Roosevelt Aid To Cut Hours

Support Sought to Give More Strength to Merit System.

Benefits to Government Cited by Extension of Civil Service.

President Roosevelt yesterday was asked to support legislation to strengthen and extend the merit system and to establish a shorter work week without reduction in pay for Federal workers in letters sent him by the executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes now in session here.

In regard to the merit system, the council wrote:

"The executive council is convinced there can be no questioning the public benefits which will result from the enactment of legislation which will extend the merit system to all save policy-making positions in the Federal service, and complementary measures which will give to the Federal Government a thorough-going system of classification. Both are in the interest of greater efficiency and greater economy in the dispatch of the public business, and are essential to good personnel administration.

"Despite the numerous encroachments made upon the civil service system during recent years, the executive council is cognizant of your own interest in the maintenance of the merit principle, as well as of your desire to place the Federal service upon that sound footing which a comprehensive classification system alone can give.

Support Asked.

"The executive council is hopeful efforts to accomplish these highly desirable objectives by legislative enactment will be successful during the sessions of the Seventy-fifth Congress, and trusts that the vigorous support of the leadership of the Administration will be accorded the measures introduced to that end."

The committee petitioned the President for support for the shorter work week as follows:

"The executive council wishes to take this occasion to point out that tens of thousands of Federal employes now are working excessive hours without either added compensation or compensatory time.

"Likewise, in application of the regulations, signed and issued at the White House, governing the annual and sick leave, as much as five hours has in some instances been added to the work week. Ther was no intention on the part of Congress to add to the work week by the passage of these laws, and we therefore protest strongly against this unfortunate misuse of the leave legislation.

40-Hour Week Sought.

"We bespeak support of your Administration for legislation which will provide for a maximum work week of 40 hours, at the same time safeguarding all groups of employes now enjoying better time conditions, and providing for compensation for overtime or compensatory time in lieu thereof.

"The executive council does not believe it is the intention of the Federal Government to impose unwarranted working conditions, and that, rather, it is your desire and the desire of other responsible officials to set an example to private business and industry in the matter of hours of labor. Present conditions in the service call emphatically for reform along progressive lines."

In another letter the National Legislative Council of Federal Employes Organizations requested the President to support legislation making it possible to permit allocation of space in public buildings for the transaction of business by credit unions which are composed exclusively of Federal workers.

Such use of space has been denied by the Comptroller General.

The President was asked:

". . . To find it possible to indicate your interest in legislation which will enable the credit unions to continue to use the modest amount of space they now are occupying in Federal buildings in all parts of the country."

4 Hurt, 25 Held After Riot In Baltimore Taxicab Strike

Disorders Follow Attempt of Company to Put 75 Cars in Service; Many Machines Damaged When Stoned by Mob.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 16.—Police arrested 25 men today in quelling one serious riot and several disturbances resulting from the strike of the drivers of one taxicab company over the discharge of four employes.

At least four persons were injured. Many of the company's taxicabs were damaged.

The disorders followed the decision of the Diamond Co. to put 75 of its 330 cabs back into service. Of the first 20 to go on the streets, all but six were returned damaged to the company's garage within an hour and a half.

The major disorder occurred on Greenmount avenue near the company's office, when strikers tried to stop the first group of taxis.

A truck led the string of cabs out of the company's parking lot shortly after 9 this morning. Strikers gave chase.

Paving bricks were hurled at the speeding machines. Some private automobiles, manned by strikers, succeeded in cutting off the tail end of the procession and a general melee ensued.

Police Lieut. Joseph Baroch said: "When I got there I saw one of the worst riots in progress that I've ever seen."

Police broke up the riot with drawn guns. No shots were fired. A detail of 40 policemen, stationed around the company's office, was aided by officers rushed to the scene in patrol cars.

Samuel Hartman, president of the company, ordered the taxicabs, each manned by a driver and an assistant, on the street after unsuccessful negotiations to settled the strike.

Decision Limits Right to Release Prisoners Here

A new rule regulating release of prisoners sent to jail by Police Court judges will be promulgated because of a decision late yesterday by District Court Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue which sharply limits power of lower court judges to release prisoners after sentence.

The case arose when attorneys representing Thomas O'Shea, who was given six months for intoxication, appealed to Justice O'Donoghue to order Presiding Judge John P. McMahon to clear through his office a memorandum by Judge Robert E. Mattingly, committing magistrate, recommending O'Shea's release. The recommendation was issued several weeks after O'Shea went to jail.

Judge McMahon refused to act on the recommendation and O'Shea's attorneys, James Shenos and George Boden, sought a high court order compelling him to take action. At a trial yesterday, Justice O'Donoghue ruled Police Court judges lost jurisdiction of their cases after their monthly term of court expired.

Judge McMahon, called as a witness, said it had been the practice of Police Court judges, for at least 18 years, to issue release papers almost any time while the prisoner was still being detained. He said tightening up in the court's affairs had resulted in abandonment of the practice. Acting on his decision, Judge O'Donoghue refused to release O'Shea.

The ruling will make it impossible to affect release of Police Court prisoners after the term of court in which they were sentenced has expired.

Utilities Unit Has Little Regard for Patrons, President Says.

Charging that the United States district attorney's office is inefficient and that the Public Utilities Commission has little regard for the safety of its patrons, the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association last night demanded Congressional investigations of both. Both motions were put before the association by its president, John P. Cahill, who left the chair to accuse United District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and his assistant, Karl Kindleberger, of incapability in performing their duties.

One-Man Cars Denounced.

The Public Utilities Commission, Cahill said, "cared nothing for the wishes of the citizens and less for their safety." He scored the commission for its action in permitting one-man street cars in spite of the opposition of citizens' associations.

The association voted unanimously to oppose the granting of a permit for a proposed abattoir in Benning.

Saying that they saw little value in "a pile of granite," the citizens asked that a stadium be erected east of the Capitol as a memorial to Thomas Jefferson. The stadium could include facilities for displaying Jefferson relics.

Rail Electrification Favored.

It also was voted to petition the Interstate Commerce Commission to force the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to electrify its lines at least to the District line.

A resolution was adopted urging that all restaurant and hotel employes engaged in handling food be required to submit to a physical examination twice a year.

The Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens' Association asked that traffic lights be installed at Sixteenth street and Colorado avenue northwest, and at Sixteenth street and Morrow drive northwest.

Five new members were admitted.

MARSHALL MOVES BOSTON REDSKINS TO DISTRICT

SPORTS · The Washington Post · SPORTS

22 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1936 X ****

Transfer of Eastern Pro Grid Titlists Gives City Major Loop Club

Move Brings Next Best Team in Football, Battery of Super Stars Here; 6 Games Set at Stadium; 3 Other Offers Rejected.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Major league football was definitely placed on Washington's sports calendar last night when George Preston Marshall, owner of the Boston Redskins, announced that he had transferred to the Capital the Boston franchise in the National Professional Football League.

Thus Washington will be represented in the league by the team that won the Eastern championship before yielding the national professional title to the Green Bay Packers in a play-off last Sunday.

Marshall, Capital laundry magnate, announced the transfer following a conference yesterday with Clark Griffith, Washington Baseball Club owner, in which he leased Griffith Stadium as the site of the Redskins' home games in 1937.

None to Get Sanction.

In transferring his team to Washington, Marrshall, who owns 51 per cent of the stock in the Redskins, liquidated the National League Football Club of Boston, Inc., and will operate the Washington team as Pro Football, Inc., of Washington.

Marshall will head the organization as president. Edward J. Reeves, of New York, scion of a grocery chain fortune and a graduate of Georgetown University, is vice president. Reeves held 25 per cent of the stock in the Boston organization. Milton King, Washington attorney, retains his post as secretary-treasurer of the team.

President Joe Carr, of the National Professional League, was advised last night by Marshall of the transfer and league sanction necessary to the move was asked. Carr, however, had advised Marshall that the league was certain to approve the transfer.

Rejected Other Offers.

Carr will take a telegrapnic poll of the league's executive committee, which is charged with authorizing or rejecting the transfer. The committee is comprised of Lee Joannes, of the Green Bay team; J. W. Mara, owner of the New York Giants; George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, and Bert Bell, owner of the Philadelphia Eagles.

In choosing Washington as the base of his team's operations, Marshall rejected offers to merge his team with the Philadelphia Eagles and to move to Cleveland and Buffalo. At Buffalo, he declared he would be guaranteed against loss.

Marshall was motivated in moving from Boston by the apathy of Boston fans and newspapers toward the Redskins this season when they represented the city with its best team in history. In five years, Marsall's Boston teams have operated at a loss of $90,000, he declared.

That the team would not be returned to Boston in 1937 was apparent when Marshall snubbed Boston fans by choosing New York as the site of his championship game with the Green Bay Packers last Sunday.

Washington Redskins.

The Washington Redskins, as Marshall's team now will be known, will bring their full complement of stars to the Capital for early training next August, preceding the opening of the season in mid-September.

The Redskins' roster is dotted with super stars of the pro football realm. The famed Cliff Battles, named to innumerable All-League teams, is the spearhead of the Redskins' backfield, which boasts also Pug Rentner, the former Northwestern star; Ernie Pinckert, former All-American at Southern California, and Riley Smith, All-American at Alabama.

Marshall moves his team to Washington with the strong possibilty also that the noted "Slinging Sam"

King's Horse 'Out' as U.S. Steeds Win

George's Marconi, at 5-1, Beaten; Peggy Joyce's Entry Is Winner.

By the United Press.

London, Dec. 16.—King George VI entered his racing colors on the British turf for the first time today but failed to win on a day of sport dominated by Americans. The King's Marconi was second favorite in the New Windsor Handicap steeplechase at Windsor at odds of 5-1 but finished out of the money in a field of nine.

Kemmel, owned by Mols Levy, won the race by five lengths, with Mrs. A. M. Moon's Dark Ravine second and Sir Warden Chilcott's Lovely Herod third by a length. Kemmel paid 7 to 1, Dark Ravine, 6 to 1, and Lovely Herod, 100 to 6.

Marconi was the King's first entry in the sport of kings, and it was the only horse which raced under the royal colors for King Edward VIII during his brief reign. Edward actually had 11 winners but because of court mourning for King George V, they raced under the colors of the Earl of Derby.

Joyce Horse Triumphs.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce had one winner and shared another. Her Roi Tondel, at 10 to 1, outran a field of 20 to capture the Windsor Mill hurdle race. This was believed to have been her first race on British turf. The horse was given to her by Vivian Jackson, amateur rider, when their engagement was announced.

In the Windsor Oakside Handicap hurdle race, Miss Joyce's Watchdog ran to a dead heat with Cold Bird, owned by another American, John Hay Whitney. W. Smyth's Golden Pilot was third in a field of 5. Watchdog paid 11 to 2, while Cold Bird was a 9-to-2 favorite. Golden Pilot was 5 to 1.

Another American victory came in the Forest Handicap Steeplechase when Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Flying Minutes won in a nose finish from R. Heber-Percy's Passing Fancy. R. F. S. Gooch's Milada was third, 20 lengths back in the field of 14. Flying Minutes was betting favorite at 7 to 2. American owners thus accounted for half the afternoon's six races.

New Owners Keep Name of Browns

St. Louis, Dec. 16 (AP).—St. Louis' American League baseball club will continue to be known as the Browns.

A committee of seven, named by the new owners to supervise a contest for a new nickname, reported tonight the vote was 4 to 1 in favor of the name by which the team has been known since it entered the Junior Major League Circuit in 1902.

The contest ended last midnight. The three persons who, in the judgment of the committee, suggested the best new name or presented the best arguments against a change, will receive season passes.

Suggested names included St. Louis Blues, the Rajahs (Manager Rogers Hornsby is known as "the Rajah"); the Blue Birds, Wildcats, Hornets, Mustangs and Brown Larks.

Lash to Lead Hoosier Team in Sugar Bowl Run

Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Don Lash, Indiana's great distance runner, was selected today to lead a Hoosier team in the Sugar Bowl Track Meet at New Orleans. The team will include Lash in the 3,000-meter run; Tom Deckard, 3,000-meter steeplechase; George Miller, 800 meters; Bob Collier, 100 meters, and Tutt in the 1,500-meter run.

Hutson, of Packers, No. 1 Pass Receiver

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Don Hutson, of the Green Bay Packers, was the National Professional Football League's outstanding pass receiver of the 1936 season.

Hutson caught 34 passes for a total of 526 yards gained, good for an average of slightly more than 15 yards per catch. His nearest rival, Bill Smith, of the Chicago Cardinals, speared 20 passes for 414 yards and an average of a little more than 20 yards.

Average honors, however, went to the veteran bare-headed Bill Hewitt, of the Chicago Bears. Bill caught 15 passes and gained 358 yards, fractionally under 24 yards a pass.

John Sisk, of the Bears, caught only one pass, but it was good for 39 yards. On the other hand, Karpowich, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, caught one pass that resulted in a 6-yard loss.

$500,000 Bid For Contest Claimed

Scanlon Sees a Gate of Over $1,750,000 in Olympic Stadium.

Backers Empower Offer of Half Million, Claim; Garden Interested.

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—Negotiations are under way to shift the Braddock-Schmeling title fight to Germany in July, it was learned tonight.

Dennis Scanlon, an international business man with headquarters in New York and London, admitted that he has coferred several times with President John R. Kilpatrick, of Madison Square Garden, regarding possibilities of staging the bout in Berlin's huge Olympic stadium.

Scanlon admitted further that "Kilpatrick is interested in the proposition if certain conditions can be met. I am leaving for Germany immediately after Christmas to see about meeting those conditions."

Big Gate in Berlin.

According to Scanlon, the Garden and others connected with the bout are interested in the possible shift because they fear that anti-Nazi sentiment in New York will cause a small gate if held at the Long Island Bowl, as scheduled in June, and because they know that the set-up is ideal for a huge gate in Berlin.

"I have a group of friends in Europe—men who have unlimited backing," he continued. "After investigating thoroughly possibilities of a Berlin bout in July this group concluded that it would attract a gate of more than $1,750,000. They found the Olympic Stadium could seat close to 200,000 people for a fight.

"Never before have circumstances offered such an ideal situation for a big European fight. The challenger, Max Schmeling, is the athletic idol of all Germany. He is a close personal friend of Hitler. With memories of the successful Olympic games still fresh in their minds, Hitler and his associates desire this bout. It would give Germany much favorable publicity and it would attract thousands of visitors from all over Europe. These visitors would spend money in Germany."

Offer $500,000.

Scanlon said the bout appeared so attractive financially that his group empowered him to offer the American promoters $500,000 to buy the fight outright. Scanlon and his friends then would promote it and pay the fighters.

Promoter Mike Jacobs, of the Twentieth Century Club, declared he was not interested in a Berlin bout, but Scanlon was confident Jacobs would agree later.

Braddock's manager, Joe Gould, admitted that Scanlon had sounded him out on the Berlin affair and "I told Scanlon that Braddock didn't care where he fought, just so that he got his money out of it."

Rose Bowl 'Gate' Due To Be Second Largest

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 16.—Rose Bowl ticket officials looked up today from their pleasant task of counting receipts and announced Washington University's Huskies and Pittsburgh's Golden Panthers probably will play before the second richest "gate" in the history of the New Year's Day classic.

It will be several days before the actual amount of cash taken in will be known, but the total is expected to be around $280,000. "Sold out" signs have decorated the ticket headquarters' front door since Monday.

The Rose Bowl's largest gate was in 1930, when Pittsburgh and University of Southern California drew what was then a near-capacity crowd of 65,309 people who paid $306,421.15 to see the game.

The bowl was sold out in eight days for that game, and most of the seats went for $5.50 apiece. This year it took only seven days to wind up the ticket sales at slightly lower rates.

The bowl, enlarged twice since it was first built in 1923, now seats 85,511 customers—and more, if bleacher boxes are erected.

The smallest crowd in recent years turned out in 1934 to see Columbia spring a surprise and defeat Stanford. Attendance was only 42,127, and receipts totaled $109,043.37.

The surprising seven-day sell-out this year was equaled a year ago when the Stanford-Southern Methodist game was announced. A packed house of 83,982 paid admissions saw the encounter, receipts totaling $225,172.98.

Attendance in paid admissions and receipts since 1930 follow:

1931—Washington State-Alabama, 54,495, $241,891.72.
1934—Stanford-Columbia, 42,127, $109,043.37.
1935—Stanford-Alabama, 81,756, $226,942.26.

Grim-Looking Squad Is Determined to Avenge 3 Bowl Defeats.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 16.—Pitt's husky Panthers headed West tonight for their fourth attempt to capture a Rose Bowl game—a grim-looking bunch of youngsters.

Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland, the coach, with his usual dour face, said as he waved farewell:

"We had our best practice of the season today. The boys are putting out. Their spirit is great. I won't make any predictions. I am satisfied. I know we are going to try our best."

One of the many giant guards displayed the team's grimness when he heard someone request Marshall (Biggie) Goldberg, sophomore backfield spark plug, to pose with a "victory smile."

"Shall I crack him?" demanded the guard, while Goldberg and the others grew as solemn as if in church.

Three other Pitt teams with better records than the present squad which lost to Duquesne and tied with Fordham have traveled to the coast and met disaster. The coach hasn't let the boys forget the 47-to-10 lacing in 1930 and the 35-to-0 trimming in 1933 by Southern California. In 1927 Pitt lost to Stanford 7 to 6.

Brief stops will be made at Dodge City and Hutchison, Kans., but the first formal workout will not come until Friday at Albuquerque, N. Mex. Saturday afternoon the squad will practice at the San Bernardino Municipal Baseball Park, near their headquarters at Arrowhead Springs, Calif. Later they will move to Pasadena for workouts in the Rose Bowl.

Owens to Turn Pro At Havana Festival, His Manager Says

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—Jesse Owens, Olympic triple sprint and broad-jump winner, has turned professional, according to Carlos Henriquez, Cuban sports commissioner, and Owens' New York manager, Marty Forkins.

Henriquez said that Owens will make his first appearance as a professional track star on December 26 and December 27 as part of the Cuban national sports festival to be held in Havana during Christmas week.

His first appearance will be between halves of a football game between the Cuban A. C. and Miami University freshmen, opening event of the carnival.

Forkins said Owens will leave New York December 23. He plans to fly to Miami late New Year's Day.

Yankees Voted Outstanding '36 Team

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—While the New York Yankees did it with their bats, experts, using ballots, selected the world baseball champions as the No. 1 team of 1936 in the sixth annual Associated Press sports poll.

For the fifth straight year, and the second time for the Yankees, the World Series winner has been chosen by observers participating in the nation-wide poll as sports' outstanding unit. Significantly, too, football furnished the runner-up for the third successive year.

The Yankees, for their runaway of the American League pennant and decisive victory over their intra-city rivals, the Giants, in the World Series, received 46 first place nominations among the 82 participants in the poll. All told Joe McCarthy's ball players posted 194 points. In contrast, the New York Giants, who were acclaimed the nation's leading team three years ago, polled only nine points despite their bristling comeback to win the National League banner.

Serving to confirm the results of the final Associated Press ranking poll which designated Minnesota as the country's No. 1 team, Bernie Bierman's burly boys gained a clear-cut title to second place with 112 points. They were No. 1 on 13 lists despite the fact they were beaten for the first time in four seasons.

Third place was awarded the United States Olympic track and field team, which mopped up on the cinder path at Berlin. Fifteen experts listed the international athletes first. The University of Washington's great eight-oared crew, triumphant in the intercollegiate four-mile pull and the Olympic 2,000-meter sprint tests placed fourth.

The results of the poll with points tallied on a 3-2-1 basis:

Teams.	Points.
1. New York Yankees, world baseball champions	194
2. Minnesota, football	112
3. U. S. Track and Field Squad, Olympic champions	68
4. University of Washington crew, intercollegiate and Olympic champions	27
5. Green Bay Packers, nat'l pro football champions	17
6. Louisiana State, Southeastern football champions	13
7. Argentina's Polo Four, Olympic champions	11
8. New York Giants, National League baseball champions	9
9. Detroit Red Wings, National League hockey champions and United States Walker Cup golf team	6

Scattered points—Five, Germany's Olympic team; 3 each for Hollywood Universals, basketball, and British Davis Cup tennis team; 2 each for McPherson Oilers, basketball; Long Island University, basketball; University of Texas, relay team, and Japanese Olympic swimming team; 1 each for Santa Clara, football; Cincinnati Reds, baseball; Yale, football; United States Olympic swimming team; Tulsa Oilers, basketball, and Duquesne, football.

Kelley Accepts Grid Award, Stops Show

By Paul Mickelson.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Dec. 16.—Lawrence Morgan Kelley, the apple-cheeked Irishman from Williamsport, Pa., whose pigskin exploits and wisecracks provided the most glamorous chapter in Yale gridiron lore, hauled down the house again today as he received the John H. Heisman Trophy as the outstanding college football player of 1936.

As 750 banqueters, among them his mother, father and sister, honored him at the presentation ceremonies, Kelley picked up the ball and scored the winning touchdown of the luncheon with his wit.

"Fellow Rotarians," he began as his audience rolled with laughter and kept on rolling, "I represent only the voice of the Yale team—as the press would have it.

"Football is a big business, you know, and the press made it so. It seems there is nothing the press can't do. Why, they put a halo around Fordham's line and called it the 'seven blocks of granite.' They built that line as they built me. When a little crack appeared in those 'seven blocks of granite,' why, they chipped it down, piece by piece. What'll they do to me later, I don't know."

"Grandest Game Ever."

"Yes," he said, as he wise-cracked down the field of press, radio, players and officials, "football is a great business, but you can't take it away from the boys no matter what you do. When the boys get on the field and the whistle blows for the kick-off, they forget all about the mortgages on the big stadium and the Saturday night pay checks.

"And when you play your last game and are ready to play more, you find football stood you in good stead, that it is one of the grandest games God ever devised."

As he sat down, clutching the big bronze trophy given by the Downtown Athletic Club as recognition

O'Hara's Offer For Suffolk Weighed

New England Sportsman May Buy Boston Track; $93,000 Difference.

Boston, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—An offer by Walter O'Hara, managing director of Narragansett Park race track, to purchase the Suffolk Downs race track at East Boston was taken under advisement late today by President Charles F. Adams, of the Eastern Racing Association, operators of Suffolk Downs.

Though no figures in the proposed transaction were discussed, it was understood the deal was held up temporarily by a $93,000 difference in purchasing price.

It was reported that O'Hara had offered approximately $419,000 for controlling interest in Suffolk Downs while Adams insisted on an estimated $512,000.

A statement issued under Adams' name said O'Hara's offer was "appreciated" and that it would be taken under consideration and discussed "with the board of directors at the next meeting which will be held immediately following the holiday season * * *"

The statement added that O'Hara's offer "was reasonable and fairly representative of a sound value of the Suffolk Downs property, but that tax problems on such a transfer were troublesome and legal advice was necessary before any definite action could be considered."

Tiny Thornhill Starts Drive To Curb Betting on Grid Tilts

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—Making the sports circuit: Tiny Thornhill, Stanford's football coach, has started a movement to curb betting on football games . . . He wants the coaches to ask newspaper men to stop quoting odds on the games . . . Bill Tilden and Francis Hunter, oldtime pals on the tennis court and now rival promoters, worked together on the winter schedule so that Hunter's Fred Perry-Ellsworth Vines' troupe wouldn't cross Tilden's tour of the college towns . . . The general opinion is that Vines' lightning service will be too much for Perry indoors, but Jack Crawford told the Associated Press in Australia that he thinks Perry will win the majority of the matches.

The Milwaukee Brewers have asked Cleveland for Bob Feller, just in case . . . The New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers carry their feud into the winter . . . The Dodger officials say they tried to get a couple of exhibition games with the Giants next spring but didn't get anywhere . . . The increase of night ball in the majors is another reason why the majors voted to take some of the zip out of the ball . . . Managers say their greatest fear about night ball is that the pitcher or third baseman won't see a hard one coming their way. . . .

The dope is that P. K. Wrigley will not go out of his own organization to get a general manager for the Cubs . . . He will take care of two problems at once, the boys say, by moving Charlie Grimm into the general manager's job, and making Gabby Hartnett manager . . . George Vernon Washington, who batted .390 for St. Paul last season to top the American Association hitters, has been released outright by the White Sox to St. Paul, to whom he was optioned last year . . . Bucky Harris thinks Freddy Sington, all-America Alabama tackle in 1930, is just about ready to stick in the major leagues . . . Sington who played 25 games with the Senators last season, led the Southern League hitters last year with .384 . . . Joe Thum, "father of bowling" in America, is in serious condition in a Flushing, N. Y., hospital . . . He is 79 years old . . . John O. Seys, vice president of the Chicago Cubs, who invented the new home plate the National League will use next year, credits Rogers Hornsby with giving him the idea . . . The plate is designed to protect players sliding over it with their spikes . . . now all they have to do is protect the runner from the catcher's spikes.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Washington awakes this morning to find itself with a big league football team on its hands. Well, perhaps not on its hands, exactly, but at any rate with a big league football team in its midst, yearning to be adopted into the affections of the sports populace.

POVICH.

And it's a stroke of luck for Washington, I'm thinking. No ordinary football team are these Redskins that George Marshall has transplanted from Boston, but the champions of the Eastern section of the National Professional League—a team ready made with its place in the national rankings already won.

The Washington sports scene immediately takes on added glamor in the presence of the Redskins. It was lean sports fare on which Washington fans were asked to subsist for too many years. Only the presence of the Washington ball club separated the Capital from complete classification as a minor league sports town. The city is still struggling in the bush league in boxing, of ice hockey it has none, and, if it is to be plainly stated, no college football team in the local area deserves rank as a major eleven.

But the Redskins, and the National Professional Football League, ah—there is something to tie to. Washington fans will be moving again in a big league sphere, partaking of the same football menu that is available to New York, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and the other cities of the National Pro League. We're in the big leagues.

It means that Washington fans can feast their eyes on the greats of the gridiron whose exploits otherwise could only have been legendary here. From the four corners of the Nation those stars whose names flared in the headlines as collegians, have filtered into the National Pro League. It is, indeed, post graduate football that has been dropped into the laps of Washingtonians.

In the very face of Washington's reputation as a poor sports town, Marshall has dared to transfer his team from Boston, but it was no mere whim that prompted him to make the change. Nor was it wholly the failure of Boston fans to support his team (five years at Boston cost him $90,000). Marshall has an abiding faith in the responsiveness of Washington fans to a worthwhile attraction and thus he counts upon his Redskins to pay their way.

George Washington University was not deterred by the Capital's apparent apathy toward college football. The Colonials deduced that Washington, given the proper attractions, would respond. And Washington did, indeed. G. W. U., by offering large guarantees to prominent colleges, presented Washington with important football games and was able not only to raise its own prestige, but to show a neat profit on the season.

And Marshall is relying, too, on the cosmopolitan population of the Capital as a prime factor in the support of his team. With native Washingtonians in a distinct minority in the city, fans here owe no particular allegiance to any team. Thus with Marshall culling his players from various sections and the league schedule calling for visits by the teams of nine other large cities, he counts on striking a responsive note among the polyglot make-up of Washington's populace.

Washington weather also recommends the Capital as an ideal addition to the National League. The Capital is the southermost city in the circuit and the Redskins are not forced to gamble on the rigors of early winter which directly affects the crowds. Boston, cold and wind-swept in November, was not conducive to great crowds.

With Washington now a part of the industry, let us inspect the history of the National Professional Football League.

In 1921, when it was organized as a somewhat disjointed circuit of 20 teams, franchises could be bought for $50. Today, $50,000 could not buy the league rights in several cities.

With the teams from the smaller cities unable to compete with richer teams which offered attractive bonuses to graduating college stars, the league finally shrank to a workable circuit. The only small town now represented is Green Bay, Wisconsin, which operates its club as a semi-civic enterprise and thus is able to compete for the stars.

The league operated with only moderate success until 1925 when Red Grange made the entire nation pro football conscious, packing 80,000 into Yankee Stadium in his first professional apeparance. Then pro football caught on, swept the country.

The pros wisely made their peace with the colleges who had complained that the National League was luring lads from school with its attractive wages. Generously the pro league agreed to a rule preventing any college player from signing with one of the league's clubs until his class had graduated.

And the pros, also wisely, adopted none of the reforms that tended to de-emphasize college football. They retained the goal posts on the goal line to encourage the thrilling field goal; they permitted passes from any point beyond the scrimmage line and they permitted a ball carrier who stumbled and fell to regain his feet and continue running. Anything that would add to the fans' delight they willingly injected into the game. With the pros it's not the coach, or alma mater, but the customer who's always right.

Thompson, of Central, Joined Frat, Is Ousted

Bill Thompson, 6-foot 5-inch center of Central High's basketball team, and holder of the interhigh 100-yard and 220-yard sprint championships, has been cast out of interhigh athletics, it was learned yesterday, for joining an "unapproved" organization.

The star pivot man, who was considered virtually sure all-High material this season, immediately joined the fast District WPA team of the Heurich amateur league. He was signed up by Coach Davey Keppel.

Principal Lawrence Hoover, of Central, obviously affected at having to oust the likable, star athlete, said "the action was forced upon me; I had to do it."

"It is certainly regrettable," the principal said, "that we had to take this step. I can honestly say that it hurt me as deeply as it did Bill. We need him on our teams and think a lot of him. However, Bill violated a regulation of the Board of Education and the only thing we could do was give him the penalty."

Thompson joined a fraternity which was put on the "unapproved list" three years ago reportedly for holding a dance at the Press Club. The fraternity recently began to "reanimate themselves." Hoover said, and it was revealed to him that Thompson was a member. The principal said he had to ask Thompson if it were true and the athlete admitted it.

The action takes away all rights of the disqualified student to take part in any school activities, whether in sports, drama, the cadets or publications. The ruling was passed by the Board of Education in 1925 and took effect January 1, 1926.

Principal Hoover said that upon learning of Thompson's affiliation with the blacklisted organization he "told Bill he'd better make plans to graduate in February." Thompson had not planned to be graduated until June.

Hoover said he believed the disqualification "is irrevocable."

Bing Crosby Firm Builds Race Track

Sacramento, Calif., Dec. 16.—State Finance Director A. E. Stockburger today approved an agreement between the Twenty-second District Agricultural Association, San Diego, and the Del Mar Turf Club, which Bing Crosby heads, for construction and operation of a horse racing plant.

The turf club gets a 10-year franchise, for $100,000.

Olsen and Cox To End Mat Year Here

Rough, Tough Title Battle Due at Arena Tonight; Piers on Program.

The storm before the lull will take place at Turner's Arena tonight, when the last wrestling match of the year is held with Cliff Olsen and Joe Cox in the featured roles. The arena will be dark so far as grappling is concerned Christmas week and the week preceding New Years, with the next wrestling show scheduled for January 7.

In opposing Cox, Olsen will be making the second defense of his "title." Clifford won the right to be called heavyweight champion (on this circuit, at least), when Yvon Robert broke his leg in a match against the Swashbuckling Swede a few weeks ago.

Garibaldi Counted Out.

Cox lost to Gino Garibaldi, regarded by many as the Crown Prince of matdon, in his last appearance here. Just prior to that, Joe had won from Gino on a highly dubious ruling, which permitted Cox to get away with a solid smash delivered on the break which sent Gino to the mat long enough to be counted out.

Olsen, usually a very gentlemanly fellow in the ring, became a veritable barroom brawler in his last start against Kirilenko. Cox has long been recognized as one of the rudest, roughest workers in the game, and if they both decide to cast aside courtesy, a very roisterous evening seems in store for the patrons.

Henri Piers, the lobby wanderer who seems well on the way to becoming a local favorite because of his habit of roaming around in the lobby meeting customers between bouts, will engage Jim Comfield in a 30-minute semifinal.

In preliminaries scheduled for 30 minutes, Pat McKay will work against Ed Meske, Stanley Pinto will tackle Abe Yourist and Frank Judson will engage Jack Hader.

of the year's greatest player—an honor won last season by Jay Berwanger, of Chicago—he was given a rising ovation that lasted several minutes.

Kelley's spirit pervaded the presentation ceremony and luncheon. The trophy was presented by Walter L. Connell, president of the Downtown A. C., who said he first felt like abdicating the job because he was a Pennsylvania grad and "look what Kelley did to Penn last fall."

Coach Raymond (Ducky) Pond, of Yale, said that in 1933 when Kelley was a freshman, Mal Stevens, then Eli coach, told him Kelley was sure to become one of the greatest pass receivers in football.

"I didn't believe him then but he was right," said Coach Pond. "Kelley was more than an All-America football player. He was a fine leader, had gobs of color and was a great crowd player with ability to rise to the heights when it meant the difference between defeat and victory."

Henry B. Twombley, who starred for Yale in '84, also brought down the house as he told about the "good old days."

"We," said the robust old Yale star, "played football in my day, not basketball. We played three full seasons without a sub. We thought nothing of getting knocked out and didn't care who knew our signals. We started signals and they used to go like this: 'Play hard Dick.' That meant Dick was to lug the ball. And he didn't care who knew it.

"Harvard was our meat. We used to pray for Harvard. Their best play in my day was called with this signal: 'Treat 'em sharp, Hah-vad.'

"The trouble is that football fame is too fleeting," mused Old Timer Twombley. "Last fall I was at a Yale dinner and a kid came up and requested my autograph. We didn't have autograph hunters in my day, so I got a thrill out of it. But as I handed the youngster back his pencil, he asked for five more."

"Why six?" asked Old Timer Twombley.

"Well, it's this way," responded the boy. "My pal says if I can get six of yours, he'll trade me one of Larry Kelley's."

Orville White Leader In S. California Open

Night Cage Tilts Are Approved For Series

Principals Rule Out Twin Bills Until Experiment Is Tried, However.

By John R. Vosburgh.

The Board of Principals yesterday failed to approve a recommendation of the Interhigh Athletic Council for an "experimental" night double-header in the interhigh basketball series, but asserted instead that the "experiment" consist of one game only.

The Interhigh Council was empowered to name the date for the night game. According to the schedule drawn up by the council, it has reserved the Tech gymnasium for the nights of January 22, February 5, 12 and 26. It appears likely that the first night game will be between Central and Tech on January 22, but it was pointed out that Central's class night on that date might interfere.

Roosevelt and Wilson play the other game slated for January 22.

Although leaning favorably toward night basketball, the principals believed that "the general policy of starting with two games was a little too drastic." If the one night game is sufficiently orderly and beneficial to interhigh sports, it was added, then it will be time to try the double-headers.

Series Dates Unchanged.

It was also revealed that the board has been exercising considerable thought concerning the interhigh football series next year. The principals wished to commence the interhigh series about two weeks later than the Interhigh Council had recommended, but yesterday acceded to the council's recommendations on the face of the latter's explanation that a rearrangement of the schedule would entail a great deal of inconvenience.

Thus the series will start in the first week of October instead of the third. The council pointed out that the entrance of Wilson High in the series necessitated an early start. The principals contended a later start would be preferable, giving the schools a chance to play some outside games before the series commenced.

However, a recommendation that after next year all interhigh football games take place between October 15 and November 27 was tabled. By 1938 there will be seven schools in the series, due to the entrance of Anacostia High.

Cardinals to Play Shepherd Tonight

The lone bit of basketball in Washington tonight will be supplied by Catholic University and Shepherd College in their game at Brookland. The initial tap-off will be at 8:15 o'clock.

Victorious over Maryland State Normal in their first game of the season, Catholic is expected to outpoint the West Virginians but it figures to be a close game. Shepherd dropped a 32-20 decision to Mount St. Mary's last night in a whirlwind battle decided in the last two minutes of play.

Coach, Is It All Right If I Go See A Movie Tonight?

Suffolk, Va., Dec. 16 (AP).—There ought to be a law against collegiate cowboys dissipating their time and opportunities for physical development, Gus Tebell, University of Virginia coach, told students of Suffolk High School here today in presenting monograms to 17 football players.

"A young man can find no substitute for a healthy, strong body," Tebell said. "Engaging in football and other action sports helps develop the boy into the man. That's why I sometimes think there ought to be a law against young men at college—sometimes referred to as cowboys—dissipating their opportunities by sitting around in idleness during afternoons and staying up all hours at night."

Rosslyn Defeats Lucky Strike Girls

Galt Davis' Rosslyn team, much the best aggregation in the Ladies' District League, marching serenely toward its second straight league championship, handily trounced the Lucky Strike girls three straight games last night at the Rosslyn drives, to hike its victories up to 26 out of 30. Blanche Wootten, one of the reasons for the champions' overwhelming supremacy, climaxed Rosslyn's win with a big game of 131 and a 367 set.

Highway Engineers took advantage of Lucky Strike's set-back by climbing into second place at the expense of Temple, sweeping the match. Billie Butler's 120 game and Margaret Lynn's 328 set featured the victory. Marie Spates led Georgetown to an odd game decision over Arcadia and Lucille Youngs' 356 set enabled National Beer to gain the nod over Convention Hall. The R. E. A. Cleaners came out on top in its match with Swanee.

Led by Lou Christiana's big set of 381, Bell Cab established a new high total pinfall record in the Commercial League at Convention Hall, reaching the mark with a top game of 617. Russell Kilby, of the Evening Star team, annexed individual game honors with a 148 effort.

American Security No. 1 team topped the scoring in the Bakers League at Arcadia, taking high game and set with 583 and 1,728, respectively. Bill Burnell's 142 game and 397 set led the list of individual feats. . . . Jack Brown (Reciprocity) shot a 155 game and 382 set to lead the Civic Club bowlers. Lido's 534 and 1,646 topped the team scoring. . . . Duke Warneke collected a 128 game, to give Connecticut a high game of 531 in the Optical League. Total pinfall went to Edmonds No. 1 with 1,511.

Black Hawks Win.

Twin Oaks Black Hawks defeated Federal Alcoholic Administration, 29 to 16, last night at Roosevelt High gym. Russ Lampson, with 8 points, led the scoring for Twin Oaks.

Eagles 34-27 Victors Over Md. Normal

Lee and Zink Set Pace as American Coasts After Getting 12-1 Lead.

Rolling up a commanding 12-1 lead in the first 14 minutes of play, American University coasted through to its first victory of the season last night at the expense of Maryland State Normal, winning by a score of 34-27.

The visiting team never had a chance once the Eagles hit their stride and the issue was never in doubt, despite Maryland's futile second half rally. Sherman Lee and Captain Sid Zink paced the winning attack with 11 and 10 points respectively. They were accorded good support by their mates who showed considerable improvement over their past performances.

Merrick B. C. Leads In Community League

Merrick Boys Club gained undisputed leadership of the National League at the Southeast Community Center at Hine Junior High School last night by trimming Congress Heights, 28 to 22. It was a hard fought contest, the Heights coming within a point of tying the score in the second half. Cole, Crisfual and D'Antonio were the stars for Merricks while young Jack Surgue was the high point scorer.

In an American League contest Sigma Mu Sigma defeated D. C. Paper Co., 29 to 16. In the last game of the evening Reads Pharmacy downed Clover A. C., 30 to 20.

Smith's $7,884.75 Tops Pro Golfers

Miami, Fla., Dec. 16 (AP).—Lanky Horton Smith, the Oak Park, Ill., sharpshooter who won only 2 of 21 tournaments, was leading money winner for 1936 among the Nation's professional golfers, P. G. A. records showed tonight.

The blond, curly-haired shotmaker earned $7,884.75, which included the $1,500 first-place purse in the Masters' Open at Augusta and $1,250 for second place in the Miami Biltmore Open. He received $700 for winning the Vancouver (B. C.) Open.

Ralph Guldahl, the golfing auto salesman from St. Louis, was second in earnings for the year with $7,682.41, and Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., was right behind him with $7,281.

Other heavy money winners were Harry Cooper, of Chicago, $7,443; Ray Mangrum, Dayton, Ohio, $5,995; Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee, Pa., $5,927; Jimmy Hines, Garden City, Long Island, $5,559; Gene Sarazen, Brookfield Center, Conn., $5,480.

Games Tonight For G. W. and Maryland

By Lewis F. Atchison.

George Washington and Maryland will have their 1936 basketball premieres tonight on foreign floors, the Colonials at Baltimore, where they encounter Johns Hopkins, and Maryland at Richmond, where the University of Richmond will help its conference rival tear the wrappings off a new season. In both cases all indications point to victories for the local and nearby schools.

Boasting a wealth of material, in some sources considered the best college talent ever assembled under one banner, the Colonials do not expect to be pressed by the Medicos, even though Hopkins has one of its best combinations in recent years. Bill Reinhart will lead a delegation of some 15 men into the Monumental City, and at least 10 of these probably could play on any ball club around here.

Line-up Not Named.

No starting line-up has been named for George Washington and Reinhart may experiment some in an effort to find the best combination. Hal Kiesel may give way to Jack Butterworth at center, and, if so, the thin man will be paired with Tommy O'Brien at forward. This arrangement would give the downtown school the strongest offensive trio it ever has had, for O'Brien was the second high scorer in town last winter, and Kiesel ranked within the first five. Butterworth is a newcomer to the squad, but has been impressive in practice and is expected to win a regular position.

Hopkins will provide George Washington with a top-notch brand of competition, although it doesn't figure to emerge the winner. In Melvin, Siegel and Rason the Blue Jays have a trio of crack shots who can give any team a run for its money, but the question is, can they run as far as G. W.?

Maryland will place a small, fast and clever team on the floor against the Spiders, with at least one newcomer in the starting line-up. The latter undoubtedly will be Bill Guckeyson, all-star all-around athlete, who is trying to fill the sizeable brogans left vacant by Vic Willis's graduation. Eddie Johnson; youngest son of famed Walter Johnson, also will get a chance at the pivot as Guckeyson's understudy.

Probable Line-Up.

Coach Burt Shipley probably will use Charley Keller and "Little Knocky" Thomas at guards; Al Waters and Waverly Wheeler at forward in the starting group, but he has a nice lot of reserves to call in in emergencies. "Long John" McCarthy, Bill Bryant, both lettermen, Coleman Headley, who played a little when not busy with track last year, and George Knepley. Milton Mullitz and Bob Neilson, up from the freshmen, are in this category.

"Ship" may need 'em all, too, if Richmond's showing against Duke is a criterion of its power. The Spiders finally lost to the Blue Devils, but only by three points, 35-38, and only after 40 minutes of tough basketball.

8 Teams to Compete In Community League

Bureau of Investigation, Little Tavern, Jewish Community Center, Flying Eagles, Federal WPA, Twin Oaks Black Hawks, Labor Department and Heurich Senate Beer have been selected by Harry (Pete) English, league president, as the teams to play in the 1937 Community Center League. The league will open up early in January.

President English has requested all managers of girls teams desiring to enter the Girls Community Center League to meet with him at 8 o'clock tonight at Central High School.

Tigers Sink Only 7 of 60 Field Shots

Kurtyka and Bertrand Lead Hoyas' Attack With 6 Points Each

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 16.—Staving off a final Princeton rally, a smooth-passing Georgetown quintet tonight scored its second victory of the season by edging the Tiger basketball five, 25 to 22, before 500 persons, in the university gymnasium.

The Nassau courtmen held their own throughout the game, but were unable to find the range of the basket, sinking but 7 out of 60 attempted field goals. Walt Woodward and Jack Appel paced the Tigers with 9 and 8 points, respectively, while Ed Kurtyka and Henk Bertrand led the visitors with 6 points apiece.

Shore, Georgetown left guard, opened the scoring with a pot shot from the side, and Kurtyka followed with three more field goals for the visitors, while the Tigers managed to drop but three fouls. Bassin tallied two more field shots for the Washington five. Seventeen minutes of the half had elapsed before Jack Appel sank the first shot from the floor for Princeton. Woodward followed with another a minute later. Gibeau sank a sucker shot for Georgetown as the period ended with the count 14 to 7.

Appel and Woodward each dropped a field goal for Princeton as the teams went into the second half, but Bertrand evened the count with a brace of shots from under the basket. Fallon sank a goal and the Tigers added three fouls as Bertrand, Murphy and Petosky broke through with goals and Murphy with a foul for Georgetown.

Boston Redskins Moved to District

Baugh, Texas Christian's sensational forward-passer of this season, will be in the Redskins' line-up in 1937. The Redskins drew Baugh in the professional league draft last week and Baugh, if he plays in the National League, must sign with Marshall's team. He has indicated his intention to play pro football.

In big "Turk" Edwards, a 250-pound tackle, the Redskins boast the most colorful lineman in the league. Edwards for several seasons has won berths on the annual All-League teams.

The Redskins will play 6 of their 12 league games at Griffith Stadium with Marshall planning to stage at least two night contests under the lights. Sunday afternoons will be his other dates at Griffith Stadium.

With the league divided into East and West sections, the Redskins will play each of the other four Eastern teams on a home-and-home basis. Thus the New York Giants, the Brooklyn Dodgers, the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Philadelphia Eagles will make at least one appearance at Griffith Stadium.

The champion Green Bay Packers will also be seen at Griffith Stadium next fall under the schedule rules which provide that the teams which engaged in the play-off for the last championship also must meet on a home-and-home basis the following season.

The Redskins' other two opponents will be scheduled from among the Detroit Lions and the Chicago Bears and Cardinals.

Bacola and Taylor On Arena Program

Sam Bacala, victorious in his last five starts here, will go up against a boy he barely beat a few weeks ago in the semifinal to the Phil Furr-Johnny Lucas bout at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

Sammy's opponent in the scheduled eight-round semifinal, will be Bucky Taylor. Taylor floored Bacala for a nine count in the first round of their previous engagement and Sammy rose to win the fight, in the opinion of the official deciders, but not so far as the general public was concerned.

The winner of the semifinal will be matched with the winner of the Furr-Lucas bout sometime in the near future. Furr, who won the nod over Lucas in their first encounter, but dropped a 15-round decision to the Camden, N. J., ironworker in a return, will meet Joe Turriello in the New York Hippodrome January 15—if he wins next Monday night.

Empty Bottle Scores Surprise Victory in Matecumbe Handicap

Porter Rides Carpenter Entry

Grand Duke Is Beaten; Sande, Former Idol, Wins With Emir.

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 16 (AP).—Empty Bottle, fleet bay 3-year-old in the Ohio-owned silks of Mrs. E. B. Carpenter, scored a surprise victory in the 5½-furlong Matecumbe Handicap, for all ages, here today. Earl Porter, who won the opening day feature here, had the son of Jock well in hand while scoring by a length and a half over the three-time Maryland winner, Grand Duke, representing Mrs. Emil Denemark. Silverette, from the stable of G. Watts, lost second money by a head. Empty Bottle returned a $20.50 mutuel.

That tropical rarity, rain, fell overnight and caused the track to be slow for the afternoon's sport. Empty Bottle finished out in 1:07 flat. A threat of more than rain hovered in the heavy skies. Comparatively light fields made up the program as a result of the change in the racing strip.

Lady Higloss was favorite in the feature field of eight. Winner of her last two outings at Narragansett, the mare stopped after racing well up for a half mile. She finished fifth.

Empty Bottle showed the same brand of speed that characterized his last effort at Arlington Downs, Tex. He broke like a bullet and hustled into a wide lead. Wha Hae and Lady Higloss both tired trying to keep up, then Grand Duke was whipped into second position. Empty Bottle never wavered, however. Grand Duke just lasted for the place award when Silverette closed very fast in the final drive.

Earl Sande, former idol of the Nation's jockeys and now trainer for Maxwell Howard, got off to a successful start for the winter season when he saddled the $11.10 for $2-shot Emir in today's first race. Earl, who has nine horses in his charge here, had the 3-year-old gelding in fine condition. The son of the Satrap rushed into a comfortable lead and registered by three lengths over the favored Moretide, which chased the victor all the way. Miss Capers was third, two lengths behind. Emir raced the 6 furlongs of slow going in 1:15 1-5.

Lotofus, a fast but stopping sprinter, was installed a heavy choice in the second, another 6-furlong sprint. The filly, as usual, flattered her backers to the stretch, then faltered and lost by four lengths to Over Yonder. Transit Lady missed the place on a photo verdict. Over Yonder kept close to the early pace and swept to the front when ready, scoring as if much the best. He returned $11.20.

Trainer Hirsch Jacobs made it 168 winners for the season in the third dash, when his wife's 2-year-old filly, Ethel's Choice, defeated seven other juveniles under Irving Anderson's Guidance. The cohort filly had a length and a half to spare over Oddesa Boy, while the latter was a like margin before Lady Day. Ethel's Choice, a 9-to-10 favorite, caught Lady Day at the top of the stretch and drew clear, but Anderson had to keep riding when Oddesa Boy, a poor last most of the trip, closed like a whirlwind on the inside.

Chimney Top Victor.

Chimney Top ran to his fast morning trials to take the fourth purse by three lengths at the liberal odds of 14 to 1. Bijuro nosed out Sandy Bill in the photo battle for the runner-up position. Sandy Bill, a Jacobs representative, stole a long early advantage. Chimney Top overhauled the leader after leaving the backstretch and drew off in the last furlong. Bijuro made a game rally in the closing stages and just got up to nip Sandy Bill. Quickly, the favorite, broke fast, but was outrun and wound up fifth.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's Albania scored a neck decision over Hose in the sixth race, thanks largely to a strong ride by Charlie Kurtsinger. Deduce, the one to draw most of the play, was third, three lengths away. Hose ran Deduce into defeat in the first 6 furlongs while Kurtsinger had Albania running strongly in third place, ready to strike. The daughter of Bull Dog swept around Hose in the run from the top of the stretch and finally wore down the leader in the final sixteenth. She paid $11.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EMIR, $11.10, $7.20, $5.30; MORETIDE, $4.70, $3.50; MISS CAPERS, $14.80.

EMIR broke fast, was sent to the front, displayed excellent speed, but boy took no chances and rode him out. MORETIDE broke well, was hard ridden all the way and was next best. MISS CAPERS, away in motion, ran good race. COUNT ME failed to show any speed. BAY BUDDY was outrun.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:32½. Winner, F. L. B. Stable's b. c. (3), by High Cloud—Idleness. Trained by H. H. Battle. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:14 1-5.

WESTY'S DUCHESS	(Hightshoe)	107	8	8	9	9	9	9	69.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OVER YONDER, $11.20, $4.20, $2.90; LOTOFUS, $2.80, $2.20; TRANSIT LADY, $2.70.

OVER YONDER moved up very fast turning out of backstretch, got through on inside and won going away. LOTOFUS opened wide gap early, but ran out around turn and again in stretch and just lasted to save the place. TRANSIT LADY finished with a rush in the final sixteenth and would have been second in another stride. CHANCE QUEEN, away well, showed good effort and is worth noting. AMQUI is sure to improve over this race.

DAILY DOUBLE, FIRST AND SECOND RACES, PAID $130.80.

THIR DRACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:56. Off at 2:57½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' ch. f. (2), by Cohort—Emancipate. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:18 4-5.

MINT FLAVOR	(C. Watters)	112	6	6	6½	7°	8	8	120.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ETHEL'S CHOICE, $3.80, $3.00, $2.60; ODDESA BOY, $6.70, $4.50; LADY DAY, $3.00.

ETHEL'S CHOICE got away fast, was allowed to rate along to middle of turn, where she ran into lead, drew out in stretch, tired and had to be driven hard to last it out. ODDESA BOY, badly outrun to the stretch, where he closed with a rush on inside and was wearing the winner down. LADY DAY had plenty of speed but weakened suddenly in last furlong. THE QUEEN was steered to the outside in stretch and finished fast. HIS NIBS is worth noting. He ran good race. FLICKERING stopped badly.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:24½. Winner, A. L. Copland, Jr.'s ch. g. (5), by Dominant—Fresnay. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:14 1-5.

AIR LINE	(Hightshoe)	112	6	5	5½	8	8	8	5.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIMNEY TOP, $30.10, $12.20, $5.40; BIJURO, $8.50, $5.60; SANDY BILL, $4.00.

CHIMNEY TOP, in good form, followed pace to the middle of turn, ran into lead and drew away easily at end. BIJURO was outrun for half a mile, came with a rush and was second in last stride. SANDY BILL opened a wide gap early, but quit badly. COULEEDAM came from far back and should be hard to beat in a longer race. QUICKLY never a serious factor.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800 added. The Matecumbe Handicap. For all ages. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:51. Off at 3:55. Winner, Mrs. E. B. Carpenter's b. c. (3), by Jock—Bit o' Regret. Trained by E. B. Carpenter. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:07.

RECOVERY	(J. Renick)	106	3	6	7°	8	8	8	31.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EMPTY BOTTLE, $20.50, $6.70, $4.70; GRAND DUKE, $5.50, $4.10; SILVERETTE, $4.40.

EMPTY BOTTLE, showing excellent speed, ran into lead soon after the start, saved ground and held on well. GRAND DUKE was a bit sluggish in early part, closed fast under the whip. SILVERETTE, outpaced to the turn, finished gamely on the outside. WHA HAE was unable to get to the front and tired. LADY HIGLOSS had speed for half a mile then quit. COLUMBIANA is about ready to win a race over a longer route.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:22. Off at 4:23. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's br. f. (3), by Bull Dog—Cristar. Trained by B. S. Michell. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:40 1-5.

CRYSTAL PRINCE	(Perna)	114	2	4	6	6	6	6	6	3.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALBANIA, $11.60, $6.50, $3.80; HOSE, $9.00, $3.80; DEDUCE, $3.00.

ALBANIA was allowed to gallop along back of the fast early pace, began to close ground in final quarter mile and caught HOSE inside the sixteenth pole and won going away. HOSE was used up racing DEDUCE into defeat and tired right at end. DEDUCE had more early speed than usual and tired badly. PANALONG closed a big gap. CRYSTAL PRINCE never a factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:47. Off at 4:48. Winner, Mrs. C. P. Lindner's ch. g. (6), by Single Foot—Enchantment II. Trained by C. P. Lindner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:42 2-5.

BUSBY	(I. Hanford)	112	2	3	4°	4°	4½	5	5	4.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LONE HAND, $5.80, $4.10, $2.30; SIR ROSE, $6.50, $2.70; GUNWALE, $2.40.

LONE HAND, going wide and rated off the pace until well around the lower turn, disposed of SIR ROSE after a mild drive and won as his rider pleased. SIR ROSE, hustled to the front the first furlong, saved ground thereafter but was not equal to the winner when challenged. GUNWALE, a forward factor, saved ground the entire trip and just lasted long enough to stall off BOUNDING COUNT'S challenge.

EIGHTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:19½. Winner, Mrs. J. McGraw's blk. f. (3), by Sun Edwin—Hurry Home. Trained by J. McGraw. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:15 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLAKEEN, $19.80, $8.80, $8.70; TRUJILLO, $4.60, $3.90; GAY MINETTA, $7.60.

BLAKEEN, showing marked improvement, came through on inside entering stretch and won going away. TRUJILLO broke slow, worked his way up and finished fast. GAY MINETTA moved up gamely around turn, but stopped suddenly. TEMPTING WITCH had plenty of speed but tired as if short. BROTHER NEWT had no mishap.

Time Out!

By Chet Smith

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al:

Clocker Mike really had me on the run yesterday. Did you check his winners? I would have had Chimney Top, if I had any nerve. Anyway, the comment on the $30.10 winner told the story and I hope somebody had the courage to hop aboard. Members of one of Washington's citizen associations spent considerable time last night discussing the empty bottle situation, deploring the number of empty bottles being left about the streets where children could pick them up. I hope those members and those who read the story, took the hunch and bet a bunch. Empty Bottle, of course, won the fifth race and paid a $20.50 mutuel. I guess every fellow with a wife named Ethel played Ethel's Choice, which probably accounts for that $3.80 mutuel. And those busy with their Christmas shopping might have staggered into Chimney Top as an Xmas hunch. Those who played the daily double were fortunate. A parlay on the two horses would have brought less than $20 while the "double" produced a pay-off of $130.80. Looks as if somebody found out something after the twin-wager windows closed for the day. If I don't get more dimes, I'll have to turn my next pay check into the fund. BILL.

First race—Marinella ran some promising races in Maryland, but could not get out of the maiden ranks. This looks like a spot suitable for graduation purses and I'm going to string along. Ravenna has worked well, according to Clocker Mike's report, and is dangerous. Star Loom appears headed for a money position.

Second race—Dixie Princess, winner of a sprint opening day, seems to be a mighty fit miss. She has had plenty of tough luck in her racing this year and may have struck her real stride. Epitaph was third last out and is dangerous. Zevanaid to take care of the others.

Third race—Miney Myerson will like the soft track and appears favored by the light weight assignment of only 105 pounds. Count Rae went sour in Maryland, but may have benefited from the rest. Great Haste for the show money.

Fourth race—Uneasy, from the Denemark barn, seems headed for a set of brackets in this field, despite the fact that he must tote 116 pounds. Conservative and Say When to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Knight's Fancy, another Denemark entry, gets a shift in the weights that may bring a victory. This one carries 105 pounds to the 116-pound assignment for Strategist II, a recent winner. Albuquerque has plenty of speed and is dangerous.

Sixth race—Langorous, lightly weighted and with Anderson to do the riding, seems headed for the chief money in this company. The Medway Stable entry of Claimant and Peaceful looms as the outfit to beat. Galloping should not be far out of it.

Seventh race—Just Buck is something of an outsider in this field, but I'm going to try to make him score. Mike said over the wire that this one had a rough trip last out, while being forced to face very wide. Improved luck may bring us a win at good odds. Top High is favored by the soft track. Pay Rack can better that last.

Eighth race—Good Dame ran well in her first sprint at Tropical. Needs only slight improvement to lead these to the wire. Little Dinah for the place and Millimeter to show.

Best bet—Uneasy.

Rye at $1.09⅞ Sets Top Price In Seven Years

Estimates Forecast Poor Crop for Next Year; Wheat Higher.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—Sensational bulges in quotations on rye did much to lift wheat values late today to more than 2 cents above earlier low levels. Rye at Winnipeg soared 8 cents a bushel, the extreme limit allowed in any 24-hour period. Simultaneously the Winnipeg wheat market reached new price peaks for the year. An unofficial report said that the United States rye crop next year would be one of the poorest on record.

May rye in Chicago rallied up to $1.09⅞ today, a gain of 29 cents since the beginning of November, with all rye futures here outdoing top price records since 1929. Wheat was unchanged to ⅝ up, December, 134¼@134⅝; May, 129⅝@129¾; July, 117¼@117½, corn ⅜ off to ⅝ up, December, 107⅞@108; May, new, 104¼@104⅝; July, new, 100⅞@101, and oats at ¼ decline to ⅜ advance. The provisions outcome was unchanged to 10 cents dearer.

Stock Market Leaders Yield In Slower Pace of Trading

Major Steel Issues Hold Firm, Supported by Increased Mill Activity; Bonds Irregular; Dollar Lower.

By Frederick Gardner.
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 16.—Stocks trudged over a rocky terrain in today's market and ended with more bruises than otherwise. A few oils, steels, rails, utilities and specialties managed to complete the journey with net gains. Many recent leaders, however, yielded fractions to a point or more.

Analysts attributed the jumbled movements partly to year-end adjustments, but tax selling gave no indications of being urgent. Some traders displayed an inclination to stand aside and see what Congress may do about further regulation of industry, working hours and taxes.

The list started at a fast pace, but activity soon slowed and there was little pick-up until the final half-hour when several earlier depressed issues acted better.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point at 70.7. Transfers aggregated 1,945,000 shares compared with 2,483,300 in the preceding session.

Major steel issues held their own. The weekly survey of Iron Age pointed out that, while the present high operating rate can be expected to continue for several weeks, shortages of coke, pig iron and raw steel may stem the expanding trend later.

Favored utilities benefitted partly from another jump in electric power production to a new record peak. Consolidated oil, up ⅜ at 15¼, was the liveliest actor of the session. Directors of the company met after the close and it was thought news might be released tomorrow.

Motors marked time as reports of delayed deliveries, due to strikes recently in parts plants, were heard. Export copper was lifted to a new top since 1930, but the mines idled.

Commodities Climb.

A number of commodities were again in a soaring mood. Wool tops, rubber and raw hide futures established new highs for the recovery. Rye at Chicago was up 2 cents a bushel at $1.11½, the best level since 1929. Corn, however, was ⅜ off to up as much and wheat was unchanged to ahead ⅝. Cotton was about a stand-off.

The large number of low-priced shares which for the past week or so have swarmed over the ticker tape were generally in the inactive column. Only three issues selling under $10 a share were among the 20 heaviest traded of the day.

Conspicuous gainers included Electric Power & Light at 25, Yellow Truck 21¼, Vanadium 29, Commercial Solvents 18⅛, International Hydro-Electric 10. Pure Oil 19⅛, Westinghouse Airbrake 47⅛, Owens-Illinois 160, Superior Steel 40⅛, U. S. Steel 78⅜ and Union Pacific 132. Western Union came back for a gain of ⅞ after dragging most of the day.

Among losers were Newport Industries, off 1¼ at 34, after an early decline of nearly 4 points; Southern Pacific 42¼, N. Y. Central 43⅜, Westinghouse 148, General Motors 69½, American Telephone 95¾, J. I. Case 150, U. S. Rubber 46, Douglas Aircraft 72⅛, Goodrich 34, Texas Corp. 49¾ and Timken Roller 73.

Active Bonds Lower.

Selective dealing ruffled the surface of the bond market today with lower prices meted out to most of the active issues. The downward movement was by no means all inclusive, however, as a substantial number of bonds scored gains. Activity was slightly less pronounced than on Tuesday, $16,095,000, face value, changing hands, against $17,248,00 for all issues the day before.

Most low and medium priced railroad liens back-tracked a bit, but there were some notable exceptions to the movement. New Haven 4s of 1954 added 3 at 30½, the refunding 4½s of 1967 gained 2⅜ to 38⅝ and the 4s of 1955 were up 2½ at 30. Frisco bonds also displayed buoyancy, particularly the "A" 4s of 1950, up 2¾ at 32¾, and the "B" 5s certificates of 1950, up 2⅛ at 29½. Lehigh Valley, Gulf Lines, Denver & Rio Grande and Missouri Pacific loans were among those losing ground.

Utilities lowered a bit. International Telephone 5s, Pacific Gas 3¾s and American Water Works 6s all gave up fractions. International Hydro-Electric 6s moved against the trend for a 1-point gain.

Convertible obligations reacted rather sharply as bids were withdrawn in view of the indecision shown by stocks. Among widest losers were Central Foundry 6s, American Type Founders 5s and International Cement 4s.

U. S. Governments slipped lower in light trading, losses being held to 5-32ds of a point or less.

In the foreign quarter Uruguayan bonds again stood out. The 6s of 1960 moved up 4 points to 70 and the 6s of 1964 gained 4¼ to 70¼. Brazilian and Buenos Aires loans also made progress. Polish 8s encountered opposition and dropped 4¾ to 50.

The Associated Press averages moved generally downward, the 20 rails losing .1 of a point to 97.6 and the 10 utilities .3 of a point to 102.2. The 10 low yields also declined a little, but the 10 foreigns added .2 of a point at 71.7.

Cash Bull Market, Says N. Y. Exchange

"This is eminently a cash market, and as such is relatively devoid of that major characteristic of speculative inflation, the use of borrowed money," says the December bulletin of the New York Stock Exchange. It points out that during the past two years the value of stocks listed on the exchange has approximately doubled, a more rapid advance than in the bull market ended in 1929. At the same time, brokers' loans in the last two years have risen but slightly, while in the market of the twenties they kept pace with the advance in stocks.

Am. Tel. Advances Debenture Payments

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Holders of the $149,000,000 of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. debentures due in 1965, recently called for redemption on February 1, can have their money for the asking after December 18, it was announced today.

Directors of the company authorized the advance payment, in a statement which revealed that taking advantage of the offer would still allow holders to receive their interest to February 1 and the 10 per cent premium at which the loan was called.

France Asks Gold For National Defense

Paris, Dec. 16 (AP).—The French government, announcing its new issue of "baby" bonds, appealed to private hoarders today to turn in their gold as a loan to help meet mounting national defense costs.

At the same time Minister of Finance Vincent Auriol announced all restrictions on the movement of capital put in force at the time of devaluation of the franc September 26 had been revoked. The French monetary policy, he asserted, will henceforth be one of "complete liberty," with no further restrictions on the purchase of foreign currency.

$150,000,000 Cash Dividends In the Mails

First Instalment of Huge Year-end Payments Is on Its Way.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—Postmen throughout the Nation carried today checks representing the $150,000,000 advance guard of one of the greatest seven-day dividend distributions in the history of American industry. Within the week, in the form of extra, increased and regular dividend checks about $530,000,000 will find its way through the mails to many thousands of shareholders.

That represents about one-half of the near-billion dollar year-end disbursement by corporations unloosing the purse strings as a result of steadily increased earnings and Federal taxation on undistributed corporate profits.

Today's mail deliveries included $28,000,000 Chesapeake & Ohio Railway payment, $22,000,000 divided by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., and $23,000,000 from the Chrysler Corporation.

Checks totalling $25,000,000 from Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, $19,000,000 from Sandard Oil of Indiana, and $10,000,000 from the Sun Oil Co. were in the mail today with $11,727,000 from the J. C. Penney Co.

Extra Dividends.

Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, $1.25 on the common.
Detroit Edison Co., $1.

Increased Dividends.

Parke, Davis & Co., 60 cents on the common compared with 40 cents in September.

Initial Dividend.

Dividend Resumed.

Butte Copper and Zinc Co., 5 cents on the common, the first dividend since 50 cents in 1929.

Wage Raises and Bonuses.

First National Bank of New York, 10 per cent of annual salaries.

Philadelphia Storage Battery Co., $400,000 to 11,000 employes.

General Time Instrument Co. (Westclox division), $120,000 for 3,000 employes.

Local Bonus and Dividend.

The District Lawyers and Washington Title Insurance Companies have granted a bonus of one-half month's salary to all persons in their employ for one year or more, with a proportionate payment to those employed less than one year. This affects over 100 persons. A special dividend was also declared.

October Newsprint Sets 7-Year Record

Boston, Mass., Dec. 16.—One of the best indices of improving conditions is the growing size of daily newspapers, because the size of the paper is largely dependent upon the amount of advertising. With the exception of 1929, October newsprint consumption was the largest for any October on record.

Curb Prices Yield; Turnover Declines

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Losses of fractions to a point or so were shaved from most active stocks in the Curb market today. Newmont Mining was a particularly weak spot, losing 3¼ to 135. Creole Petroleum, American Gas & Electric and Montgomery Ward also were off.

Specialty stocks bobbed about with gains outnumbering losses. Draper Corp. and Carnation each added several points. Todd Shipyards gained 2 to 50. Scattered gains, most of which were major fractions, were registered by Electric Bond & Share, Sherwin-Williams, Atlantic Coast Lines and International Petroleum. Transactions totaled 670,000 shares against 846,000 on Tuesday.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 16 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—Scattered sales were closed on various types of domestic wools at strong prices in the Boston market today.

Combing ¼ blood Ohio fleeces brought 48@49 cents in the grease, and the same range of prices was realized on combing ⅜ blood Ohio wools. Staple combing ½ blood Ohio wools sold at 43@45 cents.

The Offering Prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of these Bonds.

THE COMPANY The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, 83.42% of the voting securities of which are owned by American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is one of the associated companies comprising the Bell System. The Company, incorporated in California in 1906, is engaged directly and through subsidiaries, the largest of which is Southern California Telephone Company, in the telephone business in California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and the northern portion of Idaho. The properties of the Company and its subsidiaries consist principally of telephone instruments and facilities for their inter-connection, the latter consisting chiefly of central office switching equipment and connecting lines. The Company and its subsidiaries are subject to regulation by the Federal Communications Commission and by certain state authorities, within their respective jurisdictions. The Federal Communications Commission is presently engaged in an investigation of the relationships between American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its subsidiaries.

Common Capital Stock—par value $100 per share	180,500,000.00

PURPOSE OF ISSUE The net proceeds from the sale of the Bonds, after deducting the estimated expenses of the Company in connection with such sale, are expected to approximate $25,615,000, exclusive of accrued interest. $24,242,000 of such net proceeds are to be used for the payment at maturity on January 2, 1937, of the principal of the Company's First Mortgage and Collateral Trust Five Per Cent Bonds, which are now outstanding in that amount, and the balance, approximately $1,373,000, is to be used for general corporate purposes.

EARNINGS The following figures are taken from the Income Statements of the Company in the Offering Prospectus. The Offering Prospectus also contains Consolidated Income Statements.

1933	$51,686,487.34	$18,558,566.17	$4,041,075.42	$14,517,490.75

*Six months ended June 30.
†Include $66,000 for 1934, $409,100 for 1935, and $235,900 for the six months ended June 30, 1936 which the Company estimates would be refundable, in whole or in part, to telephone subscribers in the State of Oregon in the event of an adverse decision in a pending rate case.
‡Includes Dividend Income in the amounts of $7,883,740.33 for 1933, $7,670,170.80 for 1934, $7,693,685.80 for 1935, and $3,763,988.00 for the six months ended June 30, 1936. Dividends received from subsidiaries were not currently earned by them as a whole by approximately $459,000 in 1933 and $344,000 in 1934.

SERIES C BONDS The Series C Bonds will be issued under the Company's Refunding Mortgage, as amended and supplemented, and, in the opinion of counsel for the Company, will be secured, pari passu with the Company's Refunding Mortgage 3¼% Bonds, Series B, by a lien on substantially all real estate, buildings and telephone plant (except motor vehicles) now owned by the Company in California, Idaho, Oregon and Washington and appertaining to or useful in the transaction of its business in those States. The lien of the Refunding Mortgage is subject to prior tax and assessment liens and to the lien of the Mortgage or Deed of Trust dated January 2, 1907, securing the Company's First Mortgage and Collateral Trust Five Per Cent Bonds, due January 2, 1937. The Refunding Mortgage is also a lien on the Company's rights as pledgor of the stock deposited by it with the Trustee under said Mortgage or Deed of Trust. Stock so deposited includes all the capital stock of Southern California Telephone Company. Upon the satisfaction and discharge of said Mortgage or Deed of Trust, all stock then deposited thereunder is required to be deposited under the Refunding Mortgage.

Series C Bonds are limited to the amount of $25,000,000 now authorized. The Refunding Mortgage, as amended and supplemented, permits the issuance of additional bonds of other series, which would rank pari passu with the Series B and Series C Bonds. The Refunding Mortgage permits the Company, in certain instances, to dispose of property covered by the Mortgage without a release from or notice to the Trustee, and also provides for releases and substitutions of such property. No notice is required to be given to bondholders in connection with any such disposal, release or substitution.

There is to be paid to a sinking fund agent, to be used as a sinking fund in purchasing Series C Bonds, but only if obtainable at not exceeding their principal amount and accrued interest, the sum of $125,000 on June 1, 1937, and semi-annually thereafter; provided, however, that any unexpended balance in the fund on any semi-annual payment date is to be credited on account of the payment due on that date.

UNDERWRITING Subject to certain terms and conditions, the Underwriters named below have severally agreed to purchase these Bonds from the Company at 103%, or a total of $25,750,000, plus accrued interest. Such Bonds are to be offered to the public at 105%, or a total of $26,250,000, plus accrued interest. The underwriting discounts are 2%, or a total of $500,000.

Price 105% and Accrued Interest

The Underwriters named below have agreed to purchase these Bonds on the terms and conditions set forth in the Purchase Agreement, including the approval of legal matters by Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, and by Messrs. Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, counsel for the Company. It is expected that delivery of Bonds in temporary form will be made at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on or about December 21, 1936, against payment therefor in New York funds.

The Underwriters have authorized the purchase and sale, in the open market or otherwise, of Series C Bonds for their several accounts, either for long or short account, within the limits and during the period set forth in certain agreements referred to in the Offering Prospectus.

Further information, particularly financial statements, is contained in the Registration Statement on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and in the Offering Prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable from the undersigned.

Refunding Mortgage 3¼ Per Cent Bonds Priced at 105 Per Cent.

An issue of $25,000,000 Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. refunding mortgage 3¼ per cent bonds, series C, is being offered today by a group of investment banking houses headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., and including Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Kidder, Peabody & Co., Lee Higginson Corporation, The First Boston Corporation, Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., Edward B. Smith & Co., Blyth & Co., Inc., Dean Witter & Co. and Harris, Hall & Co., Inc.

The bonds are dated December 1 this year, are due December 1, 1966, and are priced at 105 per cent and interest.

The net proceeds, excluding interest, are expected to approximate $25,615,000, of which $24,242,000 are to be used for the payment at maturity on January 2 of the company's outstanding first mortgage and collateral trust 5 per cent bonds. The balance is to be used for general corporate purposes.

The bonds are redeemable at the option of the company, in whole or in part, upon 60 days' notice, on any interest payment date, at the following prices with accrued interest: to June 1, 1941, 108½; thereafter to June 1, 1946, 107½; thereafter to June 1, 1951, 106½; thereafter to June 1, 1956, 105; thereafter to June 1, 1962, 103½, and thereafter, 100 per cent.

The company, 83.42 per cent of whose voting securities are owned by American Telephone and Telegraph Co., is a unit of the Bell system, and is engaged directly and through subsidiaries, the largest of which is the Southern California Telephone Co., in the telephone business in California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and the northern portion of Idaho. Net income for the first six months of this year was $8,152,24. For 1935 net income was $16,025,380.

Brawl Bullet Clew in Slaying Of Md. Farmer

Fired From Reed's Pistol, W. Va. Officers Declare Kirby Told Them.

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 16.—A bullet fired into a wall during a rooming house brawl gave State troopers a clue today which they said brought a direct connection between fugitive William B. Reed and the killing of Elwood Matthews near Washington, D. C.

Lieut. J. H. Fillinger said 20-year-old Joseph Kirby told him the bullet was fired during a fight in a Charleston house the night of December 3, and that the gun was wielded by Reed.

Fillinger and two Maryland officers identified the bullet as from the same gun which killed Matthews, 65-year-old Silver Spring, Md., farmer, three weeks ago.

Kirby has been in jail here since December 6. Reed and Lawrence Gingell, 22, his companions, are being hunted in Maryland and officers said they expected arrests soon.

(At Rockville, Md., it was learned Reed had visited the home of his father near Four Corners within the past 60 hours. Montgomery County officers hope to arrest both him and Gingell soon.)

Kirby Confesses.

Fillinger previously announced Kirby admitted participating in the killing of Matthews, partly to avenge a jail term imposed on a brother of one of the assailants and partly for robbery. Matthews' body was found yesterday.

Troopers said their inquiry also made them believe more strongly the trio was connected with the death of W. Earl Dollman, 32-year-old Charleston salesman who was beaten to death and left in his flaming car Thanksgiving Day.

Police still are seeking the weapon which killed the Maryland farmer, believing it was thrown away somewhere in Mason or Putnam Counties. They said they want to fit the butt to head wounds found on both Matthews and Dollman.

Robbery Link Lacking.

A group of Virginia officers investigating the attempted robbery of the Bank of Boonmill at Boonmill, Va., spent the day making ballistics tests in the State police bureau of criminal identification.

Officers said the tests so far had shown no definite connection between the trio and the attempted bank holdup. Troopers previously said the license on a car burned near Harrisonburg, Va., was the same as that on a car used in the Boonmill attempt.

Fillinger said Kirby admitted knowledge of the car burning but not the attack on the bank.

Kirby was wounded while resisting arrest near Montgomery after being sought for the kidnaping and robbery of P. P. Wilson, Charleston banker. Fillinger said he also confessed aiding in other robberies in Maryland and West Virginia.

WMAL to Carry Nanking Broadcast

Dr. H. H. Kung, minister of finance and acting executive head of the Chinese Nationalist government, will be heard today from 10:45 until 11 a. m. over WMAL in a special broadcast over the National Broadcasting Co. blue network. He will speak on the present crisis in China arising from the kidnaping of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek.

Dr. Kung is a grandson of Confucius, famous sage of China, 75 generations removed. His broadcast will be the first in which American audiences will hear an outstanding political leader of China.

Dr. Sze, China's Ambassador to the United States, will listen to the broadcast in the N. B. C. studios in the National Press Building. The broadcast will go by short wave from Nanking across the Pacific to Point Reyes, Calif., where it will be relayed to the N. B. C. network.

Baker Estate Fraud Suspect Posts Bond

Pittsburgh, Dec. 16 (AP).—Lewis C. Walkinshaw, one of 28 persons indicted in connection with an alleged mail fraud scheme based on a "Jacob Baker" estate, posted bond today for trial.

Walkinshaw, a Greensburg attorney, was the first of the group of defendants to appear in the clerk's office of Federal court. He posted $2,500.

Court clerks prepared 27 bench warrants for the other defendants, but Federal authorities said they would "wait a little while" before serving them.

The indictments charged promoters of the alleged scheme collected more than $3,000,000 from scores of persons who believed they were prospective heirs.

Venezuela's President Seeks Oil Strike End

Maracaibo, Venezuela, Dec. 16 (AP).—Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras, President of Venezuela, today asked the parties in the 2-day-old oil strike to endeavor to reach a settlement by Saturday, a national holiday.

There were no signs of an approaching settlement, however. Strikers walked out last Monday because the companies did not comply with a long list of demands submitted two weeks earlier.

The situation remained orderly. Local gasoline stocks were estimated to be sufficient to last another ten days.

Patman, Colmer Draft Mail Order Tax Bill

New Orleans, Dec. 16 (AP).—Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, and William M. Colmer (Democrat), Mississippi, today began drafting a Congressional bill to compel mail order houses, now exempt from State sales taxation, to pay the tax in States which have enacted such a levy.

The Representatives said that in Louisiana and Mississippi where sales taxes are levied, the States have no authority to collect from out-of-State concerns which ship in goods.

Today Will Mark 33d Anniversary Of Wright Flight

On the eve of the thirty-third anniversary of the Wright brothers' first airplane flights at Kitty Hawk, N. C., Air Commerce Director Eugene Vidal predicted yesterday that the next three decades would see "even more breath-taking" advances in air transportation.

Preparing to observe today as "National Aviation Day," in observance of the Wrights' accomplishment, Vidal praised developments which have made transpacific air service possible and forecast that airliners would soon be crossing the Atlantic.

Experiments with high-speed sub-stratosphere flying and "blind" take-offs and landings may be expected to produce important developments in flight, Vidal said. He said an increase in private ownership of airplanes was "another inevitable advance."

Woman Jurors Urged by Club In Chevy Chase

Group Calls on Assembly for Early Passage of Jobs Insurance.

Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday placed themselves on record as favoring jury service for women—a privilege which women of Maryland do not have at present. Members also voted to urge the passage of an unemployment insurance law at the forthcoming session of the Maryland Legislature that will adequately meet the provisions of the Federal law.

Another resolution was adopted indorsing the program for the alleviation of idleness and overcrowding of penal and correctional institutions of Maryland, as outlined by the Prison Industries Reorganization Commission. The resolution adds the club will lend active support in the procuring of proper legislation and sufficient funds to insure the carrying out of these recommendations to the end that a proper rehabilitative program may be put in operation within lines suggested by both Federal and State commissions.

Of interest in the District was a fourth resolution indorsing efforts of Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, to obtain equitable appropriations for the District of Columbia and pledging support to have a member of the House District Committee sit with the Appropriations Committee considering the problem.

Sportsmen to Ask Game Law Reform

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 16 (AP).—The Maryland sportsmen's legislative committee will ask the 1937 General Assembly to give the State Conservation Commission power to open or close the fish and game seasons in accordance with the available supply of fish and game.

The proposal was adopted by the committee following a dinner meeting here last night. It will be drafted and presented to the Legislature, which meets in January.

That proposal also includes changing of the deer season in Garrett and Allegany Counties to December 1 to December 5, inclusive, and a change in the dates of the upland game seasons in those counties to November 1 to November 30, inclusive.

Frisco Pier Razed In $750,000 Fire

San Francisco, Dec. 16 (AP).—A spectacular fire which consumed nearly the entire Panama-Pacific Steamship Co. wharf here was brought under control after a two-hour fight tonight. Fire officials estimated damage at $750,000.

The blaze, origin of which remained undetermined, swept quickly through the old wood structure and shot flames into the sky, attracting thousands.

Two firemen were injured.

Old Exports Trounce Mountaineers by 47-25

Special Dispatch to The Post

Petersburg, W. Va., Dec. 16.—The Old Exports defeated the Petersburg Mountaineers in an Interstate Basketball League contest here, 47-25, the winner's second victory in three starts.

Eddie Diehl, former Allegany High star, came into the game for the Exports in the third period, but was high scorer with 18 points. Delbert Proudfoot was runner-up with 11 Old Exports markers. Riggleman, Petersburg forward, registered 12 points on 6 field goals.

Sheriff Pushes Inquiry In Reported Flogging

Southport, N. C., Dec. 16 (AP).—Sheriff J. A. Russ, of Brunswick County, said late today he was pressing his investigation of activities of a band of "praying floggers," reported to have lashed at least two men in the Waccamaw River region of Brunswick and Columbus counties, with an admonition to the victims to "mend their ways."

Other residents of the community, the sheriff said he was told, have received letters containing the same warning. The floggers were said to kneel in prayer after whipping their victims.

British Steamer Halted By German Battleship

Gibraltar, Dec. 16 (AP).—The British steamer City of Oxford reported on arrival here today that she had been asked by the German pocket battleship Deutschland to give her origin and destination off the Portuguese coast.

Capt. A. Hilditch, master of the steamer, which was proceeding from Liverpool with general cargo, said he gave the information and continued toward Gibraltar unmolested.

Garey-Jones Clashes Mark Graft Hearing

Md. Job Commissioner and Police Head Wrangle at Trial of Policemen.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 16.—In an atmosphere supercharged by verbal clashes between two State Department heads the last of the hearings on alleged extortion by four State policemen neared an end today.

Outbreaks between Harry C. Jones, State employment commissioner, and Maj. Enoch B. Garey, State police superintendent, dominated the hearing and it was adjourned until tomorrow with little actual evidence in the record.

The charges against Sergt. A. E. Markley were the subject of today's hearing. He and three other State officers were suspended by Garey on charges of accepting gratuities in violation of the State merit system regulations.

Major Garey 'Delighted.'

Commissioner Jones called the hearings to determine whether the men are guilty of the charges and whether Maj. Garey was justified in suspending them. If he finds them guilty, the suspensions will stand. If he finds the charges are not substantiated, he will order the men reinstated with back pay.

At the beginning of today's hearing, Jones said that in order "to get the facts into the record," he planned to allow whatever latitude in testimony was necessary.

"I am perfectly delighted in this change in policy," Maj. Garey said. "There have been times in other hearings here when the very strictest rules of evidence were applied."

Jones then accused Maj. Garey of evading answers to questions. The state police head retorted he had never been evasive and asserted there had been "some cunning and clever questions that a clean man could not answer by yes or no."

The employment commissioner then threatened measures to require Garey to answer "yes" or "no" to the questions asked him.

Florida Ship Canal Praised at Hearing

By the Associated Press.

The case for the proposed $162,000,000 Florida ship canal was presented to the Army Board of Engineers yesterday as witness after witness testified to advantages they said would come from such a Gulf-Atlantic waterway.

Closing the first day of a public hearing on a special board report that the canal was economically feasible, Brig. Gen. George B. Pillsbury, presiding, announced opponents would be heard today.

The canal was begun in 1935 as a relief project, but the 1936 Congress declined to appropriate additional funds.

Among those testifying were H. H. Buckman, engineering counsel for the Florida Ship Canal Authority; Col. Gilbert A. Youngberg, retired, and Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former Army Chief of Staff; Brig. Gen. Sumter Lowry, retired; Senators Claude Pepper and Charles O. Andrews, and Representatives R. A. Green, Millard F. Caldwell and Joe Hendricks.

Glass Due to Back Stabilization Pact

By the Associated Press.

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, was said in informed quarters yesterday to have assured Secretary Morgenthau that he would support the Administration move to extend the two-billion dollar stabilization fund.

But the Virginian, whose word on monetary matters carries great weight in Congress, was said to have urged reconsideration of the Treasury plan to ask for extension beyond January 30 of the President's power to devalue the dollar further.

It was understood Glass contended further extension of the authority to change the gold content of the dollar would create more uncertainty in the business world.

Administration officials were cheered by word Glass will not oppose extending the stabilization fund, which they consider essential to the success of the recent understanding with Great Britain and France, under which the three powers seek to prevent damaging fluctuations in international currencies.

American Fruit Barred As Cargo Nears France

Paris, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Virtually all imports of American fruit were halted today when Minister of Agriculture George Monnet refused to grant a license to importers of Christmas shipments now nearing the coast on the freighter Tulsa from Jacksonville, Fla. Shippers immediately ordered the freighter into London. The cargo included 500 tons of Florida oranges.

The importers appealed to the United States Embassy and submitted to the agriculture ministry detailed figures showing that while French imports of American fruits were drastically reduced this year, American imports of French wines, champagne and cognac were virtually trebled. They ask the United States Embassy to urge America to restrict her imports of French liquors unless fruits are allowed corresponding customs advantages.

Argentine Wheat Crop Shows 6.8 Per Cent Gain

Buenos Aires, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—The Ministry of Agriculture tonight estimated the 1936-37 Argentine wheat crop at 6,800,000 metric tons (249,854,666 American bushels).

Linseed, 75,357,236 bushels; oats, 56,492,875 bushels; barley, 31,231,833 bushels; rye, 8,857,767 bushels, and birdseed, 30,000 tons.

These figures showed a general increase of 6.8 per cent over the crops for the preceding year.

Bird Pact Ratified.

Mexico City, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—The foreign office tonight announced ratification of the Mexico-United States migratory bird treaty signed in this city last summer by Foreign Minister Eduardo Hay, and United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels.

Own Merit System Favored in County

A legislative program containing provision for hiring all county employes on a merit basis and for refunding not more than 50 per cent of county bonds coming due within the next two years was adopted last night by the Kensington Chamber of Commerce for submission to the Maryland General Assembly when it convenes next month.

The program also calls for the abolishment of the Liquor Control Board, the abolishment of the office of supervisor of school property and the renaming of all streets in the suburban section of the county. It was pointed out that at the present time there are 18 Maple avenues in the area.

As an economy measure, the organization went on record as favoring the purchase of voting machines for use in the area during the 1938 State election.

Jury in Kansas City Calls Poll Officers

Kansas City, Dec. 16 (AP).—Subpenas for election officials of 30 Kansas City precincts were issued tonight for their appearance before a Federal grand jury investigating alleged irregularities in the November general election here.

U. S. District Attorney Maurice M. Milligan, who announced the subpenas, said the grand jurors probably will check ballots and other records from the 30 precincts before they begin taking testimony in their investigaion, ordered by Judge Albert L. Reeves.

Whisky 'Floor' Tax Is Upheld For Maryland

3-Juddge Federal Court's Ruling May Not Free State Relief Fund.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 16.—A three-judge Federal Court upheld today the constitutionality of the State's 5-cent a gallon "floor" tax on whisky, the revenue from which is dedicated to relief purposes.

State relief payments derived from the tax funds had been held up pending disposition of the case. The decision handed down today did not mean, however, that payments will be resumed immediately.

Comptroller W. S. Gordy could not be reached for a statement, but the office of the attorney general said it was likely relief funds would be withheld pending a possible appeal from the decision.

Decision Unanimous.

United States District Judge William C. Coleman signed the opinion upholding the constitutionality of the tax on each gallon of spirits distilled in the State for beverage purposes. Judges Morris A. Soper and W. Calvin Chestnut concurred.

The Old Tyme Distillers, Inc., a New Jersey firm operating a distillery in Carroll County, attacked the validity of the tax in a suit filed several weeks ago.

The suit asked an injunction restraining the State comptroller from collecting the tax and requested the court to declare the levy unconstitutional.

Attorneys for the distillery contended the law violated the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution and also the fourteenth amendment in that it was excessive in relation to the cost of producing whisky and that it levied taxes for beverage purposes on a product that might, without the producers' knowledge, be sold industrially. The court disagreed with all three contentions.

Refund Averted.

Gordy had announced after a hearing on the case that the distribution of relief funds to Baltimore City and the counties would be held up pending the court's action.

He said half a million dollars had been distributed by the end of September and he had planned to distribute $250,000 more. The suit caused the possibility of a refund of the taxes collected, so the comptroller held up relief payments.

To complete the procedure of the case, the State must prepare a decree to be signed by the three judges. After that, an appeal may be noted within the following three months.

4-Party Catalonia Cabinet Planned

Barcelona, Spain, Dec. 16 (AP).—Party leaders tonight agreed on a four-party cabinet for the autonomous Catalonian state, apparently ending the crisis caused by the resignation two days ago of Premier Jose Tarradellas and his cabinet.

Well-informed political sources said Tarradellas would retain the premiership and in addition take the finance portfolio.

Reports in political circles indicated the C. N. T., or National Confederation of Labor, would have four posts in the new cabinet; the U. G. T., or Socialist Communists, three; Republican Leftists, three, and the Union de Rabassaires, or Tenant Farmers Party, one. The "Trotzky Communists," it was reported, would not be represented.

(Premier Tarradellas and his cabinet earlier resigned because Tarradellas said they could not control Anarchist and extreme labor factions.)

Wynekoop Pardon Plea To Be Bitterly Opposed

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Attorney Paul E. Thurlow said today he would appear before the State board of pardons in an attempt to free Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, 64, who has spent 33 months of a 25-year sentence for the murder of her daughter-in-law.

Thurlow said his plea before the pardons board would be that new evidence had been uncovered. Dr. Wynekoop was convicted of murdering Rheta Wynekoop, estranged wife of Dr. Wynekoop's son, Earle. Wilbert F. Crowley, first assistant State's attorney, said his office would "bitterly oppose" any pardon petition.

100 Marriage Brokers Report Business Boom

New York, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Marriage brokers, gathering tonight for their annual convention, reported increased business during 1936, approved make-up and tinted toenails for women who want to catch and hold men, and reiterated their assertion of previous years that the female of the species is smarter and quicker than the male.

The convention will run through Thursday and Friday with more than 100 match-makers attending.

Justice Faces Charge Of Drunken Driving

Shepherdstown, W. V., Dec. 16.—Charges against Justice of the Peace J. D. Walker, of Charles Town, alleging operation of an automobile while intoxicated, will go to the January grand jury of Jefferson County in Charles Town as a result of action by Justice I. C. E. Jones here yesterday.

Justice Jones said he heard the case, on motion of Prosecuting Attorney John T. Porterfield, of Jefferson County, as a preliminary hearing rather than as a trial. A State trooper and a constable tesified that Justice Walker drove his car from Charles Town on the Berryville pike while intoxicated.

Two Highway Victims Buried in Danville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Dec. 16.—Two funerals were held on the same street this afternoon for Dorsey Hughes Jordan, 39, and Samuel Jones, 34, who were struck and killed on the South Boston road by an automobile driven by Dallas Taylor, airport mechanic. The victims were neighbors and were walking along the highway three miles from the city when struck. Dallas admitted striking the two men. He is under $2,000 bond to appear before Magistrate Charles R. Warren Friday morning for a preliminary hearing on manslaughter charges.

Bursting Beer Coils Halt Spread of Fire

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Dec. 16.—Firemen credited beer that flooded the flor of the West Point taproom with preventing spread of flames to the remainder of the former West Point Hotel property yesterday.

Melted by the heat, coils leading to four kegs of beer burst, releasing the beer onto the floor of the taproom. Firemen said they found the floor under an inch of beer when they arrived. The origin of the fire was undetermined.

Wheat Thefts Solved.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Dec. 16.—A series of wheat thefts in Franklin and Adams Counties was cleared up yesterday by State police with the arrest of Roy Daywalt, of Hamiltonban Township, Adams County, who was said to have admitted that he stole 63 bushels of wheat on nine occasions at three farms. He is in Franklin County jail.

Debate Plan Adopted.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Dec. 15.—Principals of Franklin County high schools last night adopted the Oregon State plan of debate for the Franklin County Forensic League, which opens in February. The subject for debate will be: "Resolved, that all electric utilities should be governmentally owned and operated."

Donnelly Winner Of Debate Medal

Georgetown University's highest debating honor was won Tuesday by John C. Donnelly, Michigan senior, who will be awarded the Merrick gold medal which was competed for last night between representatives of the 106 Philodemic Society of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Although selected as the best individual speaker, Donnelly was on the losing affirmative side of question, "Resolved, That the Federal Government should fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry in the United States." His teammate was John W. English of Pennsylvania.

The two young men composing the successful team were Peter J. Brennan, of Illinois, and John M. Dawson, of the District of Columbia. The judges' decision was split.

Rev. Wilfrid J. Parsons, S. J., of Georgetown College; Joseph P. Tumulty and William K. Wimsatt served as a board of judges and Noel R. Ryan was chairman of the debate.

Police Captain Is Found Guilty Of Taking Bootlegger Bribes

Michael J. Harwood, Cleveland Officer, Convicted on Six Counts, Faces Long Prison Term; Will Be Sentenced Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Dec. 16.—Police Capt. Michael J. Harwood was convicted of accepting bribes from bootleggers today and Cleveland's youthful, Government-trained safety director, Eliot Ness, marked up another victory in his campaign to clean up the police department.

Harwood was one of eight policemen indicted by the grand jury recently on charges of soliciting and accepting bribes from bootleggers during prohibition years. Another captain, Louis J. Cadek, previously was convicted on bribery charges.

Harwood took the verdict without a word.

The jury in its verdict found that he accepted bribes from six bootleggers. The once influential captain faced a possible sentence of from six to 60 years.

Ness carried on his investigation of the police department in characteristically Federal fashion. He was absent from his office on secret missions for days at a time. He refused to divulge to anyone what he was doing. When he had completed his investigation he suddenly handed County Prosecutor Frank T. Cullitan a 100-page report telling an amazing story of relations between bootleggers and policemen during the prohibition period.

As a Government agent, Ness harassed Al Capone and his breweries in Chicago unceasingly and cut deeply into Capone's revenue.

Harwood, a veteran of nearly 25 years in the police department, was released under bond of $3,500. He will be sentenced Saturday.

S. S. Champlain Delays Christmas Cruise Date

Sailing of the steamer Champlain on a scheduled Christmas cruise to Nassau, Kingston and Havana has been postponed from December 22 to December 24 at 6 p. m. from New York.

U. S. Appellate Court Reverses Convictions Of Two in TVA Case; Charges Trial Improper

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Ky., Dec. 16.—Charging the attorneys who prosecuted J. E. Pierce and E. H. Roach with misconduct, the Sixth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed today the conviction of the men on charges of having impersonated Federal officers in the sale of "units" in the Tennessee Valley Authority.

It upheld their contention that the TVA act of 1933 created a "corporation that is an entity separate and distinct from the Federal Government and that its employes are not officers or agents of the United States."

The Circuit Court, however, in remanding the case to the lower court for retrial, said it regarded as of "more serious import" the claim of Pierce and Roach that the trial was not conducted fairly and they were not convicted according to the law and the evidence.

"It is quite true that the court ruled correctly upon all objections interposed by the defendants but in most instances the ruling came after the mischief had been done, and it was clearly a case where the misconduct of the prosecutors was neither slight nor confined to a single instance," said the opinion written by Judge Charles C. Simons.

Pierce and Roach were prosecuted by William McClanahan and R. G. Draper. They were convicted in Judge John D. Martin's U. S. District Court for the Western District of Tennessee last December 20.

Judge Martin sentenced Pierce to 12 years in prison and fined him $8,500 and sentenced Roach to five years and a fine of $3,400.

The prosecution contended that Pierce and Roach sold thousands of dollars worth of "units" or "stock" in the TVA Federal power project at $10 each by saying the Government would match contributions of citizens in the community.
